Mrs. Massie Sailed From New York On March 24 For Travel Tour

(International News Service)

GENOA, Italy, Apr. 6.— Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie, divorced wife of Lieut. Thomas Massie and central figure in the famous Honolulu assault and murder case, attempted suicide aboard the liner Roma yesterday, it was learned today.

Mrs. Massie slashed her wrists with a razor blade, inflicting slight wounds. The attempt was made at 1 o'clock yesterday morning.

After her injuries had been treated aboard ship Mrs. Massie was removed from the vessel and taken to a clinic for nervous ailments operated by Prof. Darrio Borrelli. She is now under treatment in the clinic.

Long Mental Strain

Mrs. Massie inflicted only slight cuts in the flesh of her wrists. She did not sever any arteries.

Physicians attributed her act to the long mental strain incident to her recent divorce at Reno, coupled with the still-present effects of her ordeal in Honolulu in 1931.

It was stated at the clinic that she required treatment calculated to bring about a calmer mental state.

An officer of the Roma said Mrs. Massie had appeared normal and happy during the first few days after the ship left New York. She chatted with fellow passengers and was seen often on the decks, apparently enjoying life aboard ship.

Mrs. Massie sailed from New York on March 24 on the Roma in the

Missiles Or Bullets Hit Two Greer Block Offices

Police today are endeavoring to find out whether the offices of the relief works division and the offices of A. L. Thayer in the Greer building on North Mercer street were shot up last night or whether some one sent stones crashing through. Near 8 o'clock Thursday night someone is believed to have fired two shots, one through the RWD offices and one into the Thayer offices.

Lauren Trayer was at his desk when the bullet went through the window. An instant later he heard one go through the window in the RWD offices across the hall.

It would have been impossible to shoot a bullet through the fourth story from the alley. It would have been possible to have done it from the roof of one of the adjoining buildings.

Police are investigating. No trace of bullets could be found inside either office, but a small round stone, of a size used in slingshots, was found in the RWD office this morning.

CALI, Colombia, April 6.—I would not give up and was sure I would pull through.

Approximately at 11 a. m., the plane crashed. Coming through a cloud it struck on the side of a hill.

One passenger was instantly killed. The other passenger received a fractured leg and arm. The pilot, Walter Geck, and the mechanic, Eruft Janke received minor injuries. I was temporarily stunned. I received cuts about my face and other injuries.

The pilot and the mechanic picked up the surviving passenger and myself and carried us to the plane.

Then they left on Sunday morning in an attempt to obtain help.

I was unable to move from my chair in the plane and sat there for two weeks.

After four or five days the other passenger died. I was then alone with two dead bodies.

For two weeks I had nothing to eat and obtained water only a holding a tin outside the plane in the rain.

After two weeks I was unable longer to stand the stench of the decomposing bodies of my dead companions. So I made a supreme effort and succeeded in leaving the plane on March 5.

On March 27 I encountered a group of natives who conducted me down the river. Enroute we encountered the decomposed body of the pilot, Geck.

Status Of Insull's Case Unchanged

Although It Is Visitors' Day At Jail None See The Noted Prisoner

(International News Service)

ISTANBUL, April 6.—Samuel Insull, former ruler of a vast financial realm, spent his first Turkish Sunday in a Turkish jail today while the governments of Turkey and the United States pondered the problem of how to get him back to Chicago to stand trail on indictments growing out of the collapse of his utilities enterprises.

Since today is the day Islam observes as its Sabbath, there was no official activity and the status of Insull's case remained unchanged.

It was visiting day at the detention house in old Stamboul where Insull has been held since he was taken off the Greek ship Maiotis by Turkish police but no visitors came to see the former Chicagoan. Newspaper correspondents, who have been rigidly barred from talking with Insull, tried to use visitors' day as an excuse to gain admittance to the hospital room in which he is confined but stern jailers turned them away.

By May 1, or shortly after that, New Castle's new stone federal building on the diamond will be under roof, George J. Murphy, superintendent-in-charge for A. W. Kutsche & Co., the general contracting firm, predicted this morning.

Mr. Murphy declared that his prediction will come true, unless something unforeseen should develop. The weather still, as it has for the past few months, will be a factor.

Working industriously at the building site today was a force of 35; concrete men, brick masons, steel workers, window erectors and stone setters, all energetically employed and seemingly rushing ahead the work which the frigid winter weather kept them from doing for so long. More are going to work daily.

Practically all of the limestone for the new building has arrived in the local railroad yards, Superintendent Murphy said, and is now being transported to the building as need for it arises.

Installation of the aluminum window frames has commenced and the steel workers are making preparations for placing the roof beams. The stone masons are continuing their work and bricklayers are keeping abreast with the back-up brick work.

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT

MIAMI, April 6.—President Roosevelt, who has already proved himself an anthusiastic traveler, has brought to perfection the art of cleaning up routine work through a central headquarters while himself far away from that clearing house.

Despite the fact the president has been at sea on Vincent Astor's yacht the Nourmahal since Wednesday a week ago, normal white house activities have continued. Today, the Nourmahal lay anchored off Cay Sal, (Salt Key) at the southern end of the Bahamas, but here where white house headquarters have been established, work went on just the same.

Out at sea the fishing luck has improved. The latest bulletin from the Nourmahal told of a catch of many amberjack and of two fish which Astor messaged were handled "especially well" by Kermit Roosevelt, a distant cousin of the president and one of the guests. TO OBSERVE SAME TIME AS INDUSTRY

New Castle's merchants will close their stores at 5 o'clock during the three summer months, it was decided at a meeting held under the auspices of the Merchants Division of the New Castle Chamber of Commerce this morning in the Directors Room.

But nary a chance have I got for it at, I have to get up at the dawn, and putter around with the bushes and shrubs and roll out the lumps in the lawn. Central Figure In Honolulu Case Attempts To End Own Life

Mrs. Massie Sailed From New York On March 24 For Travel Tour

(International News Service)

GENOA, Italy, Apr. 6.— Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie, divorced wife of Lieut. Thomas Massie and central figure in the famous Honolulu assault and murder case, attempted suicide aboard the liner Roma yesterday, it was learned today.

Mrs. Massie slashed her wrists with a razor blade, inflicting slight wounds. The attempt was made at 1 o'clock yesterday morning.

After her injuries had been treated aboard ship Mrs. Massie was removed from the vessel and taken to a clinic for nervous ailments operated by Prof. Darrio Borrelli. She is now under treatment in the clinic.

Long Mental Strain

Mrs. Massie inflicted only slight cuts in the flesh of her wrists. She did not sever any arteries.

Physicians attributed her act to the long mental strain incident to her recent divorce at Reno, coupled with the still-present effects of her ordeal in Honolulu in 1931.

It was stated at the clinic that she required treatment calculated to bring about a calmer mental state.

An officer of the Roma said Mrs. Massie had appeared normal and happy during the first few days after the ship left New York. She chatted with fellow passengers and was seen often on the decks, apparently enjoying life aboard ship.

Mrs. Massie sailed from New York on March 24 on the Roma in the

Missiles Or Bullets Hit Two Greer Block Offices

Police today are endeavoring to find out whether the offices of the relief works division and the offices of A. L. Thayer in the Greer building on North Mercer street were shot up last night or whether some one sent stones crashing through. Near 8 o'clock Thursday night someone is believed to have fired two shots, one through the RWD offices and one into the Thayer offices.

Lauren Trayer was at his desk when the bullet went through the window. An instant later he heard one go through the window in the RWD offices across the hall.

It would have been impossible to shoot a bullet through the fourth story from the alley. It would have been possible to have done it from the roof of one of the adjoining buildings.

Police are investigating. No trace of bullets could be found inside either office, but a small round stone, of a size used in slingshots, was found in the RWD office this morning.

CALI, Colombia, April 6.—I would not give up and was sure I would pull through.

Approximately at 11 a. m., the plane crashed. Coming through a cloud it struck on the side of a hill.

One passenger was instantly killed. The other passenger received a fractured leg and arm. The pilot, Walter Geck, and the mechanic, Eruft Janke received minor injuries. I was temporarily stunned. I received cuts about my face and other injuries.

The pilot and the mechanic picked up the surviving passenger and myself and carried us to the plane.

Then they left on Sunday morning in an attempt to obtain help.

I was unable to move from my chair in the plane and sat there for two weeks.

After four or five days the other passenger died. I was then alone with two dead bodies.

For two weeks I had nothing to eat and obtained water only a holding a tin outside the plane in the rain.

After two weeks I was unable longer to stand the stench of the decomposing bodies of my dead companions. So I made a supreme effort and succeeded in leaving the plane on March 5.

On March 27 I encountered a group of natives who conducted me down the river. Enroute we encountered the decomposed body of the pilot, Geck.

I am feeling well and we expect

Status Of Insull's Case Unchanged

Although It Is Visitors' Day At Jail None See The Noted Prisoner

(International News Service)

ISTANBUL, April 6.—Samuel Insull, former ruler of a vast financial realm, spent his first Turkish Sunday in a Turkish jail today while the governments of Turkey and the United States pondered the problem of how to get him back to Chicago to stand trail on indictments growing out of the collapse of his utilities enterprises.

Since today is the day Islam observes as its Sabbath, there was no official activity and the status of Insull's case remained unchanged.

It was visiting day at the detention house in old Stamboul where Insull has been held since he was taken off the Greek ship Maiotis by Turkish police but no visitors came to see the former Chicagoan. Newspaper correspondents, who have been rigidly barred from talking with Insull, tried to use visitors' day as an excuse to gain admittance to the hospital room in which he is confined but stern jailers turned them away.

Post Office To Be Under Roof Early In May

Federal Job Speeded; Workers Go Back; Weather Favorable

MAY FIND EDIFICE OPEN IN SEPTEMBER

By May 1, or shortly after that, New Castle's new stone federal building on the diamond will be under roof, George J. Murphy, superintendent-in-charge for A. W. Kutsche & Co., the general contracting firm, predicted this morning.

Mr. Murphy declared that his prediction will come true, unless something unforeseen should develop. The weather still, as it has for the past few months, will be a factor.

Activity Seen Again.

Working industriously at the building site today was a force of 35; concrete men, brick masons, steel workers, window erectors and stone setters, all energetically employed and seemingly rushing ahead the work which the frigid winter weather kept them from doing for so long. More are going to work daily.

Practically all of the limestone for the new building has arrived in the local railroad yards, Superintendent Murphy said, and is now being transported to the building as need for it arises.

Installation of the aluminum window frames has commenced and the steel workers are making preparations for placing the roof beams. The stone masons are continuing their work and bricklayers are keeping abreast with the back-up brick work.

Construction Engineer Miles E. Myers, making his April 1 report to his headquarters, showed the build-

Democrats Seek To Limit Testimony To Naming Of "Brain Trusters"

REPUBLICANS WANT GREATER LATITUDE

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The house committee named to investigate charges of Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary (Ind.) educator, against "brain trusters" was enmeshed in a partisan quarrel today as the committee awaited word from Dr. Wirt on its request for his testimony next Tuesday.

Charging the Democratic majority on the committee was seeking to prevent a full disclosure of activities of the "brain trust," Republican members planned to insist on their proposal for a broad inquiry.

In reply Democratic members declared that the only question to be considered was whether "brain trusters" told Dr. Wirt of a plan to overthrow the present social order.

Ask Dr. Wirt To Appear.

Chairman Bulwinkle (D) of North Carolina, of the committee, who telegraphed Dr. Wirt asking him to accept the telegram as a subpoena to appear here Tuesday, was expecting a reply today.

Although one telegram was received from Dr. Wirt yesterday asking for a copy of the congressional resolution and ten days time in which to prepare a statement, another telegram from Dr. Wirt's wife said he was not in the city.

Both Reps. Lehlbach (R) of New Jersey and McGugin (R) of Kansas, the Republican minority, insisted that Dr. Wirt be given an opportunity to make a prepared statement before the committee begins its examination.

The plan of the Democratic majority was to immediately demand that Dr. Wirt name the "brain trusters" and detail their conversation. Any "brain trusters" named would then be summoned.

The committee was prepared to subpoena Dr. Wirt if he declined to appear voluntarily. A special deputy sergeant-at-arms may be sent to Gary if the educator insists upon further delay.

hope that in travel she could forget—forget one of the most brutal tragedies to come to public attention in this century, a tragedy in which she had been the central figure.

The furor over her attack by five natives in Honolulu in September, 1931, who beat her brutally, broke her jaw and left her in a condition that only an operation could correct, becames a cause celebre after an Island jury had refused to convict the men accused and her husband and mother-in-law kidnapped one of their number who was killed in their charge.

The last incident in the tragedy had been her divorce in Reno on February 23 from Lieut. Thomas Massie. Immediately after the divorce occurred she was placed under the care of physicians and it was reported then that she had attempted suicide but the reports were denied.

"I want it clearly understood," she had told the press when leaving for Reno, "that I am applying for a divorce to comply with the wishes of Lieutenant Massie, not my own."

Democrats Seek To Limit Testimony To Naming Of "Brain Trusters"

REPUBLICANS WANT GREATER LATITUDE

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The house committee named to investigate charges of Dr. William A. Wirt, Gary (Ind.) educator, against "brain trusters" was enmeshed in a partisan quarrel today as the committee awaited word from Dr. Wirt on its request for his testimony next Tuesday.

Charging the Democratic majority on the committee was seeking to prevent a full disclosure of activities of the "brain trust," Republican members planned to insist on their proposal for a broad inquiry.

In reply Democratic members declared that the only question to be considered was whether "brain trusters" told Dr. Wirt of a plan to overthrow the present social order.

Ask Dr. Wirt To Appear.

Chairman Bulwinkle (D) of North Carolina, of the committee, who telegraphed Dr. Wirt asking him to accept the telegram as a subpoena to appear here Tuesday, was expecting a reply today.

Although one telegram was received from Dr. Wirt yesterday asking for a copy of the congressional resolution and ten days time in which to prepare a statement, another telegram from Dr. Wirt's wife said he was not in the city.

Both Reps. Lehlbach (R) of New Jersey and McGugin (R) of Kansas, the Republican minority, insisted that Dr. Wirt be given an opportunity to make a prepared statement before the committee begins its examination.

The plan of the Democratic majority was to immediately demand that Dr. Wirt name the "brain trusters" and detail their conversation. Any "brain trusters" named would then be summoned.

The committee was prepared to subpoena Dr. Wirt if he declined to appear voluntarily. A special deputy sergeant-at-arms may be sent to Gary if the educator insists upon further delay.

Although one telegram was received from Dr. Wirt yesterday asking for a copy of the congressional resolution and ten days time in which to prepare a statement, another telegram from Dr. Wirt's wife said he was not in the city.

Both Reps. Lehlbach (R) of New Jersey and McGugin (R) of Kansas, the Republican minority, insisted that Dr. Wirt be given an opportunity to make a prepared statement before the committee begins its examination.

The plan of the Democratic majority was to immediately demand that Dr. Wirt name the "brain trusters" and detail their conversation. Any "brain trusters" named would then be summoned.

The committee was prepared to subpoena Dr. Wirt if he declined to appear voluntarily. A special deputy sergeant-at-arms may be sent to Gary if the educator insists upon further delay.

MRS. MASSIE TRIES SUICIDE ON LINER

hope that in travel she could forget—forget one of the most brutal tragedies to come to public attention in this century, a tragedy in which she had been the central figure.

The furor over her attack by five natives in Honolulu in September, 1931, who beat her brutally, broke her jaw and left her in a condition that only an operation could correct, becames a cause celebre after an Island jury had refused to convict the men accused and her husband and mother-in-law kidnapped one of their number who was killed in their charge.

The last incident in the tragedy had been her divorce in Reno on February 23 from Lieut. Thomas Massie. Immediately after the divorce occurred she was placed under the care of physicians and it was reported then that she had attempted suicide but the reports were denied.

"I want it clearly understood," she had told the press when leaving for Reno, "that I am applying for a divorce to comply with the wishes of Lieutenant Massie, not my own."

No Confirmation Here

WASHINGTON, April 6—Reports that Mrs. Thalia Massie, central figure in the Hawaiian "honor slaying" case several years ago, has attempted suicide while on a ship at Genoa, Italy, were without immediate confirmation here today.

Reporters who attempted to contact her uncle. Robert Bell, were told that "Mr. Bell is out walking." Telephoned inquiries to his residence were met with the statement that "we have had no direct word concerning the reports."

Garden Clubs Of County Urge More Civic Beauty

Lawrence county will be one of the most desirable locations in Western Pennsylvania in which to live, if the program on Conservation as outlined at the quarterly meeting of the Lawrence County Garden club with its affiliate organizations, Thursday afternoon in the Y. W. C. A. is carried out with as much enthusiasm as was evidenced at the meeting.

Some seventy-five members of the various clubs were in attendance, representatives being present from the six branches including East Brook, New Bedford, North Beaver, Mahoningtown, West Side and East Side clubs in addition to members of the head organization.

Unsightly advertising on waste baskets, which are enough of a "clutter" in themselves to blot out what might otherwise be beauty spots (were they not so necessary) will, disappear, it is hoped, as a result of the meeting, and another effort worthy of mention, in that it is the theme of this year's Conservation program sponsored by the state federation, is that of conserving the beautiful dogwood trees wherever possible.

Efforts will be made to have persons having dogwood on their property, invoke the trespass law and placard their property with "No Trespassing" signs.

The meeting proper was presided over by C. Alan Ingals, president, with the program in charge of Mrs. S. D. Pearson, Chairman of Conservation of the Southwest District of the State Federation of Women's clubs, and Mrs. Albert P. Troser.

After repeating the creed, Mrs. Pearson, aiming to have each of the clubs participate in the program, conducted a question symposium, different representatives contributing.

The North Beaver club was represented by Mrs. J. W. Brewster and Mrs. J. W. Fullerton, who spoke briefly on "Roadside Beautification."

Mrs. George Glass and Mrs. Paul Allen of the West Side club, outlined the two trespass laws in Pennsylvania and spoke of flowering trees and wild flowers in urgent need of protection.

For East Brook, Mrs. S. A. Black and Mrs. V. D. Johns gave interesting descriptions of "Birds" and their sanctuaries.

"Backyard Gardens" was the topic assigned the East Side club. In the brief three minutes allotted them, Mrs. C. A. Brenner and Mrs. Leonard Cramer told of perennial and rose cultivation and soil changes.

Mahoningtown club was ably represented by Mrs. C. H. Clark, who played and sang Carrie Jacob Bond's "Just a Wearyin' for You."

New Bedford club had for its subject, "Flowers," with Mrs. Colin Campbell, Mrs. George Dieter and Mrs. Lee Sagabiel outlining benefits resulting from flower shows, awards and information on what to do with plants after blooming in the house.

Being hosts, the Lawrence County Garden club, had as its representative, Mrs. W. C. Eckenroad as the last speaker. In an informative 15-minute discourse, Mrs. Eckenroad brought out the practical value of work accomplished in the Conservation camps. In concluding, she answered the question, "What Is New Castle's Greatest Civic Asset?"

Of course, to Garden clubs, the answer is obvious—"Its Parks." She outlined the decided improvements made possible through CWA work the past few years in Gaston, Cascade, Cunningham and more recently, Gunton park, on the North Hill.

Preceding this very excellent program, a delicious buffet luncheon was served, over which Mrs. C. S. Royce presided as hostess, with Mrs. B. K. Thacker and Mrs. W. C. Mechem assisting.

Ordinarily, this should have been mentioned first as it served "to break the ice"—so to speak—which resulted in delightful informality, and made the meeting so successful.

However, as "newspaper style" is to feature "high-points" first—and that takes us back to the waste basket and dogwood problems—we relate it in conclusion.

One long table was handsomely appointed with an exquisite Italian cut work banquet cloth and as a centerpiece, a lovely bowl of spring blooms in pink, yellow and white, intermingled with greenery, was used.

Seated before beautiful silver tea services were Mrs. Ingals and Mrs. Eckenroad. Large platters of tempting sandwiches and other "appetizers" attracted immediate attention and after serving themselves, the guests formed into various groups.

Sharing in the afternoon's pleasures, in addition to the visiting club guests, was Mrs. J. A. Edgar of The News.

Sometime in July, another County Day will be held at New Bedford and plans are already being formulated to make this event as outstanding as the one held yesterday in New Castle.

JUNIOR WOMAN'S CLUB HEARS GOOD REVIEWS

Junior Woman's Club met Thursday evening in the Winter avenue home of Mrs. William Margraff and enjoyed an interesting program.

Miss Ruth Sample, the president presided and excellent reviews of "Best Plays of 1933" were given by Miss Belle Offutt and Miss Gertrude Chapin. A splendid review of the book "Marie Antoinette" was presented by Miss Elizabeth Wallace.

After the program, Mrs. Grace Crawford, club sponsor, conducted a parliamentary drill.

Plans were discussed for a repitition of the Marionette show which was offered as the Junior club's program before the Senior club Monday evening in Highland U. P. church.

At the next meeting April 19 at the home of Miss Margaret Gay of North Liberty street, "Guest Night" will be observed. A speaker will be secured for the program which will also feature other surprises.

BRIDGE PARTY IS WELL ATTENDED

Continuing the series of Thursday evening bridge parties which have attracted a large number of society folks throughout the winter at the New Castle Field Club, was the Easter week party held last evening.

Mr. and Mrs. James L. Evans were hosts for the occasion which was particularly well attended by the usual crowd, this number being augmented by several new members of the club and other folks visiting in town.

Concluding the bridge games, lovely prizes were awarded to Mr. and Mrs. James B. Matthews, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. K. C. Steele, Mr. and Mrs. M. R. Broadhurst. At a late hour, light refreshments were served.

There will be a similar party on April 19, with Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Duff hosts.

Jolly Twelve Club

Mrs. Charles Gardner of East Brook, entertained the Jolly 12 club Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. H. B. McConnell on Round street. There was a good attendance and Mrs. Gertrude Pontius presided over the business session after which cards featured. Prizes were won by Mrs. Frank Myers and Mrs. D. T. Andrews.

Later, a dainty luncheon in yellow and white was served, the hostess being assisted by her daughter, Miss Bertha Gardner, who was a special guest.

On April 19, the club will meet with Mrs. Charles Riney of Superior street.

A. G. P. Club

Miss Eleanor Dean was a visitor at the A. G. P. assembly Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. J. C. Rhodabaugh on Wilmington avenue.

Avenues of entertainment included a delicious dinner at noon with games of 500 and music following. High score awards were won by Mrs. William Dean and Miss Eleanor Dean.

In two weeks the club will meet with Mrs. Howard Robinson of Walnut street.

Miss Elizabeth McGowan of Lyndal street will be hostess to the club at the next meeting.

Garden Clubs Of County Urge More Civic Beauty

Lawrence county will be one of the most desirable locations in Western Pennsylvania in which to live, if the program on Conservation as outlined at the quarterly meeting of the Lawrence County Garden club with its affiliate organizations, Thursday afternoon in the Y. W. C. A. is carried out with as much enthusiasm as was evidenced at the meeting.

Some seventy-five members of the various clubs were in attendance, representatives being present from the six branches including East Brook, New Bedford, North Beaver, Mahoningtown, West Side and East Side clubs in addition to members of the head organization.

Unsightly advertising on waste baskets, which are enough of a "clutter" in themselves to blot out what might otherwise be beauty spots (were they not so necessary) will, disappear, it is hoped, as a result of the meeting, and another effort worthy of mention, in that it is the theme of this year's Conservation program sponsored by the state federation, is that of conserving the beautiful dogwood trees wherever possible.

Efforts will be made to have persons having dogwood on their property, invoke the trespass law and placard their property with "No Trespassing" signs.

The meeting proper was presided over by C. Alan Ingals, president, with the program in charge of Mrs. S. D. Pearson, Chairman of Conservation of the Southwest District of the State Federation of Women's clubs, and Mrs. Albert P. Treser.

After repeating the creed, Mrs. Pearson, aiming to have each of the clubs participate in the program, conducted a question symposium, different representatives contributing.

The North Beaver club was represented by Mrs. J. W. Brewster and Mrs. J. W. Fullerton, who spoke briefly on "Roadside Beautification."

Mrs. George Glass and Mrs. Paul Allen of the West Side club, outlined the two trespass laws in Pennsylvania and spoke of flowering trees and wild flowers in urgent need of protection.

For East Brook, Mrs. S. A. Black and Mrs. V. D. Johns gave interesting descriptions of "Birds" and their sanctuaries.

"Backyard Gardens" was the topic assigned the East Side club. In the brief three minutes allotted them, Mrs. C. A. Brenner and Mrs. Leonard Cramer told of perennial and rose cultivation and soil changes.

Mahoningtown club was ably represented by Mrs. C. H. Clark, who played and sang Carrie Jacob Bond's "Just a Wearyin' for You."

New Bedford club had for its subject, "Flowers," with Mrs. Colin Campbell, Mrs. George Dieter and Mrs. Lee Sagabiel outlining benefits resulting from flower shows, awards and information on what to do with plants after blooming in the house.

Being hosts, the Lawrence County Garden club, had as its representative, Mrs. W. C. Eckenroad as the last speaker. In an informative 15-minute discourse, Mrs. Eckenroad brought out the practical value of work accomplished in the Conservation camps. In concluding, she answered the question, "What Is New Castle's Greatest Civic Asset?"

Of course, to Garden clubs, the answer is obvious—"Its Parks." She outlined the decided improvements made possible through CWA work the past few years in Gaston, Cascade, Cunningham and more recently, Gunton park, on the North Hill.

Preceding this very excellent program, a delicious buffet luncheon was served, over which Mrs. C. S. Royce presided as hostess, with Mrs. B. K. Thacker and Mrs. W. C. Mechem assisting.

Ordinarily, this should have been mentioned first as it served "to break the ice"—so to speak—which resulted in delightful informality, and made the meeting so successful.

However, as "newspaper style" is to feature "high-points" first—and that takes us back to the waste basket and dogwood problems—we relate it in conclusion.

One long table was handsomely appointed with an exquisite Italian cut work banquet cloth and as a centerpiece, a lovely bowl of spring blooms in pink, yellow and white, intermingled with greenery, was used.

Seated before beautiful silver tea services were Mrs. Ingals and Mrs. Eckenroad. Large platters of tempting sandwiches and other "appetizers" attracted immediate attention and after serving themselves, the guests formed into various groups.

Sharing in the afternoon's pleasures, in addition to the visiting club guests, was Mrs. J. A. Edgar of The News.

Sometime in July, another County Day will be held at New Bedford and plans are already being formulated to make this event as outstanding as the one held yesterday in New Castle.

After the program, Mrs. Grace Crawford, club sponsor, conducted a parliamentary drill.

Plans were discussed for a repitition of the Marionette show which was offered as the Junior club's program before the Senior club Monday evening in Highland U. P. church.

At the next meeting April 19 at the home of Miss Margaret Gay of North Liberty street, "Guest Night" will be observed. A speaker will be secured for the program which will also feature other surprises.

Miss Frances Sheridan entertained the Blue Eagle club Thursday evening in the home of Mrs. Robert Burns. Mrs. Leona Smith was the fortunate winner of both prizes, card and club favors, and serving lunch at a late hour, Mrs. Burns assisted.

Wednesday of next week the club will entertain the husbands at a party in the home of Mrs. Bertha Keinast on Park way.

On April 26 the hostess for the regular club meeting will be Mrs. Anna Murray of West North street.

ANNUAL DINNER WILL BE ENJOYED MONDAY

Ladies of the Grand Army are completing plans for their annual dinner in the city building at 12:00 o'clock Monday, April 9, to which the veterans of the civil war, their wives or widows have been invited as special guests.

PUBLIC OPINION WINS

IT IS generally admitted that an aroused public opinion can accomplish wonders.

That's what such a public opinion did to Chicago's notorious list of "public enemies."

Back in 1930, Chicago was the center of perhaps the worst gangland activities this nation has ever witnessed. Machine gun slayings were daily occurrences. Legitimate business stood in unholy fear of racketeering leeches. The lives of innocent citizens were unsafe.

But now, several dozen of the most prominent names on the original list are in prison serving long terms, including Al Capone, Terry Druggen and such more recently well known names as Basil Banghart, Roger Touhy and the three Dillinger henchmen convicted of shooting an Ohio sheriff.

John Dillinger heads the present list of fugitives, all of whom are giving Chicago's aroused public opinion a wide berth.

And just as soon as the same type of public opinion pervades other cities, these thugs will be forced away from them, rounded up and put behind the bars for good and all.

THE OCEAN'S GOLD

How to rob the ocean of the virtually unlimited amounts of gold contained in its waters has been a question that long has challenged scientists and stirred the imagination of others.

Chemists have brought their test tubes and other implements of their trade to bear upon the problem in endless array. But to date no practical method has been found—no method the cost of which would not be many times the value of the gold extracted.

The stubbornness of the problem, however, has not deterred those who sought its solution, either with the aim of personal profit and wealth in view or solely as a scientific achievement.

Now comes what seems to be the first real hope that success lies over the horizon. Announcement was made before the American Chemical society that sufficient progress has been made in developing a recovery process to justify the prediction that within a comparatively short while, perhaps another decade, the secret will have been found. Among the things with which the chemists buttress their forecast is the fact that some of the valuable elements contained in sea water already are being extracted on a commercial basis.

It may be too early to speculate on what will happen to the world's monetary systems when the ocean finally is tapped for its gold. Most of the nations now are off the gold standard but buying and selling continue—and the demand for gold never was so great. But if unlimited quantities should become suddenly available, harassing complications would arise and monetary and economic systems would be upset.

FORCING CROP REDUCTIONS

Those Americans who complacently believe there is nothing in this talk about regimentation of industry, and who refuse to believe that we are in the midst of a revolution of sorts, ought to learn something by watching the progress of the Bankhead cotton bill which was recently passed by the national House of Representatives.

The bill comprises a new effort to restrict the raising of cotton by governmental compulsion. The day of begging the cotton farmer, or paying him to reduce his cotton crop is evidently about over. The next effort will be to compell him to restrict the crop by law. So does paternalism grow when once introduced into government.

First came the effort to induce the American farmer to cut the size of his crops by persuasion, through a campaign of education. When this didn't work, the government, under the New Deal, started in to pay him to be good. Millions were paid to the agriculturists to reduce their cotton, wheat and other crops, and the government spent additional millions in buying up and destroying spring pigs. But even this didn't work. The government cannot go on spending money indefinitely to pay the farmers to reduce their crops. Persuasion, both verbal and monetary, have failed to work.

If the system is to be continued, the government must now step in with a stern parental hand and "make" the farmers cut down on their production. It is true that the Bankhead bill is only to operate for two years and that it applies only to cotton, but paternalism has a way of growing rapidly once it is introduced, and who knows what will follow, once the camel has his nose under the tent?

The theory behind the cotton reduction program is that if the American farmers will reduce their crop of cotton for a year or two, the big surplus will be gotten rid of and the price of the staple will rise. But a great many people believe that there is a flaw in the logic. Large quantities of cotton are exported and the price in our market depends on the world price. Now, the world price depends on supply and demand. If the other cotton producing countries would cut their crops as America does, something might be done along the line of reducing the supply.

But unfortunately this will not be the case. Already we are getting stories that Egypt, Russia and other countries which produce cotton, learning of the imminent crop reduction in America, are preparing to increase their crops of the staple during the next year or two. Therefore the African and Asiatic cotton grower is apt to profit while the American farmer loses.

The experience of Great Britain with the curtailment of rubber production a few years ago is a case in point. When British rubber production was restricted, other rubber producting coountries increased their crops until there was greater over-production than ever, and prices went to the sub-cellar.

But the worst thing about the enforced cotton production plan is not the possibility that it will not work. It now would seem to indicate that we are confronted with a new program of government control. If Uncle Sam can tell the farmer he must raise only so much cotton, wheat and hogs, how long will it be until he will want to tell all of us where and how much we must work, how much we shall receive and just what we ought to eat and wear?

It's the winners and not the losers whose names are seen in connection with lotteries.

If all these back-to-the land movements succeed, most of our cities soon may be depopulated.

Now that the Filipinos have prospective independence, they are beginning to wonder what to do with it.

An Englishman suggests the addition of four letters to the alphabet. Apparently he would prepare his country for adoption of America's alphabetical new deal.

WE CIRCULATE

As air circulates through the houses of men, as water circulates through pipes and tunnels and from the sea to the heavens and back again, so, too, do the deeds of men circulate in the hearts of their brothers.

A man never knows how an act of his, be it great or trivial, may influence the life of another man. . . . One man walks smiling down the street. Another man sees that smile and is heatened. Another man sees and is filled with rage that one human being should be joyous when he is so sore of heart . . . You falter and fall and I am cast down, too. Or you fail and I say to myself, "I shall redouble my energies and succeed."

One man's hypocrite. He is supposed to be a good man, and his hypocrisy embitters those to whom it is known. . . . But there are those who do not know his hypocrisy. They listen to his fair words and are lifted up, heartened by the strength he preaches. . . . They say we always know when another is sincere. In general, I think that's true, but I know it is not always true and sometimes even hypocrisy accomplishes real things in this world.

An ambitious man may fight hard and long, even unscrupulously, to attain his ends. He gains them and relaxes. He has reached a high position and honors and is given as an example to other young men. . . . The young men know nothing of any wrongs he may have committeed. They see only that this man who climbed so high rose from obscurity, poverty, ignorance, to eminence, riches and dignity. They say, "If he, without help, was able to do that, then why should not we do the same?"

Our lives are so interwoven, our deeds are so flush with the deeds of other men, living or gone, that it is hardly possible to say where one life ends and another begins. No man is just himself. Every man is many other men. What I do becomes a part of other men. What they do, circulates through time and space in the influence they have on other people, and becomes a part of me. . . . So our lives circulate in the lives of other men and we cannot evade the responsibility of our acts.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

ANOTHER ONE

It used to be fish stories. Now it is the airmen who tell the big yarns.

Flying at night between St. Louis and Indianapolis, Indiana, H. H. Gallup, divisional superintendent of a transcontinental air line, suddenly saw a great light flash on behind him. At first he thought it was another plane but the blinding light and trail of fire behind it soon convinced him it was a meteor.

It passed about 300 yards below Gallup's plane. Soon afterward the meteor exploded but Gallup declares he heard no noise nor did he feel the concussion which usually follows such explosions.

"All I felt beside the blinding light," said Gallup, "was an odd sensation which made me think the world was coming to an end."

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

Are you "just, before you are generous?"

Do you make liberal donations to different funds, so large that your family is required to undergo hardships before you can meet your subscriptions?

Many men make large contributions for the sake of favorable comment.

They cannot afford so much: but they are willing to subject their families to conditions they should never be called upon to endure.

There is a constant demand, at home, that expenses be reduced but to a stranger there always is an appearance of generosity on the part of the head of the house when someone outside the family makes a request for money.

This is especially true when contributions are solicited by persons of importance and prominence.

Families should expect to make some sacrifices, to help those less fortunate.

But they should not be expected to submit to hardships in order that the man of the house may make a good fellow of himself.

Such men are surprisingly numerous.

Where peonies and pansies bloom:
A music hall where all day long,
Birds fill the sheltered nook with song.

A garden is a magic space
Where miracles are taking place
And nature out of leafy mold
Produce phlox and marigold.

A garden is a gallery gay,
With lovely pictures on display;
A church where stately lilies nod
And men draw very close to God.

McGUFFEY SHRINE

A saga of the growth of the American public school system is found in a recently established shrine to the McGuffey brothers in Oxford, Ohio. William H. and Alexander McGuffey are membered from the days of the "Little Red Schoolhouse" era as authors of the McGuffey Readers, used for 75 years as text books from the first to the sixth grade.

The first "McGuffey Eclectic Readers" appeared in 1836 and were edited by William H. McGuffey, who was 16 years his brother's senior. The elder McGuffey was well-known as one of the nation's leading educators, having occupied chairs at Miami and Ohio universities, Woodward college in Cincinnati and the University of Virginia. Alexander McGuffey, while a well-known attorney, contributed to the readers in his leisure time, collaborating with his brother.

The McGuffeys believed their books should be character-building as well as educational, teaching patriotism, honesty, industry, temperance, courage, politeness and other virtues. Many will recall the story of George Washington and the cherry tree and the "snow dog" of Mount St. Bernard.

Among the exhibits at the McGuffey shrine, is the study table used by the elder McGuffey, his spectacles, his bed with old-fashioned cor-husk mattress, bits of fancy work done by Mrs. McGuffey and the old bell that summoned to classes the students of Female College, now the Western College for Women.

William H. McGuffey died in 1873, aged 79 years, while Alexander died in 1896, aged 80 years. Neither brother lived to see the new McGuffey Readers, which appeared in 1901 and are still used in some elementary schools.

Inflation Bobs Up Again
Steady Flow Of Old Gold
Rockefeller Pushes Ahead

By LESLIE EICHEL
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, April 6.—European sources again fear that the United States is heading toward currency inflation. Those sources say that the farmer and the "small man" will demand inflation to meet rising costs—and that, then, the "vicious cycle" will begin.

* * *

Persons with old gold are pouring the precious metal into assay offices.

One woman who thought she would realize $3.50 found that under the presidentially stipulated price she received $13.50. (It all depends on weight of the pure metal.)

Any reputable jeweler can attend to the transaction.

Millions of dollars worth of the metal has come via mail. The loss has been virtually nil, postoffice department men say.

Jewelers report and increase in business since it has become patriotic to turn in gold. Persons being paid for old gold seldom walk out without first buying something else.

* * *

ROCKEFELLER SPIRIT

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is going ahead with Rockefeller Center at a rapid pace. Two more exhibit buildings are being erected—and the foundation is dug for another structure, perhaps still another office building.

The Rockefeller Center buildings are said to be approximately 75 per cent rented. Rockefeller interests have holdings in many companies. Those companies found it "advisable" to move to Rockefeller Center, Rockefeller took care of their leases.

One of the new exhibition buildings is for Italy. The other was to be for Germany, until the Nazi trouble arose—then the Soviet made a bid for it. But now it seems the Germans have outbid the Russians. The British and the French buildings already are occupied.

UNDER EMPLOYMENT

Guests at some of the hotels (of course, not all) in New York are complaining of lack of help.

One guest relates to this column: "When I found my room wasn't even cleaned by afternoon, I searched for a maid. Poor thing—she had the whole floor to clean, where two formerly did the work."

The president usually laughs at news rumors from Wall Street, when reporters question him.

TODAY Is The Day

By CLARK KINNAIRD Copyright 1934 Central Press

FRIDAY, APRIL 6

History's Great Days—April 6, 1199—Richard Plantagenet, the Lion-Hearted, whose subjects had paid a fortune for his ransom when he was a captive in Austria, was killed in France by an arrow in a squabble with a petty noble over a few hundred pounds.

His heart was buried in Rouen, the city he loved more than London; his entrails at Chalun, the rest of his body at Fontevrault at the foot of his father whom he had betrayed. His "lion heart", dried and shriveled into pea-size, is exposed upon a paper with a label, in a museum, for the gratification of the curious!

England did not miss him. Though he was born there, was her king for 10 years, and was 42 when he died, he did not spend a full twelvemonth in The Island in all his life, and could not speak English.

Tradition associates his name with the leadership of the Crusades. Actually, he participated only in the Third Crusade, and was taken captive returning from it.

April 6, 1348—Laura de Noves, wife of Hugh de Sade and mother of 11, died at the age of 44, at Avignon. True to her husband, she returned the passionate advances of Francesco Petrarch, great Italian poet, with indifference, and was made an immortal by the despairing sonnets he addressed to her.

Petrarch tells us it was 6 a. m. April 6, 1327, that he first saw her in the church of the nuns of St. Clara and fell in love with her; and it was the same hour of the same day, 1348, that she died of the plague.

For 36 years thereafter Petrarch nurtured his memory of her in a shrine wherein "He had nothing to employ him but the recollection of her charms and the imagination of her perfections." Excerpt from Petrarchian sonnet to Laura:

For virtue only find eternal Fame.

April 6 1866—First G. A. R. (Grand Army of Republic) post was established at Decatur, Ill., by Dr. B. F. Stephenson, surgeon, and Rev. W. J. Rutledge, chaplain, of the 14th Illinois infantry. Posts increased by hundreds, soon had more than 500,000 members. But the organization nearly collapsed in 1866, when it was suspected it was being used in support of Grant's presidential campaign.

April 6, 1908—A U. S. navy officer wrote in his diary: "The pole at last. The prize of three centuries. My dream and goal for 20 years. Mine at last. I cannot bring myself to realize it. It seems so simple and commonplace."

Thus did Robert E. Peary record his discovery of the North Pole. Five men were with the admiral that day—the Eskimos Ootah, Ooquah, Seelo and Eginwah, and Matthew A. Henson. Peary's negro guide and his companion on all his arctic expeditions. The latter is the only one who lives today. Fame and fortune have been bestowed upon many less-er lights who ventured into the polar regions by air or sledge but not even a medal has been given Matthew A. Henson.

April 6, 1917—At 1:31 p. m., the United States began making the world safe for democracy, and threw itself into the war to end wars.

The first American shot was to be fired 13 days later when the naval gun crew of the S. S. Magnolia directed shells at an enemy submarine. The vessel submerged, left no traces of a hit.

First troops were landed in France 81 days later, and first doughboys did not go into the trenches more than 28 weeks after the declaration of war!

Finds Women Equal Of Men In General Intelligence

(International News Service)

LONDON—Women the whole world over may now hold their heads high and scornfully say of mere man "I am in no way inferior to you in average intelligence."

Man may be astonished and even greatly annoyed, but for their authority women have done other than Dr. Cyril Burt, professor of psychology, University College, London.

Modern psychological tests for men and women have been applied the whole world over, Dr. Burt told students when lecturing on "The Psychology of the Sexes" and there is practically no difference between the sexes in mental capacity.

"The simples test," Dr. Burt said "is with mathematical dividers. On the forearm a man can generally distinguish two pricks with the instrument's point as separate if they are about two inches apart. Woman are about twice as sensitive

Although women were so interested in cooking and perfumes, he said, and were quicker at tasting and smelling men were better at detecting subtle differences with nose or palate.

"In sight there are some curious divergences again. There are more women than men both short and long-sighted and far more women than men have to wear glasses.

"But only one woman in a thousand is color blind. Among males, although they do not know it, about one in 30 is color blind."

Men, he said, won on speed of action, but there were fewer women who were left-handed, stammered, or suffered from a squint.

"Of memory," Dr. Burt continued "we can speak with absolute certainty. The average girl or woman is better than the men."

Of emotion, Professor Burt said that women "make it capitals and thought in italics." But perhaps, he added, this was because it was what they were expected to do.

PUBLIC OPINION WINS

IT IS generally admitted that an aroused public opinion can accomplish wonders.

That's what such a public opinion did to Chicago's notorious list of "public enemies."

Back in 1930, Chicago was the center of perhaps the worst gangland activities this nation has ever witnessed. Machine gun slayings were daily occurrences. Legitimate business stood in unholy fear of racketeering leeches. The lives of innocent citizens were unsafe.

But now, several dozen of the most prominent names on the original list are in prison serving long terms, including Al Capone, Terry Druggen and such more recently well known names as Basil Banghart, Roger Touhy and the three Dillinger henchmen convicted of shooting an Ohio sheriff.

John Dillinger heads the present list of fugitives, all of whom are giving Chicago's aroused public opinion a wide berth.

And just as soon as the same type of public opinion pervades other cities, these thugs will be forced away from them, rounded up and put behind the bars for good and all.

THE OCEAN'S GOLD

How to rob the ocean of the virtually unlimited amounts of gold contained in its waters has been a question that long has challenged scientists and stirred the imagination of others.

Chemists have brought their test tubes and other implements of their trade to bear upon the problem in endless array. But to date no practical method has been found—no method the cost of which would not be many times the value of the gold extracted.

The stubbornness of the problem, however, has not deterred those who sought its solution, either with the aim of personal profit and wealth in view or solely as a scientific achievement.

Now comes what seems to be the first real hope that success lies over the horizon. Announcement was made before the American Chemical society that sufficient progress has been made in developing a recovery process to justify the prediction that within a comparatively short while, perhaps another decade, the secret will have been found. Among the things with which the chemists buttress their forecast is the fact that some of the valuable elements contained in sea water already are being extracted on a commercial basis.

It may be too early to speculate on what will happen to the world's monetary systems when the ocean finally is tapped for its gold. Most of the nations now are off the gold standard but buying and selling continue—and the demand for gold never was so great. But if unlimited quantities should become suddenly available, harassing complications would arise and monetary and economic systems would be upset.

FORCING CROP REDUCTIONS

Those Americans who complacently believe there is nothing in this talk about regimentation of industry, and who refuse to believe that we are in the midst of a revolution of sorts, ought to learn something by watching the progress of the Bankhead cotton bill which was recently passed by the national House of Representatives.

The bill comprises a new effort to restrict the raising of cotton by governmental compulsion. The day of begging the cotton farmer, or paying him to reduce his cotton crop is evidently about over. The next effort will be to compell him to restrict the crop by law. So does paternalism grow when once introduced into government.

First came the effort to induce the American farmer to cut the size of his crops by persuasion, through a campaign of education. When this didn't work, the government, under the New Deal, started in to pay him to be good. Millions were paid to the agriculturists to reduce their cotton, wheat and other crops, and the government spent additional millions in buying up and destroying spring pigs. But even this didn't work. The government cannot go on spending money indefinitely to pay the farmers to reduce their crops. Persuasion, both verbal and monetary, have failed to work.

If the system is to be continued, the government must now step in with a stern parental hand and "make" the farmers cut down on their production. It is true that the Bankhead bill is only to operate for two years and that it applies only to cotton, but paternalism has a way of growing rapidly once it is introduced, and who knows what will follow, once the camel has his nose under the tent?

The theory behind the cotton reduction program is that if the American farmers will reduce their crop of cotton for a year or two, the big surplus will be gotten rid of and the price of the staple will rise. But a great many people believe that there is a flaw in the logic. Large quantities of cotton are exported and the price in our market depends on the world price. Now, the world price depends on supply and demand. If the other cotton producing countries would cut their crops as America does, something might be done along the line of reducing the supply.

But unfortunately this will not be the case. Already we are getting stories that Egypt, Russia and other countries which produce cotton, learning of the imminent crop reduction in America, are preparing to increase their crops of the staple during the next year or two. Therefore the African and Asiatic cotton grower is apt to profit while the American farmer loses.

The experience of Great Britain with the curtailment of rubber production a few years ago is a case in point. When British rubber production was restricted, other rubber producting coountries increased their crops until there was greater over-production than ever, and prices went to the sub-cellar.

But the worst thing about the enforced cotton production plan is not the possibility that it will not work. It now would seem to indicate that we are confronted with a new program of government control. If Uncle Sam can tell the farmer he must raise only so much cotton, wheat and hogs, how long will it be until he will want to tell all of us where and how much we must work, how much we shall receive and just what we ought to eat and wear?

It's the winners and not the losers whose names are seen in connection with lotteries.

If all these back-to-the land movements succeed, most of our cities soon may be depopulated.

Now that the Filipinos have prospective independence, they are beginning to wonder what to do with it.

An Englishman suggests the addition of four letters to the alphabet. Apparently he would prepare his country for adoption of America's alphabetical new deal.

WE CIRCULATE

As air circulates through the houses of men, as water circulates through pipes and tunnels and from the sea to the heavens and back again, so, too, do the deeds of men circulate in the hearts of their brothers.

A man never knows how an act of his, be it great or trivial, may influence the life of another man. . . . One man walks smiling down the street. Another man sees that smile and is heatened. Another man sees and is filled with rage that one human being should be joyous when he is so sore of heart . . . You falter and fall and I am cast down, too. Or you fail and I say to myself, "I shall redouble my energies and succeed."

One man's hypocrite. He is supposed to be a good man, and his hypocrisy embitters those to whom it is known. . . . But there are those who do not know his hypocrisy. They listen to his fair words and are lifted up, heartened by the strength he preaches. . . . They say we always know when another is sincere. In general, I think that's true, but I know it is not always true and sometimes even hypocrisy accomplishes real things in this world.

An ambitious man may fight hard and long, even unscrupulously, to attain his ends. He gains them and relaxes. He has reached a high position and honors and is given as an example to other young men. . . . The young men know nothing of any wrongs he may have committeed. They see only that this man who climbed so high rose from obscurity, poverty, ignorance, to eminence, riches and dignity. They say, "If he, without help, was able to do that, then why should not we do the same?"

Our lives are so interwoven, our deeds are so flush with the deeds of other men, living or gone, that it is hardly possible to say where one life ends and another begins. No man is just himself. Every man is many other men. What I do becomes a part of other men. What they do, circulates through time and space in the influence they have on other people, and becomes a part of me. . . . So our lives circulate in the lives of other men and we cannot evade the responsibility of our acts.

The World AND THE Mud Puddles

ANOTHER ONE

It used to be fish stories. Now it is the airmen who tell the big yarns.

Flying at night between St. Louis and Indianapolis, Indiana, H. H. Gallup, divisional superintendent of a transcontinental air line, suddenly saw a great light flash on behind him. At first he thought it was another plane but the blinding light and trail of fire behind it soon convinced him it was a meteor.

It passed about 300 yards below Gallup's plane. Soon afterward the meteor exploded but Gallup declares he heard no noise nor did he feel the concussion which usually follows such explosions.

"All I felt beside the blinding light," said Gallup, "was an odd sensation which made me think the world was coming to an end."

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

Are you "just, before you are generous?"

Do you make liberal donations to different funds, so large that your family is required to undergo hardships before you can meet your subscriptions?

Many men make large contributions for the sake of favorable comment.

They cannot afford so much: but they are willing to subject their families to conditions they should never be called upon to endure.

There is a constant demand, at home, that expenses be reduced but to a stranger there always is an appearance of generosity on the part of the head of the house when someone outside the family makes a request for money.

This is especially true when contributions are solicited by persons of importance and prominence.

Families should expect to make some sacrifices, to help those less fortunate.

But they should not be expected to submit to hardships in order that the man of the house may make a good fellow of himself.

Such men are surprisingly numerous.

A GARDEN

A garden is a sunny room
Where peonies and pansies bloom:
A music hall where all day long,
Birds fill the sheltered nook with song.

A garden is a magic space
Where miracles are taking place
And nature out of leafy mold
Produce phlox and marigold.

A garden is a gallery gay,
With lovely pictures on display;
A church where stately lilies nod
And men draw very close to God.

McGUFFEY SHRINE

A saga of the growth of the American public school system is found in a recently established shrine to the McGuffey brothers in Oxford, Ohio. William H. and Alexander McGuffey are membered from the days of the "Little Red Schoolhouse" era as authors of the McGuffey Readers, used for 75 years as text books from the first to the sixth grade.

The first "McGuffey Eclectic Readers" appeared in 1836 and were edited by William H. McGuffey, who was 16 years his brother's senior. The elder McGuffey was well-known as one of the nation's leading educators, having occupied chairs at Miami and Ohio universities, Woodward college in Cincinnati and the University of Virginia. Alexander McGuffey, while a well-known attorney, contributed to the readers in his leisure time, collaborating with his brother.

The McGuffeys believed their books should be character-building as well as educational, teaching patriotism, honesty, industry, temperance, courage, politeness and other virtues. Many will recall the story of George Washington and the cherry tree and the "snow dog" of Mount St. Bernard.

Among the exhibits at the McGuffey shrine, is the study table used by the elder McGuffey, his spectacles, his bed with old-fashioned corn-husk mattress, bits of fancy work done by Mrs. McGuffey and the old bell that summoned to classes the students of Female College, now the Western College for Women.

William H. McGuffey died in 1873, aged 79 years, while Alexander died in 1896, aged 80 years. Neither brother lived to see the new McGuffey Readers, which appeared in 1901 and are still used in some elementary schools.

Inflation Bobs Up Again
Steady Flow Of Old Gold
Rockefeller Pushes Ahead

By LESLIE EICHEL

NEW YORK, April 6.—European sources again fear that the United States is heading toward currency inflation. Those sources say that the farmer and the "small man" will demand inflation to meet rising costs—and that, then, the "vicious cycle" will begin.

OLD GOLD

Persons with old gold are pouring the precious metal into assay offices.

One woman who thought she would realize $3.50 found that under the presidentially stipulated price she received $13.50. (It all depends on weight of the pure metal.)

Any reputable jeweler can attend to the transaction.

Millions of dollars worth of the metal has come via mail. The loss has been virtually nil, postoffice department men say.

Jewelers report and increase in business since it has become patriotic to turn in gold. Persons being paid for old gold seldom walk out without first buying something else.

ROCKEFELLER SPIRIT

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is going ahead with Rockefeller Center at a rapid pace. Two more exhibit buildings are being erected—and the foundation is dug for another structure, perhaps still another office building.

The Rockefeller Center buildings are said to be approximately 75 per cent rented. Rockefeller interests have holdings in many companies. Those companies found it "advisable" to move to Rockefeller Center. Rockefeller took care of their leases.

One of the new exhibition buildings is for Italy. The other was to be for Germany, until the Nazi trouble arose—then the Soviet made a bid for it. But now it seems the Germans have outbid the Russians. The British and the French buildings already are occupied.

TODAY Is The Day

By CLARK KINNAIRD Copyright 1934 Central Press

FRIDAY, APRIL 6

History's Great Days—April 6, 1199—Richard Plantagenet, the Lion-Hearted, whose subjects had paid a fortune for his ransom when he was a captive in Austria, was killed in France by an arrow in a squabble with a petty noble over a few hundred pounds.

His heart was buried in Rouen, the city he loved more than London; his entrails at Chalun, the rest of his body at Fontevrault at the foot of his father whom he had betrayed. His "lion heart", dried and shriveled into pea-size, is exposed upon a paper with a label, in a museum, for the gratification of the curious!

England did not miss him. Though he was born there, was her king for 10 years, and was 42 when he died, he did not spend a full twelvemonth in The Island in all his life, and could not speak English.

Tradition associates his name with the leadership of the Crusades. Actually, he participated only in the Third Crusade, and was taken captive returning from it.

April 6, 1348—Laura de Noves, wife of Hugh de Sade and mother of 11, died at the age of 44, at Avignon. True to her husband, she returned the passionate advances of Francesco Petrarch, great Italian poet, with indifference, and was made an immortal by the despairing sonnets he addressed to her.

Petrarch tells us it was 6 a. m. April 6, 1327, that he first saw her in the church of the nuns of St. Clara and fell in love with her; and it was the same hour of the same day, 1348, that she died of the plague.

For 36 years thereafter Petrarch nurtured his memory of her in a shrine wherein "He had nothing to employ him but the recollection of her charms and the imagination of her perfections." Excerpt from Petrarchian sonnet to Laura:

For virtue only find eternal Fame.

April 6 1866—First G. A. R. (Grand Army of Republic) post was established at Decatur, Ill., by Dr. B. F. Stephenson, surgeon, and Rev. W. J. Rutledge, chaplain, of the 14th Illinois infantry. Posts increased by hundreds, soon had more than 500,000 members. But the organization nearly collapsed in 1868, when it was suspected it was being used in support of Grant's presidential campaign.

April 6, 1909—A U. S. navy officer wrote in his diary: "The pole at last. The prize of three centuries. My dream and goal for 20 years. Mine at last. I cannot bring myself to realize it. It seems so simple and commonplace."

Thus did Robert E. Peary record his discovery of the North Pole. Five men were with the admiral that day—the Eskimos Ootah, Ooquah, Seelo and Fgingwah, and Matthew A. Henson, Peary's negro guide and his companion on all his arctic expeditions. The latter is the only one who lives today. Fame and fortune have been bestowed upon many lesser lights who ventured into the polar regions by air or sledge but not even a medal has been given Matthew A. Henson.

April 6, 1917—At 1:11 p. m., the United States began making the world safe for democracy, and threw itself into the war to end wars.

The first American shot was to be fired 13 days later when the naval gun crew of the S. S. Magnolia directed shells at an enemy submarine. The vessel submerged, left no traces of a hit.

First troops were landed in France 81 days later, and first doughboys did not go into the trenches more than 28 weeks after the declaration of war!

Finds Women Equal Of Men In General Intelligence

(International News Service)

LONDON—Women the whole world over may now hold their heads high and scornfully say of mere man "I am in no way inferior to you in average intelligence."

Man may be astonished and even greatly annoyed, but for their authority women have done other than Dr. Cyril Burt, professor of psychology, University College, London.

Modern psychological tests for men and women have been applied the whole world over, Dr. Burt told students when lecturing on "The Psychology of the Sexes" and there is practically no difference between the sexes in mental capacity.

"The simples test," Dr. Burt said "is with mathematical dividers. On the forearm a man can generally distinguish two pricks with the instrument's point as separate if they are about two inches apart. Woman are about twice as sensitive.

Although women were so interested in cooking and perfumes, he said, and were quicker at tasting and smelling, men were better at detecting subtle differences with nose or palate.

"In sight there are some curious divergences again. There are more women than men both short and long-sighted and far more women than men have to wear glasses.

"But only one woman in a thousand is color blind. Among males, although they do not know it, about one in 30 is color blind."

Men, he said, won on speed of action, but there were fewer women who were left-handed, stammered, or suffered from a squint.

"Of memory," Dr. Burt continued "we can speak with absolute certainty. The average girl or woman is better than the men."

Of emotion, Professor Burt said that women "spoke in capitals and thought in italics." But perhaps, he added, this was because it was what they were expected to do.

PUBLIC OPINION WINS

IT IS generally admitted that an aroused public opinion can accomplish wonders.

That's what such a public opinion did to Chicago's notorious list of "public enemies."

Back in 1930, Chicago was the center of perhaps the worst gangland activities this nation has ever witnessed. Machine gun slayings were daily occurrences. Legitimate business stood in unholy fear of racketeering leeches. The lives of innocent citizens were unsafe.

But now, several dozen of the most prominent names on the original list are in prison serving long terms, including Al Capone, Terry Druggen and such more recently well known names as Basil Banghart, Roger Touhy and the three Dillinger henchmen convicted of shooting an Ohio sheriff.

John Dillinger heads the present list of fugitives, all of whom are giving Chicago's aroused public opinion a wide berth.

And just as soon as the same type of public opinion pervades other cities, these thugs will be forced away from them, rounded up and put behind the bars for good and all.

THE OCEAN'S GOLD

How to rob the ocean of the virtually unlimited amounts of gold contained in its waters has been a question that long has challenged scientists and stirred the imagination of others.

Chemists have brought their test tubes and other implements of their trade to bear upon the problem in endless array. But to date no practical method has been found—no method the cost of which would not be many times the value of the gold extracted.

The stubbornness of the problem, however, has not deterred those who sought its solution, either with the aim of personal profit and wealth in view or solely as a scientific achievement.

Now comes what seems to be the first real hope that success lies over the horizon. Announcement was made before the American Chemical society that sufficient progress has been made in developing a recovery process to justify the prediction that within a comparatively short while, perhaps another decade, the secret will have been found. Among the things with which the chemists buttress their forecast is the fact that some of the valuable elements contained in sea water already are being extracted on a commercial basis.

It may be too early to speculate on what will happen to the world's monetary systems when the ocean finally is tapped for its gold. Most of the nations now are off the gold standard but buying and selling continue—and the demand for gold never was so great. But if unlimited quantities should become suddenly available, harassing complications would arise and monetary and economic systems would be upset.

FORCING CROP REDUCTIONS

Those Americans who complacently believe there is nothing in this talk about regimentation of industry, and who refuse to believe that we are in the midst of a revolution of sorts, ought to learn something by watching the progress of the Bankhead cotton bill which was recently passed by the national House of Representatives.

The bill comprises a new effort to restrict the raising of cotton by governmental compulsion. The day of begging the cotton farmer, or paying him to reduce his cotton crop is evidently about over. The next effort will be to compell him to restrict the crop by law. So does paternalism grow when once introduced into government.

First came the effort to induce the American farmer to cut the size of his crops by persuasion, through a campaign of education. When this didn't work, the government, under the New Deal, started in to pay him to be good. Millions were paid to the agriculturists to reduce their cotton, wheat and other crops, and the government spent additional millions in buying up and destroying spring pigs. But even this didn't work. The government cannot go on spending money indefinitely to pay the farmers to reduce their crops. Persuasion, both verbal and monetary, have failed to work.

If the system is to be continued, the government must now step in with a stern parental hand and "make" the farmers cut down on their production. It is true that the Bankhead bill is only to operate for two years and that it applies only to cotton, but paternalism has a way of growing rapidly once it is introduced, and who knows what will follow, once the camel has his nose under the tent?

The theory behind the cotton reduction program is that if the American farmers will reduce their crop of cotton for a year or two, the big surplus will be gotten rid of and the price of the staple will rise. But a great many people believe that there is a flaw in the logic. Large quantities of cotton are exported and the price in our market depends on the world price. Now, the world price depends on supply and demand. If the other cotton producing countries would cut their crops as America does, something might be done along the line of reducing the supply.

But unfortunately this will not be the case. Already we are getting stories that Egypt, Russia and other countries which produce cotton, learning of the imminent crop reduction in America, are preparing to increase their crops of the staple during the next year or two. Therefore the African and Asiatic cotton grower is apt to profit while the American farmer loses.

The experience of Great Britain with the curtailment of rubber production a few years ago is a case in point. When British rubber production was restricted, other rubber producting coountries increased their crops until there was greater over-production than ever, and prices went to the sub-cellar.

But the worst thing about the enforced cotton production plan is not the possibility that it will not work. It now would seem to indicate that we are confronted with a new program of government control. If Uncle Sam can tell the farmer he must raise only so much cotton, wheat and hogs, how long will it be until he will want to tell all of us where and how much we must work, how much we shall receive and just what we ought to eat and wear?

It's the winners and not the losers whose names are seen in connection with lotteries.

If all these back-to-the land movements succeed, most of our cities soon may be depopulated.

Now that the Filipinos have prospective independence, they are beginning to wonder what to do with it.

WE CIRCULATE

As air circulates through the houses of men, as water circulates through pipes and tunnels and from the sea to the heavens and back again, so, too, do the deeds of men circulate in the hearts of their brothers.

A man never knows how an act of his, be it great or trivial, may influence the life of another man. . . . One man walks smiling down the street. Another man sees that smile and is heatened. Another man sees and is filled with rage that one human being should be joyous when he is so sore of heart . . . You falter and fall and I am cast down, too. Or you fail and I say to myself, "I shall redouble my energies and succeed."

One man's hypocrite. He is supposed to be a good man, and his hypocrisy embitters those to whom it is known. . . . But there are those who do not know his hypocrisy. They listen to his fair words and are lifted up, heartened by the strength he preaches. . . . They say we always know when another is sincere. In general, I think that's true, but I know it is not always true and sometimes even hypocrisy accomplishes real things in this world.

An ambitious man may fight hard and long, even unscrupuiousy, to attain his ends. He gains them and relaxes. He has reached a high position and honors and is given as an example to other young men. . . . The young men know nothing of any wrongs he may have committeed. They see only that this man who climbed so high rose from obscurity, poverty, ignorance, to eminence, riches and dignity. They say, "If he, without help, was able to do that, then why should not we do the same?"

Our lives are so interwoven, our deeds are so flush with the deeds of other men, living or gone, that it is hardly possible to say where one life ends and another begins. No man is just himself. Every man is many other men. What I do becomes a part of other men. What they do, circulates through time and space in the influence they have on other people, and becomes a part of me. . . . So our lives circulate in the lives of other men and we cannot evade the responsibility of our acts.

ANOTHER ONE

It used to be fish stories. Now it is the airmen who tell the big yarns.

Flying at night between St. Louis and Indianapolis, Indiana, H. H. Gallup, divisional superintendent of a transcontinental air line, suddenly saw a great light flash on behind him. At first he thought it was another plane but the blinding light and trail of fire behind it soon convinced him it was a meteor.

It passed about 300 yards below Gallup's plane. Soon afterward the meteor exploded but Gallup declares he heard no noise nor did he feel the concussion which usually follows such explosions.

"All I felt beside the blinding light," said Gallup, "was an odd sensation which made me think the world was coming to an end."

CHARITY BEGINS AT HOME

Are you "just, before you are generous?"

Do you make liberal donations to different funds, so large that your family is required to undergo hardships before you can meet your subscriptions?

Many men make large contributions for the sake of favorable comment.

They cannot afford so much: but they are willing to subject their families to conditions they should never be called upon to endure.

There is a constant demand, at home, that expenses be reduced but to a stranger there always is an appearance of generosity on the part of the head of the house when someone outside the family makes a request for money.

This is especially true when contributions are solicited by persons of importance and prominence.

Families should expect to make some sacrifices, to help those less fortunate.

But they should not be expected to submit to hardships in order that the man of the house may make a good fellow of himself.

Such men are surprisingly numerous.

A GARDEN

A garden is a sunny room
Where peonies and pansies bloom:
A music hall where all day long,
Birds fill the sheltered nook with song.

A garden is a magic space
Where miracles are taking place
And nature out of leafy mold
Produce phlox and marigold.

A garden is a gallery gay,
With lovely pictures on display;
A church where stately lilies nod
And men draw very close to God.

McGUFFEY SHRINE

A saga of the growth of the American public school system is found in a recently established shrine to the McGuffey brothers in Oxford, Ohio. William H. and Alexander McGuffey are membered from the days of the "Little Red Schoolhouse" era as authors of the McGuffey Readers, used for 75 years as text books from the first to the sixth grade.

The first "McGuffey Eclectic Readers" appeared in 1836 and were edited by William H. McGuffey, who was 16 years his brother's senior. The elder McGuffey was well-known as one of the nation's leading educators, having occupied chairs at Miami and Ohio universities, Woodward college in Cincinnati and the University of Virginia. Alexander McGuffey, while a well-known attorney, contributed to the readers in his leisure time, collaborating with his brother.

The McGuffeys believed their books should be character-building as well as educational, teaching patriotism, honesty, industry, temperance, courage, politeness and other virtues. Many will recall the story of George Washington and the cherry tree and the "snow dog" of Mount St. Bernard.

Among the exhibits at the McGuffey shrine, is the study table used by the elder McGuffey, his spectacles, his bed with old-fashioned cor-husk mattress, bits of fancy work done by Mrs. McGuffey and the old bell that summoned to classes the students of Female College, now the Western College for Women.

William H. McGuffey died in 1873, aged 79 years, while Alexander died in 1896, aged 80 years. Neither brother lived to see the new McGuffey Readers, which appeared in 1901 and are still used in some elementary schools.

Inflation Bobs Up Again
Steady Flow Of Old Gold
Rockefeller Pushes Ahead

By LESLIE EICHEL
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, April 6.—European sources again fear that the United States is heading toward currency inflation. Those sources say that the farmer and the "small man" will demand inflation to meet rising costs—and that, then, the "vicious cycle" will begin.

OLD GOLD

Persons with old gold are pouring the precious metal into assay offices.

One woman who thought she would realize $3.50 found that under the presidentially stipulated price she received $13.50. (It all depends on weight of the pure metal.)

Any reputable jeweler can attend to the transaction.

Millions of dollars worth of the metal has come via mail. The loss has been virtually nil, postoffice department men say.

Jewelers report and increase in business since it has become patriotic to turn in gold. Persons being paid for old gold seldom walk out without first buying something else.

ROCKEFELLER SPIRIT

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is going ahead with Rockefeller Center at a rapid pace. Two more exhibit buildings are being erected—and the foundation is dug for another structure, perhaps still another office building.

The Rockefeller Center buildings are said to be approximately 75 per cent rented. Rockefeller interests have holdings in many companies. Those companies found it "advisable" to move to Rockefeller Center. Rockefeller took care of their leases.

One of the new exhibition buildings is for Italy. The other was to be for Germany, until the Nazi trouble arose—then the Soviet made a bid for it. But now it seems the Germans have outbid the Russians. The British and the French buildings already are occupied.

TODAY Is The Day

By CLARK KINNAIRD Copyright 1934 Central Press

FRIDAY, APRIL 6

History's Great Days—April 6, 1199—Richard Plantagenet, the Lion-Hearted, whose subjects had paid a fortune for his ransom when he was a captive in Austria, was killed in France by an arrow in a squabble with a petty noble over a few hundred pounds.

His heart was buried in Rouen, the city he loved more than London; his entrails at Chalun, the rest of his body at Fontevrault at the foot of his father whom he had betrayed. His "lion heart", dried and shriveled into pea-size, is exposed upon a paper with a label, in a museum, for the gratification of the curious!

England did not miss him. Though he was born there, was her king for 10 years, and was 42 when he died, he did not spend a full twelvemonth in The Island in all his life, and could not speak English.

Tradition associates his name with the leadership of the Crusades. Actually, he participated only in the Third Crusade, and was taken captive returning from it.

April 6, 1348—Laura de Noves, wife of Hugh de Sade and mother of 11, died at the age of 44, at Avignon. True to her husband, she returned the passionate advances of Francesco Petrarch, great Italian poet, with indifference, and was made an immortal by the despairing sonnets he addressed to her.

Petrarch tells us it was 6 a. m. April 6, 1327, that he first saw her in the church of the nuns of St. Clara and fell in love with her; and it was the same hour of the same day, 1348, that she died of the plague.

For 36 years thereafter Petrarch nurtured his memory of her in a shrine wherein "He had nothing to employ him but the recollection of her charms and the imagination of her perfections." Excerpt from Petrarchian sonnet to Laura:

For virtue only find eternal Fame.

April 6 1866—First G. A. R. (Grand Army of Republic) post was established at Decatur, Ill., by Dr. B. F. Stephenson, surgeon, and Rev. W. J. Rutledge, chaplain, of the 14th Illinois infantry. Posts increased by hundreds, soon had more than 500,000 members. But the organization nearly collapsed in 1868, when it was suspected it was being used in support of Grant's presidential campaign.

April 6, 1909—A U. S. navy officer wrote in his diary: "The pole at last. The prize of three centuries. My dream and goal for 20 years. Mine at last. I cannot bring myself to realize it. It seems so simple and commonplace."

Thus did Robert E. Peary record his discovery of the North Pole. Five men were with the admiral that day—the Eskimos Ootah, Ooquah, Seelo and Egingwah, and Matthew A. Henson, Peary's negro guide and his companion on all his arctic expeditions. The latter is the only one who lives today. Fame and fortune have been bestowed upon many lesser lights who ventured into the polar regions by air or sledge but not even a medal has been given Matthew A. Henson.

April 6, 1917—At 1:11 p. m., the United States began making the world safe for democracy, and threw itself into the war to end wars.

The first American shot was to be fired 13 days later when the naval gun crew of the S. S. Magnolia directed shells at an enemy submarine. The vessel submerged, left no traces of a hit.

First troops were landed in France 81 days later, and first doughboys did not go into the trenches more than 28 weeks after the declaration of war!

Finds Women Equal Of Men In General Intelligence

(International News Service)

LONDON—Women the whole world over may now hold their heads high and scornfully say of mere man "I am in no way inferior to you in average intelligence."

Man may be astonished and even greatly annoyed, but for their authirty women have done other than Dr. Cyril Burt, professor of psychology, University College, London.

Modern psychological tests for men and women have been applied the whole world over, Dr. Burt told students when lecturing on "The Psychology of the Sexes" and there is practically no difference between the sexes in mental capacity.

"The simples test," Dr. Burt said "is with mathematical dividers. On the forearm a man can generally distinguish two pricks with the instrument's point as separate if they are about two inches apart. Woman are about twice as sensitive.

Although women were so interested in cooking and perfumes, he said, and were quicker at tasting and smelling, men were better at detecting subtle differences with nose or palate.

"In sight there are some curious divergences again. There are more women than men both short and long-sighted and far more women than men have to wear glasses.

"But only one woman in a thousand is color blind. Among males, although they do not know it, about one in 30 is color blind."

Men, he said, won on speed of action, but there were fewer women who were left-handed, stammered, or suffered from a squint.

"Of memory," Dr. Burt continued "we can speak with absolute certainty. The average girl or woman is better than the men."

Of emotion, Professor Burt said that women "spoke in capitals and thought in italics." But perhaps, he added, this was because it was what they were expected to do.

CALI, Colombia, April 6.—Details of his miraculous escape from death during three and a half weeks of wandering in the deadly Chaco jungles of the Andes Mountains were eagerly awaited today as Indians brought Newton C. Marshall, Milwaukee mining engineer, to Cali for medical treatment.

Scarcely able to talk, Marshall disclosed his four companions were dead, but whether they died in the crash or from the starvation which the American himself narrowly escaped was not known here.

Women Sheriffs Men's Equal, Declares Fair Crime Student

COLUMBUS, O.—A woman has "a perfect right" to be an officer of the law and can be just as efficient, in the opinion of Miss Catherine Schroeder, 21-year old police record clerk of Richmond, Ind., the lone member of sex enrolled in the "crime school" conducted at Ohio State University.

Miss Schroeder, an attractive brunette, takes issue with the charge that "a woman's place is in the kitchen." She declares that anyone taking this stand is "absolutely unfair and unwilling to allow intelligent women to express their ability."

She declined to comment on the escape of the desperado, John Dillinger, from Sheriff Lillian Holley's "escape proof" jail at Crown Point, Ind., March 3, because she said she was not sufficiently acquainted with the true facts. However, Miss Schroeder came to the defense of Sheriff Holley.

"All of us are liable to slip once in a while," she asserted. "Maybe this particular character, Dillinger, should not have been entrusted to a woman sheriff, but who knows but what he would have escaped under other circumstances?"

Miss Schroeder declared she does not believe that Sheriff Holley's case should be the occasion for barring women from the sheriff's office in the future.

"One slip has been made the cause for so much unreasonable talk about a woman as sheriff," she declared.

Miss Schroeder, who has been working as a record clerk in Richmond for a year and a half, attended the "crime school" here along with 41 prosecutors, police officers and other law authorities.

"Its a splendid understanding," she said.

Finger-printing interests Miss Schroeder more than any other phase of criminal detection, although she is anxious to obtain a wide background of all the elements of crime and law enforcement. Recently, Miss Schroeder completed a study of finger-printing at the London prison farm, near here, and since then she has set up a department for the classification of criminals in the Richmond police division.

They Shake as Europe Shakes

Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss, Austria's Napoleonic premier, seals his understanding with Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy with a hand shake at a cavalry show near Rome, after signing of new three-cornered peace pact in which Hungary also plays a part. In consequence, European peace now rests largely in these two men's hands. (Central Press)

Women Sheriffs Men's Equal, Declares Fair Crime Student

COLUMBUS, O.—A woman has "a perfect right" to be an officer of the law and can be just as efficient, in the opinion of Miss Catherine Schroeder, 21-year old police record clerk of Richmond, Ind., the lone member of sex enrolled in the "crime school" conducted at Ohio State University.

Miss Schroeder, an attractive brunette, takes issue with the charge that "a woman's place is in the kitchen." She declares that anyone taking this stand is "absolutely unfair and unwilling to allow intelligent women to express their ability."

She declined to comment on the escape of the desperado, John Dillinger, from Sheriff Lillian Holley's "escape proof" jail at Crown Point, Ind., March 3, because she said she was not sufficiently acquainted with the true facts. However, Miss Schroeder came to the defense of Sheriff Holley.

"All of us are liable to slip once in a while," she asserted. "Maybe this particular character, Dillinger, should not have been entrusted to a woman sheriff, but who knows but what he would have escaped under other circumstances?"

Miss Schroeder declared she does not believe that Sheriff Holley's case should be the occasion for barring women from the sheriff's office in the future.

"One slip has been made the cause for so much unreasonable talk about a woman as sheriff," she declared.

Miss Schroeder, who has been working as a record clerk in Richmond for a year and a half, attended the "crime school" here along with 41 prosecutors, police officers and other law authorities.

"Its a splendid understanding," she said.

Finger-printing interests Miss Schroeder more than any other phase of criminal detection, although she is anxious to obtain a wide background of all the elements of crime and law enforcement. Recently, Miss Schroeder completed a study of finger-printing at the London prison farm, near here, and since then she has set up a department for the classification of criminals in the Richmond police division.

Some men are fighters and others get their satisfaction by licking enemies in day dreams.

Anniversary Of Peary's Finding Of North Pole

Just 25 Years Ago Today Admiral Peary Discovered North Pole; Used Dog Team

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6—Today is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the discovery of the North Pole by Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary.

On April 6, 1909, Peary, then a commander, planted the stars and stripes at the top of the world, bringing to a successful conclusion 23 years of striving and repeated failures in the frozen wastes.

Unlike modern Arctic explorers, who rely on aircraft, Peary made the arduous journey by dog team and after reaching the pole, it took him six months to get back to the outposts of civilization.

It was not until Sept. 6, 1909 that word of Peary's great achievement reached New York.

Elliott Roosevelt Says President Not So "Hot" At Fishing

(International News Service)

MIAMI, April 6.—Fishing stories are all alike, even when they apply to presidents.

Obviously, President Roosevelt or his son Elliott, who visited his distinguished father aboard Vincent Astor's yacht the Nourmahal is wrong.

Elliott came back from the flying visit with his father, landed here where White House headquarters have been set up during the executive's fishing cruise, to say that the anglers out at sea have had little or no luck during the past several days. In fact, young Roosevelt frankly said that Bob Clark, one of the secret service veterans, had caught the only fish Tuesday afternoon.

Story Is Denied

Thursday a bulletin from the Astor Yacht decried the statement of Elliott Roosevelt. The president's host, Vincent Astor, said there was nothing new to report, and added:

"Sitting around radio heard Lowell Thomas relate Elliott's gross libel on president's fishing luck. He (president) said appoint special committee to investigate and secure retraction."

Thursday the fishing party planned to move a few miles from Elbow Key, where they have been for the past three days, to one of the Bahamas, in search of more fishing luck, this the humerous denunciation of Elliott's story.

A bulletin Thursday giving details of yesterday's catch and future plans said:

"Took 21 fish Wednesday. One boat is out now and when it returns we shall proceed to Caysal, 20 miles from here."

LOSE $60,000 SUIT STARTED 40 YEARS LATE

(International News Service)

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—Timothy Murphy and 37 other Salt Lake City home owners were just 40 years too late in bringing suit against the Denver and Rio Grande railroad for $60,000 damages, District Judge Herbert M. Schiller ruled in granting a defense motion for a directed verdict. Damages had been sought on the grounds that trains travelling at a high rate of speed had injured property values.

Judge Schiller ruled that the city ordinance forbidding trains to travel at a greater speed than 12 miles an hour did not affect property rights. He said that the cause of action had existed when the road was built, in the early '90s, but that it no longer held because of the statute of limitations.

ECHO OF OLD WEST

(International News Service)

GREEN RIVER, Wyo.—The long rope and the running iron have returned to the ranges of western Wyoming, trial and conviction here of Harry Thomas revealed. Thomas was convicted of misbranding horses. He was found to have "worked" brands on horses belonging to Martin Wilson. Ernest Coffelt, charged with horses rustling, forfeited bond and disappeared before the trial.

Elliott Roosevelt Says President Not So "Hot" At Fishing

(International News Service)

MIAMI, April 6.—Fishing stories are all alike, even when they apply to presidents.

Obviously, President Roosevelt or his son Elliott, who visited his distinguished father aboard Vincent Astor's yacht the Nourmahal is wrong.

Elliott came back from the flying visit with his father, landed here where White House headquarters have been set up during the executive's fishing cruise, to say that the anglers out at sea have had little or no luck during the past several days. In fact, young Roosevelt frankly said that Bob Clark, one of the secret service veterans, had caught the only fish Tuesday afternoon.

Story Is Denied

Thursday a bulletin from the Astor Yacht decried the statement of Elliott Roosevelt. The president's host, Vincent Astor, said there was nothing new to report, and added:

"Sitting around radio heard Lowell Thomas relate Elliott's gross libel on president's fishing luck. He (president) said appoint special committee to investigate and secure retraction."

Thursday the fishing party planned to move a few miles from Elbow Key, where they have been for the past three days, to one of the Bahamas, in search of more fishing luck, this the humerous denunciation of Elliott's story.

A bulletin Thursday giving details of yesterday's catch and future plans said:

"Took 21 fish Wednesday. One boat is out now and when it returns we shall proceed to Caysal, 20 miles from here."

LOSE $60,000 SUIT STARTED 40 YEARS LATE

(International News Service)

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—Timothy Murphy and 37 other Salt Lake City home owners were just 40 years too late in bringing suit against the Denver and Rio Grande railroad for $60,000 damages, District Judge Herbert M. Schiller ruled in granting a defense motion for a directed verdict. Damages had been sought on the grounds that trains travelling at a high rate of speed had injured property values.

Judge Schiller ruled that the city ordinance forbidding trains to travel at a greater speed than 12 miles an hour did not affect property rights. He said that the cause of action had existed when the road was built, in the early '90s, but that it no longer held because of the statute of limitations.

Anniversary Of Peary's Finding Of North Pole

Just 25 Years Ago Today Admiral Peary Discovered North Pole; Used Dog Team

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6—Today is the twenty-fifth anniversary of the discovery of the North Pole by Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary.

On April 6, 1909, Peary, then a commander, planted the stars and stripes at the top of the world, bringing to a successful conclusion 23 years of striving and repeated failures in the frozen wastes.

Unlike modern Arctic explorers, who rely on aircraft, Peary made the arduous journey by dog team and after reaching the pole, it took him six months to get back to the outposts of civilization.

It was not until Sept. 6, 1909 that word of Peary's great achievement reached New York.

It was also announced that the New Castle district convention would be held at the First Baptist church, New Castle, Thursday, April 26, and that the afternoon session would be in the nature of a rally of the women's adult classes of the city, and in the evening of the men's adult classes. Suitable awards will be presented for the best attendance.

At the evening session the young people will put on a dramatization called "The Challenge of the Cross."

Miss Grimes, the young people's superintendent, and Mrs. Howard F. Magill, mission superintendent, reported splendid activities for the past month.

EPPING, N. H.—Heavy snow or rain will never delay the mail for D. R. Campbell. He has a dog trained to snap open the mail box situated on a post on the main road, poke out the letters and papers, and bring them to the house. The animal makes two trips when his mouth can't hold the mail at one time. He has never lost a letter.

'Hex' Victims Keep Silence

State Has Difficulty Combatting Witchcraft And Sorcery Practices

LANCASTER COUNTY CENTER OF INTEREST

By JOHN W. SCOTZIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, April 6. — The victimized patient and not the "doctor" constitutes the greatest barrier which the Department of Public Instruction must surmount in its crusade to cleanse Pennsylvania of witchcraft and sorcery.

This is the assertion of Robert W. Semenow, the department's law enforcement director, who at the same time called upon those persons who have paid fees for treatment of illnesses or ailments through the medium of charms, herbs or papers bearing cabilistic marks for co-operation in securing convictions.

Patients Are Wary

Deluded with the hysterical fear that a further "spell" fraught with indescribable tortures would be cast upon them were they to testify or make formal complaints, the victimized patients themselves have thus unwittingly frustrated numerous prosecutions of the illegal practice, according to Semenow.

The department, he said, is empowered to prosecute under a state law which provides that the practice of medicine must be licensed.

"We would be only too glad to prosecute these so-called hex doctors," Semenow declared, "but we are handicapped because of the fear of patients that a further curse would be cast upon them if they testified."

Lancaster County Hotbed

In Lancaster county, termed by Semenow the "hotbed" of the weird arts of hexeral which were brought into the state by immigrant settlers 200 years ago, two prosecutions have been instituted by the department since December, 1933, resulting in one conviction.

Semenow stressed the point that his department is powerless to act in cases where the "doctor" psychologically diagnoses the ailment without offering a cure. He said, however, that a violation is automatically incurred if medicine is administered, even though a fee is not charged.

"The practice of medicine," he asserted, "is predicated on an illness or ailment. When the hex doctor prescribes a psychological cure to break a curse or spell that can hardly be construed as treating a physical ailment."

Semenow warned, however:

"If pow-wowism is mixed up in any way with the practice of medicine by which the hex doctor diagnoses a disease or prescribes remedies whether they be herbs, medicine or charms, this department will institute prosecutions."

Meanwhile, the hex practitioners are freely dealing out their cures and charms in return for "fat" fees, secure in the knowledge that their gullible victims won't talk, Semenow charged.

— what it means

— to keep on hand 350,000 bales of Turkish tobacco

to add something to the taste

So important is Turkish tobacco in the Chesterfield blend that we maintain a modern up-to-date tobacco factory in the far-off city of Smyrna.

Turkish tobacco adds something to the taste and aroma of a cigarette that no other tobacco can give.

It means something that Chesterfield always has in storage upwards of 350,000 bales of this aromatic Turkish leaf.

This Turkish tobacco is blended and cross-blended with ripe mild home-grown tobaccos to give Chesterfields a taste and aroma that is not like other cigarettes.

Everything that money can buy is used to make Chesterfield the cigarette that's milder, the cigarette that tastes better.

World's Tonic Is One Great Systematic Treatment For Catarrh

WORLD'S TONIC HELPS ATTACK CATARRHAL CONDITIONS WHEREVER THEY ARE LOCATED

Everyone with catarrh of the head is constantly secreting catarrh poisons that are being swallowed, contaminating the stomach and bowels and over-working the kidneys. Likewise, the air that is breathed is constantly passing over the terrible sores that catarrh eats in the air passages, thus carrying the infection into the bronchial tubes and lungs.

There are many authentic cases that show that serious stomach trouble was really a catarrhal condition induced by contamination of the catarrh of the head. Numerous cases are on record where serious lung trouble has been developed from catarrhal infection in the nose and throat.

World's Tonic is the new systemic treatment that is intended to relieve the catarrhal condition of the nose and head, counteracting the poisonous discharge and relieving the congestion. This of course stops the source of infection that weakens the stomach and bowels and other organs of elimination. World's Tonic reaches the seat of the disease and cleans the system of the accumulated poisons, enabling the digestion to furnish a supply of rich, red blood that vivifies and strengthens all the organs.

World's Tonic is sold at Eckerd's, Paisley's, Smith's and all other reliable drug stores. (A-113).

Explains Status Of Parrot Fever

No Real Danger From Old Birds States Health Expert

HARRISBURG, April 6.—There is no reason to become worried regarding the danger of psittacosis or parrot fever by owners of birds who have had them in their possession for months or years, Dr. J. Moore Campbell, director of the State Health Department's bureau of health conservation, announced today. A large number of inquiries expressing concern have been reaching the Department of Health from owners of these pets because of the recent prominence given to several cases of this malady in the western portion of the state.

"Birds which have been in the possession of families for a long time cannot be considered dangerous, inasmuch as they are not in a position to acquire the disease by contact with other infected birds.

"While the causes of the trouble are not definitely known, recent laboratory investigations have shown that the infectious agent is present in the nose, throat and intestinal discharges of the infected bird. Humans acquire the disease through contamination of the fingers from which germs may be transmitted to the mouth."

World's Tonic Is One Great Systematic Treatment For Catarrh

WORLD'S TONIC HELPS ATTACK CATARRHAL CONDITIONS WHEREVER THEY ARE LOCATED

Everyone with catarrh of the head is constantly secreting catarrh poisons that are being swallowed, contaminating the stomach and bowels and over-working the kidneys. Likewise, the air that is breathed is constantly passing over the terrible sores that catarrh eats in the air passages, thus carrying the infection into the bronchial tubes and lungs.

There are many authentic cases that show that serious stomach trouble was really a catarrhal condition induced by contamination of the catarrh of the head. Numerous cases are on record where serious lung trouble has been developed from catarrhal infection in the nose and throat.

World's Tonic is the new systemic treatment that is intended to relieve the catarrhal condition of the nose and head, counteracting the poisonous discharge and relieving the congestion. This of course stops the source of infection that weakens the stomach and bowels and other organs of elimination. World's Tonic reaches the seat of the disease and cleans the system of the accumulated poisons, enabling the digestion to furnish a supply of rich, red blood that vivifies and strengthens all the organs.

World's Tonic is sold at Eckerd's, Paisley's, Smith's and all other reliable drug stores. (A-143).

Explains Status Of Parrot Fever

No Real Danger From Old Birds States Health Expert

HARRISBURG, April 6.—There is no reason to become worried regarding the danger of psittacosis or parrot fever by owners of birds who have had them in their possession for months or years, Dr. J. Moore Campbell, director of the State Health Department's bureau of health conservation, announced today. A large number of inquiries expressing concern have been reaching the Department of Health from owners of these pets because of the recent prominence given to several cases of this malady in the western portion of the state.

"Birds which have been in the possession of families for a long time cannot be considered dangerous, inasmuch as they are not in a position to acquire the disease by contact with other infected birds.

"While the causes of the trouble are not definitely known, recent laboratory investigations have shown that the infectious agent is present in the nose, throat and intestinal discharges of the infected bird. Humans acquire the disease through contamination of the fingers from which germs may be transmitted to the mouth."

'Hex' Victims Keep Silence

State Has Difficulty Combatting Witchcraft And Sorcery Practices

LANCASTER COUNTY CENTER OF INTEREST

By JOHN W. SCOTZIN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG, April 6. — The victimized patient and not the "doctor" constitutes the greatest barrier which the Department of Public Instruction must surmount in its crusade to cleanse Pennsylvania of witchcraft and sorcery.

This is the assertion of Robert W. Semenow, the department's law enforcement director, who at the same time called upon those persons who have paid fees for treatment of illnesses or ailments through the medium of charms, herbs or papers bearing cabilistic marks for co-operation in securing convictions.

Patients Are Wary

Deluded with the hysterical fear that a further "spell" fraught with indescribable tortures would be cast upon them were they to testify or make formal complaints, the victimized patients themselves have thus unwittingly frustrated numerous prosecutions of the illegal practice, according to Semenow.

The department, he said, is empowered to prosecute under a state law which provides that the practice of medicine must be licensed.

"We would be only too glad to prosecute these so-called hex doctors," Semenow declared, "but we are handicapped because of the fear of patients that a further curse would be cast upon them if they testified."

Lancaster County Hotbed

In Lancaster county, termed by Semenow the "hotbed" of the weird arts of hexeral which were brought into the state by immigrant settlers 200 years ago, two prosecutions have been instituted by the department since December, 1933, resulting in one conviction.

Semenow stressed the point that his department is powerless to act in cases where the "doctor" psychologically diagnoses the ailment without offering a cure. He said, however, that a violation is automatically incurred if medicine is administered, even though a fee is not charged.

"The practice of medicine," he asserted, "is predicated on an illness or ailment. When the hex doctor prescribes a psychological cure to break a curse or spell that can hardly be construed as treating a physical ailment."

Semenow warned, however:

"If pow-wowism is mixed up in any way with the practice of medicine by which the hex doctor diagnoses a disease or prescribes remedies whether they be herbs, medicine or charms, this department will institute prosecutions."

Meanwhile, the hex practitioners are freely dealing out their cures and charms in return for "fat" fees, secure in the knowledge that their gullible victims won't talk, Semenow charged.

MOVE FOR INCREASED ESTATE TAXES MAY PASS

Senate Leaders Given Approval

Effort Of Progressives To Restore Wartime Income Taxes Is Failure

SEEK PUBLICITY ON INCOME TAXES

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The progressive drive for higher federal taxes on the rich won a partial victory in the senate today as administration leaders accepted the LaFollette schedule for increased estate taxes.

The LaFollette rates would yield $95,000,000 more than existing law through taxes on inheritances. The total revenue from these taxes, according to treasury estimates, would be close to $180,000,000 a year.

No Wartime Rates.

The progressives lost when they sought to restore virtual wartime income taxes, especially in the higher brackets. They forced a $7,000,000 increase in surtaxes but also lost when they tried to force an increase of the normal income tax rate from four to six per cent on all incomes.

The new estate taxes, as proposed by Senator LaFollette (R) of Wisconsin, would allow an exemption of $40,000 but would impose rates thereafter, ranging from one per cent on the first $35,000 net inheritance to 60 per cent of inheritances in excess of $10,000,000. Administration leaders agreed this was a method for forcing a redistribution of wealth, while providing revenue for the treasury from a source best able to pay it.

Normal Rate 4 Per Cent.

A similar increase in gift taxes was believed unavoidable.

The income taxes, already approved by the senate, will bring about $580,000,000 into the treasury. The normal rate will be four per cent, while the surtaxes, starting at $4,000, will range from five per cent up to a maximum of 59 per cent, which applies to all incomes in excess of $1,000,000 a year.

The progressives also hoped for victory in their fight to force complete publicity of income tax returns.

Great Britain Is Not Alarmed

Great Britain Expects The United States To Continue To Be Market For Securities

(International News Service)

LONDON, April 6—Although Great Britain is making no provisions for other than "token payments" on her obligations to the United States government, she still expects the United States to continue to be a market for her securities and a source of future loans as occasion requires. It was learned authoritatively on Thursday.

British government and financial leaders do not feel that the Johnson bill, prohibiting future loans to foreign governments which have defaulted on previous obligations, applies to Great Britain. They justify this opinion by the statement of representative McReynolds, of Tennessee, chairman of the house foreign relations committee, that those governments which have made token payment will not be regarded as in default.

It is certain that the new budget, now in preparation, will make no provisions for other than token payments to the United States. The government expects that discussion which will be carried on with United States officials in Washington will lead to acceptance by the United States of another token payment with President Roosevelt again stipulating Great Britain is is not in default.

MOVE FOR INCREASED ESTATE TAXES MAY PASS

Senate Leaders Given Approval

SEEK PUBLICITY ON INCOME TAXES

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The progressive drive for higher federal taxes on the rich won a partial victory in the senate today as administration leaders accepted the LaFollette schedule for increased estate taxes.

The LaFollette rates would yield $95,000,000 more than existing law through taxes on inheritances. The total revenue from these taxes, according to treasury estimates, would be close to $180,000,000 a year.

No Wartime Rates.

The progressives lost when they sought to restore virtual wartime income taxes, especially in the higher brackets. They forced a $7,000,000 increase in surtaxes but also lost when they tried to force an increase of the normal income tax rate from four to six per cent on all incomes.

The new estate taxes, as proposed by Senator LaFollette (R) of Wisconsin, would allow an exemption of $40,000 but would impose rates thereafter, ranging from one per cent on the first $35,000 net inheritance to 60 per cent of inheritances in excess of $10,000,000. Administration leaders agreed this was a method for forcing a redistribution of wealth, while providing revenue for the treasury from a source best able to pay it.

Normal Rate 4 Per Cent.

A similar increase in gift taxes was believed unavoidable.

The income taxes, already approved by the senate, will bring about $580,000,000 into the treasury. The normal rate will be four per cent, while the surtaxes, starting at $4,000, will range from five per cent up to a maximum of 59 per cent, which applies to all incomes in excess of $1,000,000 a year.

The progressives also hoped for victory in their fight to force complete publicity of income tax returns.

Great Britain Expects The United States To Continue To Be Market For Securities

(International News Service)

LONDON, April 6—Although Great Britain is making no provisions for other than "token payments" on her obligations to the United States government, she still expects the United States to continue to be a market for her securities and a source of future loans as occasion requires. It was learned authoritatively on Thursday.

British government and financial leaders do not feel that the Johnson bill, prohibiting future loans to foreign governments which have defaulted on previous obligations, applies to Great Britain. They justify this opinion by the statement of representative McReynolds, of Tennessee, chairman of the house foreign relations committee, that those governments which have made token payment will not be regarded as in default.

It is certain that the new budget, now in preparation, will make no provisions for other than token payments to the United States. The government expects that discussion which will be carried on with United States officials in Washington will lead to acceptance by the United States of another token payment with President Roosevelt again stipulating Great Britain is is not in default.

FARMER MILKED COWS WHILE SLEEP-WALKING

(International News Service)

THREE FORKS, Mont. — The mystery of the nocturnal milkings of a herd of dairy cattle on a farm near here was cleared up by sheriff's deputies. The farmer reported that someone was milking his cows nightly. The deputies hid themselves near the barn.

During the night they saw the farmer, attired only in nightshirt and slippers, go to the barn, milk the cows and throw the milk into the hog-trough. The watchers awakened the farmer. He had been milking the cows in his sleep.

GIRL GANGS BEAT DRUG-STORE COWBOYS

(International News Service)

SOFIA, Bulgaria.—Tired of being accosted by Bulgarian drug-store cowboys, the girls here, without any apparent premeditation, have ganged together to exterminate the street corner pests.

Formerly the good-looking young girl had to grit her teeth and "take it" if the loungers in front of the wine-shops cracked wise when she passed.

Recently however, three slick-haired boys were beaten up by the enraged young women, one of the girls throwing her annoyer on the cobblestones and kicking a few ribs in.

White Would Change System

Says Public Service Commission Should Be Made Up Of Probers

City Solicitor Robert M. White, firing a broadside last night at Pennsylvania's present public service commission system, declared that that arm of the state government should be transformed from a "court" into a "police agency" which would function more as do the banking, educational, health departments and other administrative arms of the commonwealth.

System Under Attack.

Making it clear that his criticism had to do alone with the system and not the commission's personnel, Mr. White emphatically asserted that "the present system is fundamentally wrong and I feel that honesty and justice in the regulation of utilities will never be had until it is corrected."

The city solicitor spoke to the Y's Men's club, a Y. M. C. A. young men's group.

While the P. S. C. is nothing more than an arm of the state, Mr. White went on to show how it functions altogether differently from the rest and how, because of the system, the members become judges and not investigators as they should be. He said the system has "hamstrung" all the commissioners so that they themselves could not even correct it.

Offers Corrective Plan.

Solicitor White stated that the P. S. C. in his opinion, should send out investigators to determine reasons for complaints and then should rule upon these findings. He decried the present system which forces the "little fellow and big fellow" to hire an attorney and then make a trip to Pittsburgh for a formal hearing. He would abolish these hearings altogether.

The need for trained investigators, trained in the industrial and business fields to which they would be assigned he pointed out as "a most important thing."

"Young men such as you should rise up and demand intelligent legislation in this regard," Mr. White concluded.

BOOTLEGGERS STILL THRIVE IN UTAH

(International News Service)

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—Repeal, made possible by Utah's vote on December 5, 1933, has brought an epidemic of apartment house bootlegging to Salt Lake City. Although sanctioning the legal sale of liquor in other states, Utah has retained its state prohibition laws.

Bootleggers, who sought to remain in business by smuggling legal liquor in from other states have received little encouragement from local drinkers, revenue men declared. Instead, moonshine peddlers, who sell a cheaper, and many declare better, grade of liquor are said to be flourishing in apartment houses speakeasies.

GETS HER DIVORCE AFTER MANY YEARS

(International News Service)

DENVER.—Mrs. Lillian Champton recently received a divorce 26 years after it was awarded to her. She obtained a divorce from Bert Champton on grounds of non-support and desertion in the Denver courts in 1908. The papers were never signed, however, and were thrown out after being on file for eight years.

A short time ago her attorneys attempted to get her a divorce certificate and found that the decree had never been signed. In the meantime, both she and her former husband had remarried. District Judge George F. Dunklee reinstated the case and signed the decree.

FLEXIBLE GLASS DEVELOPED IN ENGLAND

(International News Service)

LONDON. — A flexible form of plate glass, produced by a secret process in one of the largest glass factories in Great Britain, is reported to be meeting with considerable success.

The new glass, the report points out, is flexible and capable of withstanding enormous pressure. In a recent demonstration, a plate of the glass measuring three feet in length was raised on two narrow boards. Pressure was then applied causing the glass to curve, but upon removal of the pressure the glass resumed its normal straightness.

Compromise To Settle Strike

Four Thousand Employes To Return To Work At Racine, Wis.

(International News Service)

RACINE, Wis. April 6—The month long Nash Motors Company and Seaman Body Corporation strike, successfully arbitrated by President Roosevelt's new national automobile labor board, entered its final stages of settlement today with a compromise agreement.

Union employes, numbering more than 4,000 will ratify the labor boards proposal and return to work on Monday or Tuesday of next week, their leaders indicated. Union recognition and a ten per cent increase in wages was granted.

It was the first test of arbitration power for the newly-created automobile tribunal. Its three members left immediately for Detroit where they will attempt to mediate a threatened strike of union metal workers in automobile factories.

Under terms of the settlement, a compromise on the principal issues involved workers in the Racine and Kenosha Nash plants will receive a wage increase of ten per cent. A similar raise is already in effect at the seaman plant in Milwaukee, it was stated.

The companies agreed to bargain collectively with representatives "freely chosen by those employes for whom they are to act."

GIRL GANGS BEAT DRUG-STORE COWBOYS

(International News Service)

SOFIA, Bulgaria.—Tired of being accosted by Bulgarian drug-store cowboys, the girls here, without any apparent premeditation, have ganged together to exterminate the street corner pests.

Formerly the good-looking young girl had to grit her teeth and "take it" if the loungers in front of the wine-shops cracked wise when she passed.

Recently however, three slick-haired boys were beaten up by the enraged young women, one of the girls throwing her annoyer on the cobblestones and kicking a few ribs in.

Greatest Circus Aerialist Grounded for Life

Alfredo Codona, known to millions of U. S. circus-goers as the only aerialist to make a triple somersault, is on the ground, just a spectator in the stands, as circus season opens. Injury received in act ended his career as world's greatest aerialist. Codona's wife, Lillian Leitzel, lost her life in performing similar stunt. Photos show him when he was at "height of fame," and grounded.

White Would Change System

Says Public Service Commission Should Be Made Up Of Probers

City Solicitor Robert M. White, firing a broadside last night at Pennsylvania's present public service commission system, declared that that arm of the state government should be transformed from a "court" into a "police agency" which would function more as do the banking, educational, health departments and other administrative arms of the commonwealth.

System Under Attack.

Making it clear that his criticism had to do alone with the system and not the commission's personnel, Mr. White emphatically asserted that "the present system is fundamentally wrong and I feel that honesty and justice in the regulation of utilities will never be had until it is corrected."

The city solicitor spoke to the Y's Men's club, a Y. M. C. A. young men's group.

While the P. S. C. is nothing more than an arm of the state, Mr. White went on to show how it functions altogether differently from the rest and how, because of the system, the members become judges and not investigators as they should be. He said the system has "hamstrung" all the commissioners so that they themselves could not even correct it.

Offers Corrective Plan.

Solicitor White stated that the P. S. C., in his opinion, should send out investigators to determine reasons for complaints and then should rule upon these findings. He decried the present system which forces the "little fellow and big fellow" to hire an attorney and then make a trip to Pittsburgh for a formal hearing. He would abolish these hearings altogether.

The need for trained investigators, trained in the industrial and business fields to which they would be assigned he pointed out as "a most important thing."

"Young men such as you should rise up and demand intelligent legislation in this regard," Mr. White concluded.

BOOTLEGGERS STILL THRIVE IN UTAH

(International News Service)

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah.—Repeal, made possible by Utah's vote on December 5, 1933, has brought an epidemic of apartment house bootlegging to Salt Lake City. Although sanctioning the legal sale of liquor in other states, Utah has retained its state prohibition laws.

Bootleggers, who sought to remain in business by smuggling legal liquor in from other states have received little encouragement from local drinkers, revenue men declared. Instead, moonshine peddlers, who sell a cheaper, and many declare better, grade of liquor are said to be flourishing in apartment houses speakeasies.

GETS HER DIVORCE AFTER MANY YEARS

(International News Service)

DENVER.—Mrs. Lillian Champton recently received a divorce 26 years after it was awarded to her. She obtained a divorce from Bert Champton on grounds of non-support and desertion in the Denver courts in 1908. The papers were never signed, however, and were thrown out after being on file for eight years.

A short time ago her attorneys attempted to get her a divorce certificate and found that the decree had never been signed. In the meantime, both she and her former husband had remarried. District Judge George F. Dunklee reinstated the case and signed the decree.

FLEXIBLE GLASS DEVELOPED IN ENGLAND

(International News Service)

LONDON. — A flexible form of plate glass, produced by a secret process in one of the largest glass factories in Great Britain, is reported to be meeting with considerable success.

The new glass, the report points out, is flexible and capable of withstanding enormous pressure. In a recent demonstration, a plate of the glass measuring three feet in length was raised on two narrow boards. Pressure was then applied causing the glass to curve, but upon removal of the pressure the glass resumed its normal straightness.

Compromise To Settle Strike

Four Thousand Employes To Return To Work At Racine, Wis.

(International News Service)

RACINE, Wis. April 6—The month long Nash Motors Company and Seaman Body Corporation strike, successfully arbitrated by President Roosevelt's new national automobile labor board, entered its final stages of settlement today with a compromise agreement.

Union employes, numbering more than 4,000 will ratify the labor boards proposal and return to work on Monday or Tuesday of next week, their leaders indicated. Union recognition and a ten per cent increase in wages was granted.

It was the first test of arbitration power for the newly-created automobile tribunal. Its three members left immediately for Detroit where they will attempt to mediate a threatened strike of union metal workers in automobile factories.

Under terms of the settlement, a compromise on the principal issues involved workers in the Racine and Kenosha Nash plants will receive a wage increase of ten per cent. A similar raise is already in effect at the seaman plant in Milwaukee, it was stated.

The companies agreed to bargain collectively with representatives "freely chosen by those employes for whom they are to act."

Supervisors Have Session

Discuss Road Problem At Conference In Council Chamber

Road supervisors of Lawrence county, met Thursday afternoon in council chamber, city hall, and discussed problems connected with road work in townships during the coming year.

According to the discussion, $117, per mile has been allotted for road upkeep by the State Highway Department. It is planned, it was said, to make this go as far as possible and the supervisors would have to do the rest.

This allotment is made under the provisions of the Parkinson law it was related. The law does not go far enough under existing conditions, supervisors said, and that it was explained is why a road tax has been levied as it will devolve upon the townships to maintain what roads the state cannot take care of.

Some supervisors have already made arrangements to take care of a portion of the roads, it was stated by Secretary J. W. Cox. Other officers of the association which will meet again in December are: President, F. J. Bradley, vice president, J. B. Shaw and treasurer, D. B. Reynolds.

"I'll give this bill to any student who eats it," he declared.

Pinchot Suggests McNair Donate To "Conscience Fund"

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, April 6.—Mayor William N. McNair who claims he is having trouble in getting city council to slash his salary was given a solution by Gov. Gifford Pinchot today.

McNair previously wrote the governor, suggesting all candidates for governor agree to accept a cut before election.

Supervisors Have Session

Discuss Road Problem At Conference In Council Chamber

Road supervisors of Lawrence county, met Thursday afternoon in council chamber, city hall, and discussed problems connected with road work in townships during the coming year.

According to the discussion, $117, per mile has been allotted for road upkeep by the State Highway Department. It is planned, it was said, to make this go as far as possible and the supervisors would have to do the rest.

This allotment is made under the provisions of the Parkinson law it was related. The law does not go far enough under existing conditions, supervisors said, and that it was explained is why a road tax has been levied as it will devolve upon the townships to maintain what roads the state cannot take care of.

Some supervisors have already made arrangements to take care of a portion of the roads, it was stated by Secretary J. W. Cox. Other officers of the association which will meet again in December are: President, F. J. Bradley, vice president, J. B. Shaw and treasurer, D. B. Reynolds.

YOUTH EATS $5 BILL TO PROVE EDIBILITY

(International News Service)

DENVER.—Public speakers who illustrate their remarks on economic problems with the declaration that "you can't eat a five-dollar bill," will avoid South Denver high school if they want to keep their money.

De Loss Walker, a director of the National Recovery Crusade, made the time-honored declaration regarding the edibility of the five-dollar bill before the students of South high school.

"I'll give this bill to any student who eats it," he declared.

Sloan promptly stepped forward, masticated the paper and swallowed it.

Both cats were saved but alarms cost the city considerably more than $100, it was estimated.

Senior High To Seek New Honors

School Musicians Going To District Competition At Ellwood City

CONTESTS OCCUR ON APRIL 20 AND 21

The Senior high school's student musicians have won glory for themselves and their school in past contests with northwestern Pennsylvania's finest and hold high hopes this year of acquiring fresh honors when they take the stage in Oil City on April 20 and 21.

On those two days northwestern Pennsylvania's best will compete for the honor of representing the section in the state contests of the Pennsylvania Forensic and Music league at Johnstown on April 27 and 28.

Senior high school will send its band and orchestra to compete on Friday evening, April 20, while its solo and ensemble representatives will not compete until Saturday morning. Altogether, the school will have over 100 competing in its behalf. They are staging rehearsals daily now.

Buses will be chartered to carry the contestants there early Friday afternoon, and over night the groups will be guests of Oil City families who are donating their homes at the request of Music Director Mitchell of the Oil City high.

Those who finish their playing Friday evening will return home the same night.

Prof. J. F. Replogle will lead the local groups in the contests.

Lawrence county is expected to enter a number of contestants.

Sixty Foresters Bid Camp Thomas Adieu

Eleven Return Here As C. C. C. Life Ends; Leave 101 To 'Carry' On

By RICHARD HAUCK
(Special To The News)

CAMP LOWELL THOMAS, C. C. C., TROUT RUN, Pa., April 6.—Last Saturday night the barracks were much quieter than usual. One could hear the distinct tick of the battered alarm clock without any ear strain. Footsteps re-echoed throughout the barracks and the following morning found that familiar "chow pardner" missing. Sixty young foresters had completed another chapter in their lives and emerged better fit to face the world from a physical, mental and moral viewpoint. Each member added an average of 10 pounds to his anatomy, learned to make decisions for himself and experienced the benefits of cooperation and the ultimate disastrous results from the lack of it. From a sea of mud and a thicket of tree grew a modern up-to-date village with electric lights, showers, library, a recreation hall equipped wtih pool tables, boxing ring and many other forms of diversities from routine. While Camp Lowell Thomas was in the making, nature presented her opposition, bringing the hottest summer, the frostiest fall, the coldest winter, with a flood and a couple of forest fires thrown in to make the battle interesting. All of this goes in the appraisal of those 60 foresters who, with the assistance of the present 101, did their share to put Camp Lowell Thomas at the top of the list. Not boasting of its high standing in forestry work, but the sport world as well. So with the present strength of the company at above the 100 mark we "carry on".

Of the 60 who returned to their homes 11 were New Castle foresters, 26 woodsters were from Uniontown and vicinity having come to this station from Fort George G. Meade as replacements in December of last year. Other members boarded trains for Scranton, Oil City and Pittsburgh. Fifty of the present members are "old timers" and as a result of a recent regulation will be discharged due to the expiration term of service on June 30, 1934, which will be the end of the second quarterly period during which time the allotted term of one year expires. Five thousand "local experienced woodsmen" will be permitted to reenroll in the entire C. C. C. for another six months period regardless of the time already served. The object of this is to retain the efficient operation of the Civilian Conservation corps in the field. The officer personnel at this station (thus far) remains unchanged with Captain R. H. Murfit in the red plush chair, capably commanding the 101 red-blooded, rarin'-to-go young woodchoppers. Capt. Murfit is ably assisted by First Lieut. W. G. Bewley, acting as agent finance officer and quartermaster; First Lieut. R. M. Free of the medical corps reserve and Second Lieut. H. R. McLaughlin, who is responsible for those body building meals in the "chow house".

With out present depleted ranks and selected superiors we look forward to the arrival of replacements. However, no word has been received at this station as to when they will arrive.

Three Sentenced To Life Term By Military Court

Three Students Accused Of Assassination Of Rumanian Premier Get Life Sentences

(International News Service)

BUCHAREST, April 6—After a three week's trial a military court today sentenced three students implicated in the assassination of Premier Ion Duca to life terms at hard labor and surprisingly acquitted forty eight other defendants, all members of the "iron guard."

The government is dissatisfied at the leniency with which the terrorists were treated and, it is rumored, may resign.

BANISH COMMON CONSTIPATION WITH DELICIOUS CEREAL

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brings Relief

Look out for headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sallow complexions, sleeplessness. Frequently, these are warning signs of common constipation. If neglected, your health may be impaired.

Today, you can rid yourself of common constipation by eating a tempting cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" and vitamin B to aid regular habits. ALL-BRAN is also rich in iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that found in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, this clears out the intestinal wastes. How much better this is than taking patent medicines!

Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily will usually overcome most types of common constipation. Chronic cases, with each meal. If seriously ill, see your doctor. ALL-BRAN makes no claim to be a "cure-all."

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. At all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Standard Time For S. S. Board

South Side Merchants To Retain Standard Time During Summer Months

Members of the South Side Board of Trade will operate under Eastern Standard Time instead of Daylight Savings Time during the summer months.

The board of directors passed a resolution to this effect at a special meeting held on Thursday afternoon in the office of Alderman J. Lee Cooper, of East Long avenue.

The membership drive which started this week has been extended another week. Much progress has been made in getting additional members to the organization. The directors believe that by extending the campaign, it will give every merchant of the South Side an opportunity to join. The drive will come to a close on April 14.

The directors who attended the session yesterday; President W. C. Druschel, Hartzell Huston, John Wajert, Alex Samuels, John Bablarz, Joseph Frengel.

Don't cuss the kid if he throws money away without thought for tomorrow. He has the chief trait of a baseball or movie star.

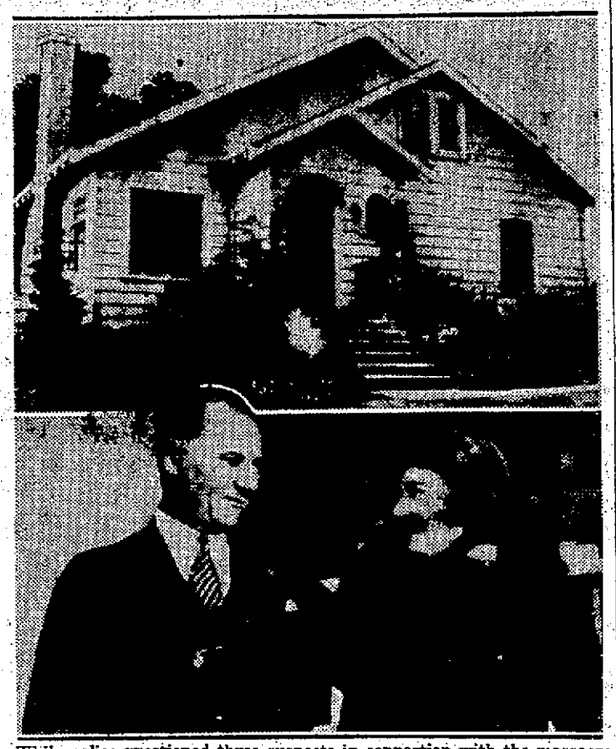
Scene and Massacre Victims



While police questioned three suspects in connection with the massacre of six persons in the Summer home (above) of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Flieder (also shown) near Bremerton, Wash., a State-wide hunt was started in search of a clue to the killers. The fact that valuable rings were missing from Mrs. Flieder's body points to robbery as motive.

Sixty Foresters Bid Camp Thomas Adieu

Eleven Return Here As C. C. C. Life Ends; Leave 101 To 'Carry' On

By RICHARD HAUCK
(Special To The News)

CAMP LOWELL THOMAS. C. C. C., TROUT RUN, Pa., April 6.—Last Saturday night the barracks were much quieter than usual. One could hear the distinct tick of the battered alarm clock without any ear strain. Footsteps re-echoed throughout the barracks and the following morning found that familiar "chow pardner" missing. Sixty young foresters had completed another chapter in their lives and emerged better fit to face the world from a physical, mental and moral viewpoint. Each member added an average of 10 pounds to his anatomy, learned to make decisions for himself and experienced the benefits of cooperation and the ultimate disastrous results from the lack of it. From a sea of mud and a thicket of tree grew a modern up-to-date village with electric lights, showers, library, a recreation hall equipped wtih pool tables, boxing ring and many other forms of diversities from routine. While Camp Lowell Thomas was in the making, nature presented her opposition, bringing the hottest summer, the frostiest fall, the coldest winter, with a flood and a couple of forest fires thrown in to make the battle interesting. All of this goes in the appraisal of those 60 foresters who, with the assistance of the present 101, did their share to put Camp Lowell Thomas at the top of the list. Not boasting of its high standing in forestry work, but the sport world as well. So with the present strength of the company at above the 100 mark we "carry on".

Of the 60 who returned to their homes 11 were New Castle foresters, 23 woodsters were from Uniontown and vicinity having come to this station from Fort George G. Meade as replacements in December of last year. Other members boarded trains for Scranton, Oil City and Pittsburgh. Fifty of the present members are "old timers" and as a result of a recent regulation will be discharged due to the expiration term of service on June 30, 1934, which will be the end of the second quarterly period during which time the allotted term of one year expires. Five thousand "local experienced woodsmen" will be permitted to reenroll in the entire C. C. C. for another six months period regardless of the time already served. The object of this is to retain the efficient operation of the Civilian Conservation corps in the field. The officer personnel at this station (thus far) remains unchanged with Captain R. H. Murfit in the red plush chair, capably commanding the 101 redblooded, rarin'-to-go young woodchoppers. Capt. Murfit is ably assisted by First Lieut. W. G. Bewley, acting as agent finance officer and quartermaster; First Lieut. R. M. Free of the medical corps reserve and Second Lieut. H. R. McLaughlin, who is responsible for those body building meals in the "chow house".

With out present depleted ranks and selected superiors we look forward to the arrival of replacements. However, no word has been received at this station as to when they will arrive.

BANISH COMMON CONSTIPATION WITH DELICIOUS CEREAL

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brings Relief

Look out for headaches, loss of appetite and energy, sallow complexions, sleeplessness. Frequently, these are warning signs of common constipation. If neglected, your health may be impaired.

Today, you can rid yourself of common constipation by eating a tempting cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN furnishes "bulk" and vitamin B to aid regular habits. ALL-BRAN is also rich in iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that found in leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass. Gently, this clears out the intestinal wastes. How much better this is than taking patent medicines!

Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily will usually overcome most types of common constipation. Chronic cases, with each meal. If seriously ill, see your doctor. ALL-BRAN makes no claim to be a "cure-all."

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. At all grocers. In the red-and-green package. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

"When Can You Deliver It?"

"Running" a house means just that—a lot of steps—a lot of errands. But a telephone can save you many a trip when you're tired, or busy, or when the weather is bad. A telephone brings the stores to you. It carries your messages. It saves endless steps. Every day it makes housework easier.

You can have a telephone in your home for less than a dime a day!

Scene and Massacre Victims

While police questioned three suspects in connection with the massacre of six persons in the Summer home (above) of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Flieder (also shown) near Bremerton, Wash., a State-wide hunt was started in search of a clue to the killers. The fact that valuable rings were missing from Mrs. Flieder's body points to robbery as motive.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Pays Fine, Result Of Playful Doggy

Justice Of Peace Of St. Davids, Pa., Fines Wealthy Woman $11.25 At Hearing

DOGS MUST STAY INSIDE OF FENCE

(International News Service)

ST. DAVIS, Pa., April 6.—Mrs. Mary Weir Logan Vanderbilt's three little Scotties will not have to die, but their mistress will soon take them away from the scene of the trouble they caused.

"I'm going to move," the divorced wife of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., announced angrily today.

In the dim-lit barn which he employes as a hearing room Justice of the Peace William Buckland of Bryn Mawr last night brought Mrs. Vanderbilt's pets, Timmie, Angus and Winnie, to trial. Shuning the public limelight, Mrs. Vanderbilt sat in Squire Buckland's parlor, while the hearing was in progress.

Is Given Fine

After Squire Buckland, his retinue, attendants and the complaining witnesses had shuttled back and forth between barn and parlor, Mrs. Vanderbilt finally agreed to plead guilty to charges of "maintaining vicious dogs." The squire assessed the defendant $11.25 in costs and sentenced Timmie, Angus and Winnie to spend the rest of their days in St. Davids, imprisoned in an enclosure of wire 15 feet high.

Today workmen were busy on the grounds of Mrs. Vanderbilt's spacious home, erecting the canine concentration camp.

"I pleaded guilty only to save the lives of my Scotties," Mrs. Vanderbilt explained with a resentful shrug of her shoulders. "I am elated with the outcome of the case because I was afraid they would take my Scotties from me. Still, I think the entire matter a gross abuse and I intend to move out of the neighborhood."

The entire drama of dogs and the doggy set had its inception in a complaint filed by Louise Wright, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wright, select neighbors of Mrs. Vanderbilt, who divorced the "millionaire reporter" and erstwhile newspaper publisher in Reno three years ago.

Stockings Ruined

Louise charged that one of Mrs. Vanderbilt's playful pets had suddenly taken a fancy to her ankle. In munching away at the ankle, the mischievious creature had also ruined a fine pair of silk stockings, Louise complained. During the hearing Louise's father displayed a badly nicked Irish shillalah.

"See those marks?" he fairly shouted. "That's where one of those dogs chewed my stick when I used it to chase them away from my heels.'

Find That Hiram Holliday Was Of Sound Mind When Last Will Was Made

The jury in the case of Frank R. Holliday against Mrs. Jessie McNeish, which has been on trial before Judge James A. Chambers, brought in a verdict, shortly before noon today, in favor of the plaintiff.

The jury also found that Hiram Holliday was of sound mind when the will in question was executed. It was also found that the will was executed by Mr. Holliday. These latter questions were submitted to the jury in charge of the court.

The controversy started when Frank R. Holliday attempted to probate a will left by his father in which the decedent's property was left to Frank. Mrs. McNeish claimed a former will in which she was one of the legatees. She also claimed that at the time of making the will which had been offered for probate Holliday was incompetent to make a will. It was also alleged that undue influence had been used, as Hiram Holliday was living at the home of his son at the time the will was made. Under the verdict the will leaving the property to Frank R. Holliday stands.

Suit Against City Over Bad Sidewalks

Mrs. Francis Zimmerman Claims That It Was Responsible For Fall

The City of New Castle, Frank and Mollie Malic are defendants in a suit brought by Frances Zimmerman, which was taken up for trial before Judge R. L. Hildebrand at court this morning. The case is one in which Mrs. Zimmerman fell and fractured her left wrist in front of the Malic property on Sciota street. The accident occurred in February, 1932.

It is the contention of the plaintiff that the accident was caused by the condition of the pavement in front of the Malic property. According to the testimony some of the surface or upper coating of the cement had been defective, causing a depression in the walk. Mrs. Zimmerman alleges that it was on account of this defect in the pavement that she slipped and fell.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Pays Fine, Result Of Playful Doggy

Justice Of Peace Of St. Davids, Pa., Fines Wealthy Woman $11.25 At Hearing

DOGS MUST STAY INSIDE OF FENCE

(International News Service)

ST. DAVIS, Pa., April 6.—Mrs. Mary Weir Logan Vanderbilt's three little Scotties will not have to die, but their mistress will soon take them away from the scene of the trouble they caused.

"I'm going to move," the divorced wife of Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., announced angrily today.

In the dim-lit barn which he employes as a hearing room Justice of the Peace William Buckland of Bryn Mawr last night brought Mrs. Vanderbilt's pets, Timmie, Angus and Winnie, to trial. Shuning the public limelight, Mrs. Vanderbilt sat in Squire Buckland's parlor, while the hearing was in progress.

Is Given Fine

After Squire Buckland, his retinue, attendants and the complaining witnesses had shuttled back and forth between barn and parlor, Mrs. Vanderbilt finally agreed to plead guilty to charges of "maintaining vicious dogs." The squire assessed the defendant $11.25 in costs and sentenced Timmie, Angus and Winnie to spend the rest of their days in St. Davids, imprisoned in an enclosure of wire 15 feet high.

Today workmen were busy on the grounds of Mrs. Vanderbilt's spacious home, erecting the canine concentration camp.

"I pleaded guilty only to save the lives of my Scotties," Mrs. Vanderbilt explained with a resentful shrug of her shoulders. "I am elated with the outcome of the case because I was afraid they would take my Scotties from me. Still, I think the entire matter a gross abuse and I intend to move out of the neighborhood."

The entire drama of dogs and the doggy set had its inception in a complaint filed by Louise Wright, 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Wright, select neighbors of Mrs. Vanderbilt, who divorced the "millionaire reporter" and erstwhile newspaper publisher in Reno three years ago.

Stockings Ruined

Louise charged that one of Mrs. Vanderbilt's playful pets had suddenly taken a fancy to her ankle. In munching away at the ankle, the mischievious creature had also ruined a fine pair of silk stockings, Louise complained. During the hearing Louise's father displayed a badly nicked Irish shillalah.

"See those marks?" he fairly shouted. "That's where one of those dogs chewed my stick when I used it to chase them away from my heels.'

The Child And The Kingdom

"Brass Tacks" On The Sunday School Lesson

The Golden Text

Matthew 19:14—"Suffer the little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for to such belongeth the kingdom of heaven."

(The International Sunday School Lesson on the above topic for April 8 is Matt. 18:1-14, 19:13-15, the Golden Text being 19:14, "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for to such belongeth the kingdom of heaven".)

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

Our Lord was continually surprising his followers by doing and saying the unexpected thing. He was forever putting the last first and the first last. So it was when his disciples came to him asking, "Who then is greatest in the kingdom of heaven?"

He had overheard them disputing this question among themselves by the way as they journeyed. To rebuke their selfish ambition and correct their wrong notions of greatness "he called to him a little child, and set him in the midst of them, and said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye turn, and become as little children, ye shall in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven. Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven. And whoso shall receive one such little child receiveth me." Thus did our Lord dignify service, even though it be to a child, as though it were service rendered him personally. Any failure to render that service might result in the child's stumbling and thereby bring the severest condemnation upon the one who had failed to serve the child: "Whoso shall cause one of these little ones that believe on me to stumble, it is profitable for him that a great millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be sunk in the depth of the sea."

Thus Jesus made the child the center of interest in church and society. Whoever puts dividends or revenue in the midst as he exploits his fellow-men, and especially the youth of today, may well ponder these stern words of warning! In our desperate striving for economic recovery let us not seek it at the peril of the welfare of our children either by lessening their educational advantages to save taxes or by increasing their moral hazards to provide new sources of revenue. Jesus placed a child in the midst. Let the home, the school, the state and the church make no substitution of anything else for that central peace. "How will this affect our children?" should be the first question asked of any policy or program. To do less than this puts humanity beneath even the level of the brute creation.

Suffer the Little Children"

Sins of omission as well as those of commission call for attention in the interest of our children. Failure to give them spiritual and moral training is as culpable as any other type of non-support of which parents may be guilty. "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." His disciples thought he had more important service to render and rebuked the parents who thus sought Christ's blessing upon their little ones. But Jesus had no more important business or more impelling interest. "See that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven."

Child Conservation Dignified

Jesus further dignified every effort at child conservation by giving in this connection that gem of parables of the ninety and nine sheep safely folded and the one lost sheep of the shepherd's supreme interest: "Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones shall perish."

CLEVELAND—Charging that the company's service during a period of two years was inadequate, unusually inefficient and highly detrimental to her business," Miss Marie Epler, proprietress of a beauty parlor here, asked for a $10,000 judgment against the Ohio Bell Telephone company in a common pleas court suit.

Miss Epler asserted that the company had wrongfully apprised persons that her line "was busy out of order, or did not answer" approximately twice each day during the period.

Claiming she lost a considerable sum in wages and in profits, she asked the judgment on the grounds of "violation of contract" and "negligence and carelessness."

ALLOW STUDENTS TO GRADE INSTRUCTORS

(International News Service)

DES MOINES, Iowa.—Reversing the usual process by allowing college students to grade their instructors brings better instruction, according to Prof. J. A. Starrack of Iowa State College.

The experience, according to Prof. Starrack, seems to warrent the conclusion that "substantial improvement in the personal fitness and teaching ability of college teachers may be brought about by having students express an opinion of their teachers in a systematic manner."

Suffer the Little Children"

Sins of omission as well as those of commission call for attention in the interest of our children. Failure to give them spiritual and moral training is as culpable as any other type of non-support of which parents may be guilty. "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." His disciples thought he had more important service to render and rebuked the parents who thus sought Christ's blessing upon their little ones. But Jesus had no more important business or more impelling interest. "See that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, that in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven."

Child Conservation Dignified

Jesus further dignified every effort at child conservation by giving in this connection that gem of parables of the ninety and nine sheep safely folded and the one lost sheep of the shepherd's supreme interest: "Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones shall perish."

NUMBER PLEASE? SHE ASKS $10,000

(International News Service)

CLEVELAND—Charging that the company's service during a period of two years was inadequate, unusually inefficient and highly detrimental to her business," Miss Marie Epler, proprietress of a beauty parlor here, asked for a $10,000 judgment against the Ohio Bell Telephone company in a common pleas court suit.

Miss Epler asserted that the company had wrongfully apprised persons that her line "was busy out of order, or did not answer" approximately twice each day during the period.

Claiming she lost a considerable sum in wages and in profits, she asked the judgment on the grounds of "violation of contract" and "negligence and carelessness."

Appel Explains Milk Measure

Law Approved For Purpose Of Protecting Health Of Public, He States

HEALTH FACTOR IS PREDOMINANT

HARRISBURG, April 6. — The State Department of Health has been receiving a number of letters from milk producers in various sections of the state indicating a misconception of the purpose of the milk laws as enforced by the Department of Health.

"These laws," said Dr. Theodore B. Appel, secretary of health, today, "were approved for the purpose of protecting the public health. It was not intended to interfere with private industries or to eliminate the possibility of local farmers disposing of their product in the neighborhood. While in effect a number of farmers have been prohibited in selling raw milk from non-tuberculin tested cattle, the prohibition decidedly is not an economic one.

"Permits to sell milk are issued without cost to all milk producers meeting the sanitary regulations. These involve, among others, that raw milk must come from tuberculin tested cattle. Producers of any kind of milk must have a milk house on the premises, cleansing facilities and bottling equipment so that caps may be applied mechanically.

"While it is realized that there may be a number of small farmers to whom such regulations may cause hardships, the health of the public is paramount and therefore the small dealer, as well as the large producer, is held equal in the eyes of the law.

"The Department of Health always has been and will continue to be most sympathetic with the farmer and rural dweller in every phase of economic activity affecting the public health in which he engages. But the risk is entirely too great to permit any individual to produce and sell milk even among a small number of neighbors unless the regulations adopted to protect the public are recognized. These regulations, drawn under authority of legislative acts by the advisory health board, represent careful study of the issues involved. However, they are subject to change at any time within the limitations of the basic laws passed by the legislature. Constructive requests for amendments always will receive careful attention."

GLASS OF WATER WORTH $10,000

(International News Service)

ANN HARBOR, Mich.—The most precious glassful of water in the world—$10,000 worth— is under lock and key in the University of Michigan laboratories today, guarded as jealously as radium.

It is "heavy water" in its pure state deuterium oxide, discovered only two years ago and valuable in the treatment of cancer. Profs. J. C. Halford, Leigh C. Anderson and John R. Bates have worked out a plan to increase the University's valuable supply to two quarts within two years.

A report on the process was given at the March meeting of the American Chemical Society in St. Petersburg, Fla. Prof. Halford hopes that the water may some day prove valuable in curing the ailments of old age.

DR. McCLURE TO DISCUSS WAR

To Preach Special Sermon On Sunday Night At First Church

On Sunday evening in the First Presbyterian church, the pastor, Dr. Walter E. McClure will preach on the theme: "The Church, the Bible, and War." The cause and cure of war will be discussed from the standpoint of the Christian church. Many interesting questions will be considered. Will there be another war? What can Christians do to help bring lasting peace? Why are the Jews so vitally interested in the cause of peace? Do we believe in preparedness? What attitude must be assumed towards Jesus Christ, in all our efforts for world peace?

Dr. McClure considers this a vital matter in these days, and wishes to direct the thought of his people along the lines that are distinctively Christian.

Bird Gets Drunk On Maple Sap!

This repeal business 'hasn't ended drinking'. Or drunkenness.' It even has the birds taking a load on board and getting steamed. At least this is the report handed in to The News by a reputable lady, whose word is as good as her bond if she likes bonds.

It happened in front of the McGoun home on Lincoln avenue. A readheaded wood pecker was lying in the street apparently dead. The lady walked over, picked him up and found him rolling his eyes around, but unable to do any pecking or flap his wings.

She called the attention of a workman nearby to the condition of the bird and he replied, "the bird is drunk from drinking fermented maple sap."

The answer was that a maple tree nearby had been nicked, the sap had collected in a hollow at the base of the tree, the sun fermented it and the woodpecker went blotto.

And now boys and girls you know what makes the wood pecker red headed.

CAMP ASAPH, C. C. C., ASAPH, Pa. April 6—A veil of sadness spread over this forest camp last Saturday when the entire camp of foresters journeyed four miles to a railroad depot to roar a fond farewell to the "buddies" whose enlistment period was at an end. Human Beings Can Get Along Without Sex, Says Doctor

(International News Service)

PEORIA, Ill., April 6—There is no reason for the existence of companionate marriage as human beings can get along without sex.

This was the view expressed here by Dr. Edward Schoolman, Chicago, in speaking on the subject "Marriage, Fulfillment or Frustration."

Marriage, however, he declared, has a great significance to the individual and to society and "that significance should be extolled."

"Marriage provided a background for children," he asserted. "It should be altogether based on that fact. It should be a legal, social and economic institution, not a sexual institution. Then men and women will not marry with distorted notions, but with fitness and wholesomeness."

A civilization, he expressed the belief, would not be possible without marriage and the family. Facts, he said, point definitely to that conclusion.

"Marriage has lost most of its fundamental functions," he said. "The family was an economic group, a co-operative group. Machinery came along and took this away from marriage. It has lost its protective function. The family tradition used to mean something. Now every human must prove himself. The family was largely responsible for the education of its members. Mass education has taken away this function.

"There is only one validity left—that is purely emotional, and it, as far as I am concerned, is enough. There is no greater reality than emotion. There are no longer any such things as ultimate truths, and we can hang our faith are emotion, feeling, love.

"Because the philosophy of marriage has remained the same for hundreds of years, we still think in terms of family loyalties and obligation of child to parent. The mode of today makes it perfectly rational for a person to crucify a million others to help his own family.

"Our trouble today is a lack of recognition of the real significance of what marriage really means to civilization. Marriage really is a fulfillment if humans are able to stand it. Statistics show that married men and women live longer than single men and women, and there are fewer married men and women in insane asylums. There are fewer criminals among married people. Whatever the reason for these facts they prove the desirability of the institution of marriage."

Human Beings Can Get Along Without Sex, Says Doctor

(International News Service)

PEORIA, Ill., April 6—There is no reason for the existence of companionate marriage as human beings can get along without sex.

This was the view expressed here by Dr. Edward Schoolman, Chicago, in speaking on the subject "Marriage, Fulfillment or Frustration."

Marriage, however, he declared, has a great significance to the individual and to society and "that significance should be extolled."

"Marriage provided a background for children," he asserted. "It should be altogether based on that fact. It should be a legal, social and economic institution, not a sexual institution. Then men and women will not marry with distorted notions, but with fitness and wholesomeness."

A civilization, he expressed the belief, would not be possible without marriage and the family. Facts, he said, point definitely to that conclusion.

"Marriage has lost most of its fundamental functions," he said. "The family was an economic group, a co-operative group. Machinery came along and took this away from marriage. It has lost its protective function. The family tradition used to mean something. Now every human must prove himself. The family was largely responsible for the education of its members. Mass education has taken away this function.

"There is only one validity left—that is purely emotional, and it, as far as I am concerned, is enough. There is no greater reality than emotion. There are no longer any such things as ultimate truths, and we can hang our faith are emotion, feeling, love.

"Because the philosophy of marriage has remained the same for hundreds of years, we still think in terms of family loyalties and obligation of child to parent. The mode of today makes it perfectly rational for a person to crucify a million others to help his own family.

"Our trouble today is a lack of recognition of the real significance of what marriage really means to civilization. Marriage really is a fulfillment if humans are able to stand it. Statistics show that married men and women live longer than single men and women, and there are fewer married men and women in insane asylums. There are fewer criminals among married people. Whatever the reason for these facts they prove the desirability of the institution of marriage."

Appel Explains Milk Measure

Law Approved For Purpose Of Protecting Health Of Public, He States

HEALTH FACTOR IS PREDOMINANT

HARRISBURG, April 6. — The State Department of Health has been receiving a number of letters from milk producers in various sections of the state indicating a misconception of the purpose of the milk laws as enforced by the Department of Health.

"These laws," said Dr. Theodore B. Appel, secretary of health, today, "were approved for the purpose of protecting the public health. It was not intended to interfere with private industries or to eliminate the possibility of local farmers disposing of their product in the neighborhood. While in effect a number of farmers have been prohibited in selling raw milk from non-tuberculin tested cattle, the prohibition decidedly is not an economic one.

"Permits to sell milk are issued without cost to all milk producers meeting the sanitary regulations. These involve, among others, that raw milk must come from tuberculin tested cattle. Producers of any kind of milk must have a milk house on the premises, cleansing facilities and bottling equipment so that caps may be applied mechanically.

"While it is realized that there may be a number of small farmers to whom such regulations may cause hardships, the health of the public is paramount and therefore the small dealer, as well as the large producer, is held equal in the eyes of the law.

"The Department of Health always has been and will continue to be most sympathetic with the farmer and rural dweller in every phase of economic activity affecting the public health in which he engages. But the risk is entirely too great to permit any individual to produce and sell milk even among a small number of neighbors unless the regulations adopted to protect the public are recognized. These regulations, drawn under authority of legislative acts by the advisory health board, represent careful study of the issues involved. However, they are subject to change at any time within the limitations of the basic laws passed by the legislature. Constructive requests for amendments always will receive careful attention."

GLASS OF WATER WORTH $10,000

(International News Service)

ANN HARBOR, Mich.—The most precious glassful of water in the world—$10,000 worth— is under lock and key in the University of Michigan laboratories today, guarded as jealously as radium.

It is "heavy water" in its pure state deuterium oxide, discovered only two years ago and valuable in the treatment of cancer. Profs. J. C. Halford, Leigh C. Anderson and John R. Bates have worked out a plan to increase the University's valuable supply to two quarts within two years.

A report on the process was given at the March meeting of the American Chemical Society in St. Petersburg, Fla. Prof. Halford hopes that the water may some day prove valuable in curing the ailments of old age.

A new wide ribbon sash tie about the waist of your last year's dress may do much to make it fresh and new looking. Or some flowers at the neckline will give it that up-to-date note.

DR. McCLURE TO DISCUSS WAR

To Preach Special Sermon On Sunday Night At First Church

On Sunday evening in the First Presbyterian church, the pastor, Dr. Walter E. McClure will preach on the theme: "The Church, the Bible, and War." The cause and cure of war will be discussed from the standpoint of the Christian church. Many interesting questions will be considered. Will there be another war? What can Christians do to help bring lasting peace? Why are the Jews so vitally interested in the cause of peace? Do we believe in preparedness? What attitude must be assumed towards Jesus Christ, in all our efforts for world peace?

Dr. McClure considers this a vital matter in these days, and wishes to direct the thought of his people along the lines that are distinctively Christian.

Bird Gets Drunk On Maple Sap!

This repeal business 'hasn't ended drinking'. Or drunkenness.' It even has the birds taking a load on board and getting steamed. At least this is the report handed in to The News by a reputable lady, whose word is as good as her bond if she likes bonds.

It happened in front of the McGoun home on Lincoln avenue. A readheaded wood pecker was lying in the street apparently dead. The lady walked over, picked him up and found him rolling his eyes around, but unable to do any pecking or flap his wings.

She called the attention of a workman nearby to the condition of the bird and he replied, "the bird is drunk from drinking fermented maple sap."

The answer was that a maple tree nearby had been nicked, the sap had collected in a hollow at the base of the tree, the sun fermented it and the woodpecker went blotto.

And now boys and girls you know what makes the wood pecker red headed.

Foresters Depart At Camp Asaph As Pals Roar Farewell

By WILLIAM VAUGHN
(Special To The News)

CAMP ASAPH, C. C. C., ASAPH, Pa. April 6—A veil of sadness spread over this forest camp last Saturday when the entire camp of foresters journeyed four miles to a railroad depot to roar a fond farewell to the "buddies' whose enlistment period was at an end. Sometime again the boys may meet, but possibly never.

Just before they left camp, or the night before, the camp honored the departing group at a dance which also marked the opening of a new recreational hall. A banquet formed part of the gay festivities.

Camp Asaph's radio station newly inaugurated, has been making itself heard in the air waves and it is hoped that amateur operators in the New Castle area will tune in. It is a Collins code transmitter operating on 4445 kilocycles, to be heard between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. The station would like contact on 3768 kilocycles, its amateur frequency. New Castle operators are first asked to write to M. Gevandan, Radio WVHS, C. C. C. Camp, 1354, Asaph, Pa.

State Troopers Detail Rushed To Logan, W. Va.

Fifteen Additional State Troopers Rushed To Mining Area As Violence Threatens

TEAR GAS USED BY OFFICERS

(International News Service)

LOGAN, W. Va., April 6.—Fifteen additional state troopers were rushed into the Logan coal fields today following an outbreak of violence in the strike of 7,000 miners.

John Ford, superintendent of an Island Creek mine, was severely beaten and slugged by a group of strikers who fled following the attack.

Mines Picketed.

A survey today showed that 30 mines in the area are posted with pickets and nearly all mines in the county, which is the principal coal mine area of the state, were standing idle.

Pleas of mine operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America to bring an end to the strike were spurned by the belligerent workers.

The strike was called as the result of a dispute over hour and wage agreement. The miners contend that the operators have not lived up to the terms of the agreement.

Tear Gas Ured

Fairmont, W. Va., April 6.—Four hundred mine pickets were repulsed with tear gas by deputy sheriffs today during a clash at the mine of the Consolidated Coal Co.

Four pickets were arrested.

Retreating under the gas attack, the miners hurled threats at the deputies that "we'll be back this afternoon with guns," according to officers.

Twenty thousand miners are on strike in the Fairmont area.

Reed Suggests New Tea Party

Senator Reed Urges Philadelphians To Stage Modern Tea Party In Protest

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, April 6.—U. S. Senator David. A. Reed today was on record with the recommendation to Philadelphians that they stage a modern version of the Boston tea party by casting paper towels and paper napkins into the Delaware river.

The demonstration, he said in a speech last night at Olney high school here, should be a mass protest against the processing taxes levied by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace under the agricultural adjustment administration program. Charging that consumers are being burdened with the processing taxes in order to pay western and southern farmers to restrict their crop production, Reed characterized Wallace as a modern counterpart of King George III, and added:

"To raise this money a single official is empowered to place taxes. It is not a tax imposed by congress whose members are elected and are responsible to the people. But, it is a tax placed by an appointed official not directly responsible to the citizens.

"It is taxation without representation."

NEW GOLD RACKET

DENVER—Uncle Sam is buying all the gold he can get just now. He has not, however, sent any agents out to make a house-to-house canvass in an attempt to buy the yellow metal. Mark A. BELGRADE, Jugoslavia.—A hydro-biological institute has been completed by the Jugoslav government at Lake Orchid, one of the most interesting fresh water bodies in Europe.

Lake Orchid, situated in the southernmost corner of Jugoslavia, at the Albanian border, is called the "Lake of living fossils," because there exist many aquatic life-forms previously believed to be extinct.

In the coming summer an international congress of hydro-biologists will be held at Orchid, in the new institute.

MARIONETTE SHOWS PAY GIRL'S TUITION

(International News Service)

ST. LOUIS.—Puppets are helping Beatrice Bilinsky, 17 years old, get a scientific education at Washington University here.

With three other girls, Miss Bilinsky gives puppet shows at children's hospitals, private homes, children's parties, or wherever there may be a call for "The Four Puppeteers," as the quartet call themselves.

They make their marionettes, dress them, write the lines and do all the other work incidental to staging a miniature show.

Dog Mail-Carrier In Sierras Totes Brandy For Lost Souls

(International News Service)

SACRAMENTO, Cal.—The Swiss have their St. Bernards for relief of famished snowbound travelers, but California's high Sierras goes the Alps one better with a combination dog mail carrier and brandy keg toter.

"Watty," a full-blooded St. Bernard dog owned by F. W. Copp of the Sierra Nevada Mining Corporation, carries the goverment mail in winter from La Porte, Plumas county, over a snowbound 14-mile trail to isolated Bunker Hill Mine.

Now that prohibition has been repealed, "Watty," like the famous Swiss dogs, carries a brandy keg in his trips over the snow.

The keg, imported form Switzerland, was the gift of Fulton T. Watson of Beverly Hills, after whom the dog was named. It holds one liter—nearly a pint.

Copp, explaining that "Watty" may come across a wayfarer lost in the snow some day, has legally filled the tiny keg with rare old California brandy.

"Watty" has a regular schedule on his goverment mail beat.

He starts on his 14-mile trip from the mine to La Porte every Saturday in winter, for he's the principal link in communication between the two places. His lunch and outgoing mail are strapped on his back, and he makes the trek to town in three hours.

After rest and lunch at La Porte, the mail for the mine is strapped to his back. The return trip calls for a 1,600-foot climb in 14 miles and sometimes it takes him as long as 22 hours when he bucks a blizzard.

DANCED ON WIFE'S GRAVE WHILE DRUNK

(International News Service)

GALATZ, Rumania — Paraschiv Stan, a hard-boiled Rumania farmer, found the death of his wife a matter of such wild rejoicing that he went every night for a whole week to the cemetery and danced till dawn on her fresh grave to the fiery tunes of a gypsy band which he hired for this specail purpose.

He refused to allow the priest to perform the burial service, stood drinks for all the roughnecks of the district, maltreated his children and burnt all his wife's belongings.

The city council hauled him into court for sacrilege and immorality. Six months, said the judge.

"Ogier the Dane" was one of the most popular of Charlemagne's paladins.

State Troopers Detail Rushed To Logan, W. Va.

TEAR GAS USED BY OFFICERS

(International News Service)

LOGAN, W. Va., April 6.—Fifteen additional state troopers were rushed into the Logan coal fields today following an outbreak of violence in the strike of 7,000 miners.

John Ford, superintendent of an Island Creek mine, was severely beaten and slugged by a group of strikers who fled following the attack.

Mines Picketed.

A survey today showed that 30 mines in the area are posted with pickets and nearly all mines in the county, which is the principal coal mine area of the state, were standing idle.

Pleas of mine operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America to bring an end to the strike were spurned by the belligerent workers.

The strike was called as the result of a dispute over hour and wage agreement. The miners contend that the operators have not lived up to the terms of the agreement.

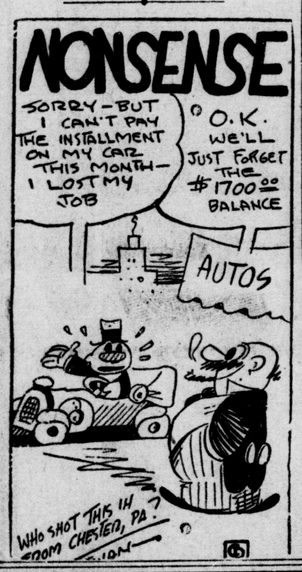
Tear Gas Ured

Fairmont, W. Va., April 6.—Four hundred mine pickets were repulsed with tear gas by deputy sheriffs today during a clash at the mine of the Consolidated Coal Co.

Four pickets were arrested.

Retreating under the gas attack, the miners hurled threats at the deputies that "we'll be back this afternoon with guns," according to officers.

Twenty thousand miners are on strike in the Fairmont area.



Reed Suggests New Tea Party

Senator Reed Urges Philadelphians To Stage Modern Tea Party In Protest

(International News Service)

PHILADELPHIA, April 6.—U. S. Senator David A. Reed today was on record with the recommendation to Philadelphians that they stage a modern version of the Boston tea party by casting paper towels and paper napkins into the Delaware river.

The demonstration, he said in a speech last night at Olney high school here, should be a mass protest against the processing taxes levied by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace under the agricultural adjustment administration program. Charging that consumers are being burdened with the processing taxes in order to pay western and southern farmers to restrict their crop production, Reed characterized Wallace as a modern counterpart of King George III, and added:

"To raise this money a single official is empowered to place taxes. It is not a tax imposed by congress whose members are elected and are responsible to the people. But, it is a tax placed by an appointed official not directly responsible to the citizens.

"It is taxation without representation."

NEW GOLD RACKET

(International News Service)

DENVER—Uncle Sam is buying all the gold he can get just now. He has not, however, sent any agents out to make a house-to-house canvass in an attempt to buy the yellow metal. Mark A. Skinner, superintendent of the Denver mint recently warned Denver householders to beware of fake federal agents assertedly buying gold on the pretense that they were acting for the United States mint.

HYDRO BIOLOGICAL INSTITUTE COMPLETED

(International News Service)

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia. — A hydro-biological institute has been completed by the Jugoslav government at Lake Orchid, one of the most interesting fresh water bodies in Europe.

Lake Orchid, situated in the southernmost corner of Jugoslavia, at the Albanian border, is called the "Lake of living fossils," because there exist many aquatic life-forms previously believed to be extinct.

In the coming summer an international congress of hydro-biologists will be held at Orchid, in the new institute.

This year's allotment includes the $30,000 annuity and the settlement of the long-disputed boundary line.

NEW DEAL REVIVES ALASKAN INDUSTRIES

(International News Service)

SEWARD, Alaska. — Influence of the "new deal" in bringing industrial activity back to Alaska after an absence of years was seen here with the announcement of the reopening of a number of canneries long shut down.

The Katmai Cannery at Cuzinkie is being established by the International Packing Company following two years of inactivity. The San Juan Cannery and the Shearwater plant at Uganik will both be operated this season.

The Kodiak Fisheries plant at Kodiak and the Grimes Cannery at Ouzinkie are expanding their operations this season.

Lawrence County Farms And Farmers

By H. R. McCulloch, County Agent

CORN-HOG PROGRAM

W. B. Flory, in charge of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration office in Pennsylvania, will discuss the corn-hog program of the adjustment administration at a meeting in Lawrence county Friday evening, April 13. The exact location of the meeting will be announced later.

All farmers interested in the program are urged to attend this meeting as Mr. Flory will be in position to answer questions relative to the program.

Farmers who grow 10 acres or more of corn for grain purposes or who grow any hogs are eligible to receive the benefits offered by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration if they sign a contract.

MODIFIED SOD METHODS IN ORCHARDS IS BEST

A modified sod treatment of orchard soils is indicated as the best method by expediments conducted by department of horticulture at the Pennsylvania State college. The results do not encourage the use of clean cultivation nor are they favorable to long continued sod, even when supplemented with annual applications of nitrogenous fertilizer.

A soil containing a liberal supply of organic matter has proved to be most desirable, since this condition assures greater moisture supply, promotes growth, and improves the yield. Supplying adequate plant food, providing sufficient moisture, and maintaining satisfactory growing conditions need not be a difficult task under this system.

Two crops, fruit trees and sod, are grown in a single season. This has required a liberal supply of available plant food, which in general orchard practice has been provided in the form of a nitrogenous fertilizer. Where sod has been continued year after year, it became the more aggressive in utilizing the fertilizer and tree growth was checked.

Now the feeding of the two crops is recommended as follows: applying a nitrogen fertilizer for the trees and other fertilizers for the sod to build up the humus content of the soil. A treatment, similar to that given in a general farm rotation, consisting of superphosphate and lime, where needed, is considered most satisfactory. Applications at different times is not involved since the needs of both crops can be satisfied in a complete fertilizer. The amounts can be varied according to the response in growth.

This method of management will stimulate both tree and sod growth, provided the sod is harrowed each spring to destroy part of the sod. The decay of this sod will improve the physical condition of the soil. Both legumes and grasses can be used in this system.

WINTER INJURY REDUCES GRAIN CROP PROSPECTS

Wheat looks very badly this spring in many fields. Some of the wheat will come along and may make a fair crop, depending somewhat on future weather.

It is sometimes suggested that spring barley or oats be drilled on wheat fields for which there seems to be little hope. Unless the field is disked or thoroughly harrowed before sowing spring grain, however, the results are likely to be poor.

In most cases the cheapest and most satisfactory plan will be to sow the clover or alfalfa on the wheat field as usual and harvest any surviving wheat. Where the wheat is very thin or dead the clover usually will come along very rapidly and often will make a cutting of hay in August. Weeds may get ahead of the clover where the wheat has been winter-killed. Then a clipping with the mower set high to avoid cutting much of the clover will be necessary.

FILTHY FEED CAUSES TROUBLE FOR CHICKS

Disease infection and parasitic infestation are likely to result when chicks pick up feed contaminated with droppings and filth.

For this reason, it is a good practice to place both grain and mash in hoppers so constructed as to prevent the chicks from wasting or contaminating their feed. Plans for a practical type of hopper are contained in the Pennsylvania State college extension circular No. 131, "Use Clean Feed to Grow Healthy Pullets" which may be obtained from the Agricultural Extension office, 9 Dean block, New Castle.

Placing all feed containers on wire-covered frames prevents the chicks from picking up contaminated feed from the floor. Feed which spills from the hopper falls under the wire and can be removed when the house is cleaned.

New Castle Man Granted Patent Right On Curtain Stretcher

(Special To The News)

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Housewives need no longer be subjected to the old annoyances attendant with washing curtains if all that is said about Isaiah Creel's invention, just granted a patent, is true. That the New Castle inventor's creation received official sanction from the Patent office was learned today.

Creel embodied five original ideas or improvements, all of which were upheld by department examiners, to make his device practical. The patent has been pending since May 27, 1933, when the application was filed here.

The Patent office announcement makes no mention of an assignment of commercial rights.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written For Central Press and New Castle News.

Opposition to the Bankhead bill for limiting the sales of cotton will probably not be enough to prevent its passage by congress, and it will doubtless be law by the time you read this. While I think the plan will be effective in reducing the production of cotton, for a year or two at least, it does not impress me as very skillfully conceived.

The purpose of all cotton legislation, of course, is to increase the incomes of cotton growers, and it is generally agreed that to do this we must cut down production until most of the abnormal supply from past years is used up. To do this we have had last year's plow-up campaign, loans for holding cotton on the farm, this year's acreage reduction sign-up, and now this tax limit on the amount of cotton that can be ginned.

It has always seemed to me that this huge and intricate machinery was unnecessary. If a simple excise tax were placed on all cotton at the time of sale, the tax paid back to the grower on an allotted number of bales, representing the cotton we use in this country, and the tax refunded to exporters on all cotton sold abroad, it seems to me that we would get all the desirable results we want at one-hundredth of the time, effort and expense.

* * *

However, you will not be interested in my views, since the Bankhead plan is going to be tried. Many opponents in congress compared it with the Stevenson plan, which the British operated on rubber for a number of years, and which finally broke down and was abandoned.

There are some similarities, to be sure. But I do not think the Bankhead plan will fail for the same reasons as the rubber scheme.

The rubber crop was wholly an export crop. Whatever is not exported must be held for later sale if not destroyed. Thus the buyer of rubber looks at the total world stock, knows that it must be sold sooner or later, and figures his price accordingly.

It is somewhat the same with cotton, but here we have a large domestic demand, amounting to nearly half a normal crop. The foreign buyer, therefore, is not so sure that the surplus will eventually fall into his lap at his own price.

* * *

Again, the temporary high prices of rubber greatly stimulated rubber plantations in competing countries, and it was on this snag that the plan finally split.

There is some danger of the same thing happening with cotton, if we have a very small production and a very high price, but not so much. Areas where cotton can be cheaply and successfully grown are not large, and are well known.

The experts think, therefore, that our cotton trade is perfectly safe, if we keep the price of cotton anywhere within reason.

Nice Young People Indulge In Open, Unabashed Petting

(International News Service)

BOSTON, April 6.—"Petting" has come into the realm of "nice young people" and is not so secretive as formerly.

That was the conclusion reached by Dr. Douglas A. Thom, director of habit clinics and director of the Division of Mental Hygiene in the State Department of Mental Diseases.

Discussing "guiding the adolescent" for the Federal Labor Department Childrens' Bureau, Dr. Thom observes:

"We shall probably all agree that there is nothing particularly new about this practice of petting, except for the fact that it is now practiced more generally among those who are considered nice people, that it has become more of a pasttime and perhaps less well defined as a step leading to matrimony, and finally that it is no longer a practice reserved for the subdued lights of the family parlor, the country wayside or other secluded spots.

"In the automobile, on the beach, on the village green, in the city park, on the dance floor, on the public street, in the electric cars, and one might say wherever adolescents as a group can be seen, petting may be witnessed. There appears to be a casual indifference with many young people to what those about see or say regarding their activities in public."

Dr. Thom stated that today girls are not being divided into good and the bad, and boys are not putting their sweethearts on pedestals. "With the advent of the co-educational system in the schools, a more normal and natural everyday relationship between boys and girls was inevitable," he said.

"Seeing each other under prosaic circumstances of 8 o'clock classes, playing at the same games, working side by side, whether on class plays or on school annuals, studying the same subjects, boys and girls come into a clearer understanding of each other.

"This closer acquaintanceship between the sexes cannot but be regarded as wholesome. The element of romance with which young people wish to endow each other in their love relationships need not be lacking because of the better acquaintance of boys and girls in general. On the contrary, being adequately protected against endowing all girls or all boys with glamor, they should be better able to discriminate in their choice of the particular partner they seek."

England imports more than 42,000,000 rabbits each year.

Silent Wish By "Slowly Petrifying Boy" For Happiness On His Ninth Birthday

(International News Service)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 6.—A silent wish for happiness on his ninth birthday anniversary Monday was entertained today by Benny Hendricks, the "stone boy", as he continued his valiant battle against the rare malady which is slowly petrifying his body.

Although it was learned indirectly that the boy was responding to treatment, Dr. H. Alexander Smith, in charge of Benny at the Wilkes-Barre General hospital, declined to make an official report. At the same time he insisted that his order prohibiting visitors be carried out by attaches.

Dr. W. F. Stewart, dean of the Luzerne County Medical society, decrying the publicity given Benny's plight, declared the medical society would leave the case entirely in Dr. Smith's hands.

Meanwhile, efforts to locate Francis Wydolls, another victim of "myositis ossificans progressiva", or petrification of the body, were unavailing. It was believed his parents had taken him to the seclusion of a farm somewhere in Luzerne county after physicians here and in Philadelphia gave up hope for him three years ago.

WILL TOUR COUNTRY IN 1902 MODEL CAR

(International News Service)

DETROIT.—T. J. Ryan, of Highland Park, has applied for a license for his 1902 model Cadillac in which he plans to make a tour this summer.

The engine bears No. 3, and was purchased by Ryan 10 years ago in Port Huron, from administrators of the estate of Dr. E. H. Merriam, the original purchaser.

The car is equipped with solid rubber tires 28 years old, has a "gas mixer" in place of a carburetor, and the engine is placed under the seat. It is chain driven. The relic, described as a "roadster," has no windshield.

The car was designed by Henry M. Leland and Henry Ford prior to the birth of the latter's company.

COLLEGE REQUIRES ONE FEMALE SHARK

FORT WORTH, Texas.—Some of the odd requirements for a university have been revealed by the purchasing agent's office of Texas Christian University.

The school annually requires $91 worth of adhesive tape, 60 bottles of rubbing alohol, 25 pounds of talcum powder and 60 rolls of guaze for its athletic teams.

The science laboratory each year requires a large female shark and six little sharks, embalmed cats, frogs, grasshoppers, starfish, clams cow eyes, bees, snails and pigeons.

LETHAL GAS LEFT CAT WITH 8 LIVES

(International News Service)

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — William Clark's cat came back, after legally and offically losing, one of her nine lives, apparently in better health than before. Clark had taken the cat, Maggie, to police headquarters for extermination. She had been placed in a lethal gas chamber until pronounced dead, then thrown on the city dump.

How long she remained there before regaining conciousness was not determined, but Clark said it was his last attempt to get rid of her.

BAN GIRLS FROM SKATING

(International News Service)

PESTERZEBET, Hungary—Little girls here can go skating, but if they are caught on the rinks they'll be expelled from school. Recently, in a valiant effort to prevent "flirting," the school board placed a ban on girl students skating on the scores of ice rinks near this industrial city. School teachers were ordered to watch the rinks and report violations of the order.

To neglect gastric or duodenal ulcer is dangerous. All conditions due to hyper-acidity with symptoms of gas, nervous, sour, sick stomach, nausea, heartburn or heart pressure, loss of appetite of sleep, bloating, belching, constipation, should be attended to without delay. Soda, salts, laxatives, patent medicines and other temporary reliefs never correct these ailments. Many who were discouraged and without hope, have found quick positive relief, without liquid diet, loss of time or risk of money. The famous prescription used so successfully by Dr. J. W. RHUMBA DANCE CAUSED GIRL'S DEATH

(International News Service)

ROUEN, France.—"She danced to death," was the coroner's verdict.

Twenty-two year old France Frayard was out to have a good time on her Saturday night. So she went to a local dance-hall, and danced until three in the morning. Now she is dead.

"The rhumba caused her death," say local doctors. "Continous circular movement of the hips caused a cyst to burst and brought on internal poisoning," they stated.

ONLY WHITE MAN IN ASLASKA TOWN

(International News Service)

BOULDER, Colo.—Kenneth W. Stevenson, who graduated from the University of Colorado last year, has, in a few short months, become schoolteacher, phyician, sheriff and chief reindeer herder of the village of Togiak, Alaska. In other words, Stevenson explained in a letter to friends here, he is the only white man in his little settlement near the "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes."

"VENDOL" ENDED MR. YOUNG'S TAKING SODA AFTER MEALS

Was Victim Of Acid Indigestion A Long Time. Stomach Would Bloat With Gas, Felt Like A Lump Was In Throat. Says New Medicine Gave Marvelous Relief.

MR. EDWARD B. YOUNG
Works At Shenango Pottery Company

"Before I started on Vendol a few weeks ago, my stomach was in a bad condition as I was suffering from acid indigestion and the many symtoms this produced," said Mr. Edward B. Young of 320 Croton avenue, New Castle, to the Vendol Man in the New Castle Drug Company.

"Even a little bread and butter would cause a heavy feeling in my stomach just like there was a load in it. I would fill up with gas which made me very uncomfortable and sometimes there would be a burning sensation. About the only thing that would relieve this was baking soda and I certainly took quantities of this. After a while it seemed that soda no longer helped this condition. Often there would be an aching around my temples and I am sure this came from the stomach condition.

"My nerves were all to pieces so that I was restless all night long and would often get up around three or four o'clock in the morn-and walk around the house on account of this sleeplessness. My liver was sluggish and often there was a numb feeling in my hands and feet and I suffered from constipation every day. So many people were praising Vendol that I decided to try this medicine and it certainly has proven satisfactory in my case. I can now eat many things that I could not before, yet I am no longer tortured by that heavy feeling or the gas and sourness, and that thumping feeling in my temples has been relieved. The numbness in my hands and feet has passed off and it is really surprising how much more active and vigorous I feel since Vendol worked off my sluggish liver. I also took some of the Vendol Laxative Tablets and they are certainly wonderful.

Why not do as so many others right here in this city have done, that is, take Vendol and quickly get rid of those conditions troubling you? Come to the New Castle Drug Co., 31 E. Washington street, and let the Vendol Man explain how this new medicine will help you.

BIRD DOG CHASES STORES' CASH CARRIERS

(International News Service)

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb.—"Spike" is a good bird dog, but a nuisance around Scottsbluff department stores. Store owners have given up attempts to keep him from chasing overhead cash carriers and have appealed to police to take the dog into custody.

"Spike" is apparently unable to distinguish between the whirring cash cups and game birds. He rushes through store ailes in pursuit of speeding objects, paying no attention to customers who might get in his way.

LARGEST DREDGE IS UNDER CONSTRUCTION

(International News Service)

MARYSVILLE, Cal.—An important step in dredge gold mining was made at Hammonton, 12 miles east of here, with the start of construction of the world's largest dredger will begin work in June.

The dredge, steel hulled, will cost $750,000. It will penetrate 140 feet underground in the Hammontown goldfield which formerly was dredged to a depth of 80 feet.

The Yuba Consolidated Goldfield Co., with offices in San Francisco, is building the dredge.

MOUNTAIN HOME, Ark.—The shortest court term in the History of Baxter county was established here when the circuit court convened at 8:30 a. m. and closed at 11:30 the same morning. Court will not convene again until the September term.

Birth And Death Rates Are Lower

State Report Indicates Drop In Both During Past Year

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Pennsylvania's birth and death rates both struck new lows in 1933, the annual report of the department of health disclosed today.

The total number of births for the year was 156,839 resulting in a rate of 15.8 per cent per 1,000 population as compared with 16.3 in 1931 and 17.1 in 1932.

The total number of deaths from all causes, exclusive of still births, and the general death rate of 10.6 were by far the lowest recorded since complete records have been kept, the department reported.

Including 3,229 infant births and 6,106 still births, births during the year exceeded deaths by only 37,610, bringing the state's population closer to a stationary level than ever before.

Infant mortality touched a new minimum for the year, the board reported, with a rate of 52 per 1,000 live births. The report pointed out that in earlier years deaths under one year comprised nearly a fourth of all deaths.

Lawrence County Farms And Farmers

By H. R. McCulloch, County Agent

CORN-HOG PROGRAM

W. B. Flory, in charge of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration office in Pennsylvania, will discuss the corn-hog program of the adjustment administration at a meeting in Lawrence county Friday evening, April 13. The exact location of the meeting will be announced later.

All farmers interested in the program are urged to attend this meeting as Mr. Flory will be in position to answer questions relative to the program.

Farmers who grow 10 acres or more of corn for grain purposes or who grow any hogs are eligible to receive the benefits offered by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration if they sign a contract.

MODIFIED SOD METHODS IN ORCHARDS IS BEST

A modified sod treatment of orchard soils is indicated as the best method by expediments conducted by department of horticulture at the Pennsylvania State college. The results do not encourage the use of clean cultivation nor are they favorable to long continued sod, even when supplemented with annual applications of nitrogenous fertilizer.

A soil containing a liberal supply of organic matter has proved to be most desirable, since this condition assures greater moisture supply, promotes growth, and improves the yield. Supplying adequate plant food, providing sufficient moisture, and maintaining satisfactory growing conditions need not be a difficult task under this system.

Two crops, fruit trees and sod, are grown in a single season. This has required a liberal supply of available plant food, which in general orchard practice has been provided in the form of a nitrogenous fertilizer. Where sod has been continued year after year, it became the more aggressive in utilizing the fertilizer and tree growth was checked.

Now the feeding of the two crops is recommended as follows: applying a nitrogen fertilizer for the trees and other fertilizers for the sod to build up the humus content of the soil. A treatment, similar to that given in a general farm rotation, consisting of superphosphate and lime, where needed, is considered most satisfactory. Applications at different times is not involved since the needs of both crops can be satisfied in a complete fertilizer. The amounts can be varied according to the response in growth.

This method of management will stimulate both tree and sod growth, provided the sod is harrowed each spring to destroy part of the sod. The decay of this sod will improve the physical condition of the soil. Both legumes and grasses can be used in this system.

WINTER INJURY REDUCES GRAIN CROP PROSPECTS

Wheat looks very badly this spring in many fields. Some of the wheat will come along and may make a fair crop, depending somewhat on future weather.

It is sometimes suggested that spring barley or oats be drilled on wheat fields for which there seems to be little hope. Unless the field is disked or thoroughly harrowed before sowing spring grain, however, the results are likely to be poor.

In most cases the cheapest and most satisfactory plan will be to sow the clover or alfalfa on the wheat field as usual and harvest any surviving wheat. Where the wheat is very thin or dead the clover usually will come along very rapidly and often will make a cutting of hay in August. Weeds may get ahead of the clover where the wheat has been winter-killed. Then a clipping with the mower set high to avoid cutting much of the clover will be necessary.

FILTHY FEED CAUSES TROUBLE FOR CHICKS

Disease infection and parasitic infestation are likely to result when chicks pick up feed contaminated with droppings and filth.

For this reason, it is a good practice to place both grain and mash in hoppers so constructed as to prevent the chicks from wasting or contaminating their feed. Plans for a practical type of hopper are contained in the Pennsylvania State college extension circular No. 131, "Use Clean Feed to Grow Healthy Pullets" which may be obtained from the Agricultural Extension office, 9 Dean block, New Castle.

Placing all feed containers on wire-covered frames prevents the chicks from picking up contaminated feed from the floor. Feed which spills from the hopper falls under the wire and can be removed when the house is cleaned.

Creel Is Given Patent Right

New Castle Man Granted Patent Right On Curtain Stretcher

(Special To The News)

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Housewives need no longer be subjected to the old annoyances attendant with washing curtains if all that is said about Isaiah Creel's invention, just granted a patent, is true. That the New Castle inventor's creation received official sanction from the Patent office was learned today.

Creel embodied five original ideas or improvements, all of which were upheld by department examiners, to make his device practical. The patent has been pending since May 27, 1933, when the application was filed here.

The Patent office announcement makes no mention of an assignment of commercial rights.

National Farm Outlook

By ARTHUR H. JENKINS
Editor, The Farm Journal
Written For Central Press and New Castle News.

Opposition to the Bankhead bill for limiting the sales of cotton will probably not be enough to prevent its passage by congress, and it will doubtless be law by the time you read this. While I think the plan will be effective in reducing the production of cotton, for a year or two at least, it does not impress me as very skillfully conceived.

The purpose of all cotton legislation, of course, is to increase the incomes of cotton growers, and it is generally agreed that to do this we must cut down production until most of the abnormal supply from past years is used up. To do this we have had last year's plow-up campaign, loans for holding cotton on the farm, this year's acreage reduction sign-up, and now this tax limit on the amount of cotton that can be ginned.

It has always seemed to me that this huge and intricate machinery was unnecessary. If a simple excise tax were placed on all cotton at the time of sale, the tax paid back to the grower on an allotted number of bales, representing the cotton we use in this country, and the tax refunded to exporters on all cotton sold abroad, it seems to me that we would get all the desirable results we want at one-hundredth of the time, effort and expense.

• • •

However, you will not be interested in my views, since the Bankhead plan is going to be tried. Many opponents in congress compared it with the Stevenson plan, which the British operated on rubber for a number of years, and which finally broke down and was abandoned.

There are some similarities, to be sure. But I do not think the Bankhead plan will fail for the same reasons as the rubber scheme.

The rubber crop was wholly an export crop. Whatever is not exported must be held for later sale if not destroyed. Thus the buyer of rubber looks at the total world stock, knows that it must be sold sooner or later, and figures his price accordingly.

It is somewhat the same with cotton, but here we have a large domestic demand, amounting to nearly half a normal crop. The foreign buyer, therefore, is not so sure that the surplus will eventually fall into his lap at his own price.

• • •

Again, the temporary high prices of rubber greatly stimulated rubber plantations in competing countries, and it was on this snag that the plan finally split.

There is some danger of the same thing happening with cotton, if we have a very small production and a very high price, but not so much. Areas where cotton can be cheaply and successfully grown are not large, and are well known.

The experts think, therefore, that our cotton trade is perfectly safe, if we keep the price of cotton anywhere within reason.

Nice Young People Indulge In Open, Unabashed Petting

(International News Service)

BOSTON, April 6.—"Petting" has come into the realm of "nice young people" and is not so secretive as formerly.

That was the conclusion reached by Dr. Douglas A. Thom, director of habit clinics and director of the Division of Mental Hygiene in the State Department of Mental Diseases.

Discussing "guiding the adolescent" for the Federal Labor Department Childrens' Bureau, Dr. Thom observes:

"We shall probably all agree that there is nothing particularly new about this practice of petting, except for the fact that it is now practiced more generally among those who are considered nice people, that it has become more of a pasttime and perhaps less well defined as a step leading to matrimony, and finally that it is no longer a practice reserved for the subdued lights of the family parlor, the country wayside or other secluded spots.

"In the automobile, on the beach, on the village green, in the city park, on the dance floor, on the public street, in the electric cars, and one might say wherever adolescents as a group can be seen, petting may be witnessed. There appears to be a casual indifference with many young people to what those about see or say regarding their activities in public."

Dr. Thom stated that today girls are not being divided into good and the bad, and boys are not putting their sweethearts on pedestals. "With the advent of the co-educational system in the schools, a more normal and natural everyday relationship between boys and girls was inevitable," he said.

"Seeing each other under prosaic circumstances of 8 o'clock classes, playing at the same games, working side by side, whether on class plays or on school annuals, studying the same subjects, boys and girls come into a clearer understanding of each other.

"This closer acquaintanceship between the sexes cannot but be regarded as wholesome. The element of romance with which young people wish to endow each other in their love relationships need not be lacking because of the better acquaintance of boys and girls in general. On the contrary, being adequately protected against endowing all girls or all boys with glamor, they should be better able to discriminate in their choice of the particular partner they seek."

National Rivers And Harbors Body For Local Waterway

Invite Backers Of Project To Attend Conference In Washington April 28

Will Urge President To Construct Canal At Earliest Convenience

By ARTHUR C. WIMER
Special Washington Correspondent, New Castle News

WASHINGTON, Apr. 6.—The Beaver-Mahoning waterway has been selected by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress as one of a special few to be recommended for immediate development to President Roosevelt, Public Works Administrator Ickes, and both houses of Congress, soon after the National Congress convention here April 30.

Announcement of the selection came today from Colonel Clarence B. Douglas, executive vice-president of the National Congress.

At the same time Col. Douglas, extended an invitation to backers of the Beaver-Mahoning to come to Washington April 28 for a special conference with officials of the National Congress, to be devoted exclusively to a discussion of plans for recommendation of the canal which would serve the Youngstown area.

Is Sound Project.

"We are tremendously interested in the Beaver-Mahoning," Col. Douglas declared, "and we know how vitally important it is to everyone in the Mahoning Valley. We believe it is one of the most meritorious projects approved by the army engineers and the house rivers and harbors committee. Therefore we have selected it as one of the projects to which we will devote special attention."

Recommendation by the National Congress means more than more approval of the project. The National Congress, major among waterway organizations, has for 30 years devoted itself to an untiring effort to establish a uniform and just system of waterway development in the United States. It has had the active support of President Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Calvin Coolidge, and Herbert Hoover.

Among affiliates of the present administration to support the National Congress are Vice-President John Garner, Representative J. J. Mansfield, of Texas, chairman of the house rivers and harbors committee; Representative Henry T. Rainey, speaker of the house; representative Riley Wilson, chairman of the house flood control committee; Representative John McDuffie, ranking Republican member of the house rivers and harbors committee; and a score of others whose influence as waterway backers is well known.

Aiding President.

The National Congress this year is taking an active part in mapping plans for the president's proposed nation-wide program on irrigation, navigation, flood control, hydro-electric power, reforestation, and prevention of soil erosion.

Representative Frank R. Reid, of Illinois, ranking Republican member of the house flood control committee, and president of the National Congress, has expressed his unqualified approval of the Beaver-Mahoning and has let it be known that he strongly favors its inclusion for immediate development under nationwide plan if the program is approved by congress.

Col. Dougles, in extending the invitation to the special conference, urges that Beaver-Mahoning backers come prepared to present to the resolutions committee of the national congress compete data regarding the canal and the effects of its development.

After the convention of the National Congress has adjourned, the resolutions committee will present to President Roosevelt and Administrator Ickes personally, and to the president's cabinet board for the proposed program, an unqualified recommendation that the Beaver-Mahoning and the other especially selected projects be developed at once.

How large this selected list of projects will be was not known today by Col. Dougles. It will not be large, however, he said, and will include only a few of the projects approved by army engineers and the house rivers and harbors committee.

AROUND CITY HALL

Police chronology for 24 hours ending 3:30 p. m. April 5: 16 arrests, on charges as follows: violation of parking law 9, drunkenness 3 and suspicion 4.

Indications are that an attempt to hi-jack another "slot machine" occurred at the Coney Island lunch when two men tried to remove the machine. Police were called and detectives hurried to the Washington street business place. Several days ago a machine was taken from a seventh ward restaurant.

City Treasurer Louis McClung always looks forward to the city coffers being fattened considerably before the April showers have brought May flowers. The taxes paid by the various industries here reach a considerable amount and they make it a point to pay within the time allotted for the one per cent discount.

No doubt, housewives are wondering when the tin can collectors will be around. It will not be long now. The city proposes to purchase new equipment and when the trucks come into possession of the city Howard Phillips, head of the garbage collection department, does not expect to experience any difficulty getting rid of the tin cans quickly, he declared.

There has been a drop in auto accidents of a minor nature here recently...Some of the traffic signs are in need of repair...J. D. Alexander, parks superintendent, will soon look over spots where baseball diamonds can be improved...Contagion here has taken a drop, according to health officials.

Reports current here says Ringling Bros. will show here this summer. It is said they have already purchased feed for the animals from a local businessman and it is natural to presume they will show on the site where the Rosena furnace formerly stood.

Report that Ringling Bros., is to show here recalls the big storm which swept this section when they last showed here (Scotland Lane). People lost no time scurrying home and some of the circus folk felt uneasy. The circus had a difficult time pulling out of the mud.

Director of city finance, Albert Hoyland stepped up to bat yesterday and delivered a hit, that is, financially, when he said "there has been a substantial increase in city tax payments each month this year." In fact, he followed this information with a statement that he had compared the city tax payments for the first three months of 1933 and found that the payments for the corresponding period of this year show the payments have been more than double.

A man who gave the name of "George Gorman" is a guest of Sheriff Eddie Pritchard for a 10 days period. He was sent there by Mayor Mayne. The real purpose in sending him there was to give Bertillion Officer McMullen a chance to check up on "Gorman," who strolled into an East street building. He was arrested after he acted suspiciously, it is said. He is alleged to have remarked in a cell: "I could easily get out of this jail," and the officers started an investigation as a result.

Dealers Must Get Livestock Permits

Checkup To Be Made On Those Who Have Failed To Comply With Law

HARRISBURG, Apr. 6.— Many livestock dealers who were licensed under the State law to sell livestock in Pennsylvania in 1933, have failed to take out 1934 licenses, according to records in the bureau of animal industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Bureau officials are advising all such dealers that to continue in business, they must be licensed unless they now come under one of the specific exemption provisions. The 1933 licenses were not good after December 31, 1933.

No fee is charged for a livestock dealer's license but a severe penalty is provided for disregarding the law.

A special check-up of all delinquent livestock dealers to determine their standing under the State law, will be made by field agents of the bureau of animal industry. In the meantime, those who have not procured their 1934 license, are warned to do so at once.

Always Let Wife Have Last Word

(International News Service)

TARENTUM, Pa., Apr. 6.— "Let her have the last word"—is the advice of L. G. Murray, a "veteran" in the marriage business, to husbands who would have wedded bliss.

Murray, 87, might well be classed as an authority on marital affairs having just celebrated his 65th wedding anniversary.

"Well," Murray advises, "you known every woman likes to be boss at times and when she gets into an argument she must have the last word. The best way to keep peace is to pay no attention to her—let her have the last syllable."

APPLES OF STATE BRING HIGH PRICES

HARRISBURG, Apr. 6.—Pennsylvania apple growers received a premium price for their 1933 crop of ten cents a bushel or more over the average return to growers in any other leading apple state, records in the Pennsylvania bureau of markets, indicate. This is explained as due to the high quality of Pennsylvania fruit, to excellent home markets, to favorable demand from other states and to good prices received in foreign markets due to careful grading and certification.

Birth Rate In State Falls To New Low Mark

HARRISBURG, April 6— Pennsylvania's birth rate has declined to a point where the statisticians want to be sure their figures are correct.

On the basis of reports made to the bureau of vital statistics in the State Department of Health only 156,839 children were born in 1933 That, the statisticians say, is a rate of 15.8 per 1000 population, the lowest on record.

If the present rate of decline is maintained they point out that in a few years the population of the State may become stationary.

In an effort to check possible errors, Dr. Emlyn Jones, chief of the statistics bureau, has written to 750 registrars directing a State wide birth registration survey.

Dr. Jones asked the registrars to checks all infant death certificates, under one year, against births to discover missing reports. A search of baptismal registers was asked.

A check also will be made on physicians, midwives and hospitals to make certain all births were reported. In sections where reporting formerly has been lax local registrars have been advised to conduct a house to house birth census.

"We are tremendously interested in the Beaver-Mahoning," Col. Douglas declared, "and we know how vitally important it is to everyone in the Mahoning Valley. We believe it is one of the most meritorious projects approved by the army engineers and the house rivers and harbors committee. Therefore we have selected it as one of the projects to which we will devote special attention."

Recommendation by the National Congress means more than more approval of the project. The National Congress, major among waterway organizations, has for 30 years devoted itself to an untiring effort to establish a uniform and just system of waterway development in the United States. It has had the active support of President Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Calvin Coolidge, and Herbert Hoover.

Among affiliates of the present administration to support the National Congress are Vice-President John Garner, Representative J. J. Mansfield, of Texas, chairman of the house rivers and harbors committee; Representative Henry T. Rainey, speaker of the house; rep-Resentative Riley Wilson, chairman of the house flood control committee; Representative John McDuffie, ranking Republican member of the house rivers and harbors committee; and a score of others whose influence as waterway backers is well known.

Aiding President.

The National Congress this year is taking an active part in mapping plans for the president's proposed nation-wide program on irrigation, navigation, flood control, hydro-electric power, reforestation, and prevention of soil erosion.

Representative Frank R. Reid, of Illinois, ranking Republican member of the house flood control committee, and president of the National Congress, has expressed his unqualified approval of the Beaver-Mahoning and has let it be known that he strongly favors its inclusion for immediate development under nationwide plan if the program is approved by congress.

Col. Dougles, in extending the invitation to the special conference, urges that Beaver-Mahoning backers come prepared to present to the resolutions committee of the national congress compete data regarding the canal and the effects of its development.

After the convention of the National Congress has adjourned, the resolutions committee will present to President Roosevelt and Administrator Ickes personally, and to the president's cabinet board for the proposed program, an unqualified recommendation that the Beaver-Mahoning and the other especially selected projects be developed at once.

How large this selected list of projects will be was not known today by Col. Dougles. It will not be large, however, he said, and will include only a few of the projects approved by army engineers and the house rivers and harbors committee.

AROUND CITY HALL

Police chronology for 24 hours ending 3:30 p. m. April 5: 16 arrests, on charges as follows: violation of parking law 9, drunkenness 3 and suspicion 4.

Indications are that an attempt to hi-jack another "slot machine" occurred at the Coney Island lunch when two men tried to remove the machine. Police were called and detectives hurried to the Washington street business place. Several days ago a machine was taken from a seventh ward restaurant.

City Treasurer Louis McClung always looks forward to the city coffers being fattened considerably before the April showers have brought May flowers. The taxes paid by the various industries here reach a considerable amount and they make it a point to pay within the time allotted for the one per cent discount.

No doubt, housewives are wondering when the tin can collectors will be around. It will not be long now. The city proposes to purchase new equipment and when the trucks come into possession of the city Howard Phillips, head of the garbage collection department, does not expect to experience any difficulty getting rid of the tin cans quickly, he declared.

There has been a drop in auto accidents of a minor nature here recently...Some of the traffic signs are in need of repair...J. D. Alexander, parks superintendent, will soon look over spots where baseball diamonds can be improved...Contagion here has taken a drop, according to health officials.

Reports current here says Ringling Bros. will show here this summer. It is said they have already purchased feed for the animals from a local businessman and it is natural to presume they will show on the site where the Rosena furnace formerly stood.

Report that Ringling Bros., is to show here recalls the big storm which swept this section when they last showed here (Scotland Lane). People lost no time scurrying home and some of the circus folk felt uneasy. The circus had a difficult time pulling out of the mud.

Director of city finance, Albert Hoyland stepped up to bat yesterday and delivered a hit, that is, financially, when he said "there has been a substantial increase in city tax payments each month this year." In fact, he followed this information with a statement that he had compared the city tax payments for the first three months of 1933 and found that the payments for the corresponding period of this year show the payments have been more than double.

A man who gave the name of "George Gorman" is a guest of Sheriff Eddie Pritchard for a 10 days period. He was sent there by Mayor Mayne. The real purpose in sending him there was to give Bertillion Officer McMullen a chance to check up on "Gorman." who strolled into an East street building. He was arrested after he acted suspiciously, it is said. He is alleged to have remarked in a cell: "I could easily get out of this jail." and the officers started an investigation as a result.

"Chipso is a double saver," says youthful mother of 8 children

"IT SAVES DRUDGERY AND IT SAVES THE CLOTHES"

Washing for eight children can be no small job, yet "I don't really mind it," smiles Mrs. George H. Hale.

Chipso's good suds SOAK dirt out. Hard rubbing is SAVED when you use CHIPSO. Yet Chipso is not harsh. "I have no trouble with colors fading," Mrs. Hale says. "We have used Chipso for years. It is as safe for the silk underwear and stockings as it is for the cotton pieces.

"Chipso suds are grand for dishwashing, too. They are not hard on my hands and they seem richer than other soaps."

Chipso is not adulterated with harsh, "dirt-cutting" ingredients. It speeds up your washday with RICHER SUDS that are SAFE. Don't endanger the clothes you have spent good money for by washing them in cheap flakes or strong granulated soaps and powders. Get a big box of Chipso from your grocer. At its low price, you will find it the best value in rich, safe soap on the market today.

Birth Rate In State Falls To New Low Mark

HARRISBURG, April 6— Pennsylvania's birth rate has declined to a point where the statisticians want to be sure their figures are correct.

On the basis of reports made to the bureau of vital statistics in the State Department of Health only 156,839 children were born in 1933 That, the statisticians say, is a rate of 15.8 per 1000 population, the lowest on record.

If the present rate of decline is maintained they point out that in a few years the population of the State may become stationary.

In an effort to check possible errors, Dr. Emlyn Jones, chief of the statistics bureau, has written to 750 registrars directing a State wide birth registration survey.

Dr. Jones asked the registrars to checks all infant death certificates, under one year, against births to discover missing reports. A search of baptismal registers was asked.

A check also will be made on physicians, midwives and hospitals to make certain all births were reported. In sections where reporting formerly has been lax local registrars have been advised to conduct a house to house birth census.

Dealers Must Get Livestock Permits

Checkup To Be Made On Those Who Have Failed To Comply With Law

HARRISBURG, Apr. 6.— Many livestock dealers who were licensed under the State law to sell livestock in Pennsylvania in 1933, have failed to take out 1934 licenses, according to records in the bureau of animal industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Bureau officials are advising all such dealers that to continue in business, they must be licensed unless they now come under one of the specific exemption provisions. The 1933 licenses were not good after December 31, 1933.

No fee is charged for a livestock dealer's license but a severe penalty is provided for disregarding the law.

A special check-up of all delinquent livestock dealers to determine their standing under the State law, will be made by field agents of the bureau of animal industry. In the meantime, those who have not procured their 1934 license, are warned to do so at once.

Always Let Wife Have Last Word

(International News Service)

TARENTUM, Pa., Apr. 6.— "Let her have the last word"—is the advice of L. G. Murray, a "veteran" in the marriage business, to husbands who would have wedded bliss.

Murray, 87, might well be classed as an authority on marital affairs having just celebrated his 65th wedding anniversary.

"Well," Murray advises, "you known every woman likes to be boss at times and when she gets into an argument she must have the last word. The best way to keep peace is to pay no attention to her—let her have the last syllable."

APPLES OF STATE BRING HIGH PRICES

HARRISBURG, Apr. 6.—Pennsylvania apple growers received a premium price for their 1933 crop of ten cents a bushel or more over the average return to growers in any other leading apple state, records in the Pennsylvania bureau of markets, indicate. This is explained as due to the high quality of Pennsylvania fruit, to excellent home markets, to favorable demand from other states and to good prices received in foreign markets due to careful grading and certification.

Delegations At Baptist Revival

Dr. Buswell Of Wheaton College Is Delivering The Evangelistic Sermons

The evangelistic services at the First Baptist church last night were featured by delegations from Sharon, Farrell, the Zion church and the Harmony church.

A number of pastors were present, and sitting on the platform, were called upon by the song leader, John Owens, to furnish a special musical number. They responded lustily to the delight of the congregation. Before his sermon Dr. Buswell led the congregation in the singing of choruses.

Tonight will be school night when the members of the Sunday school will gather in class delegations. The junior choir will sing. Dr. Buswell will speak on "Are the Young People of Today Worse Than Their Parents?". There will be no meeting on Saturday night. Dr. Buswell will speak to the Men's Bible class Sunday morning and will preach at 11 o'clock and at 7:30.

Hendricks Boy Continues Fight Against Disease

Silent Wish By "Slowly Petrifying Boy" For Happiness On His Ninth Birthday

(International News Service)

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., April 6.—A silent wish for happiness on his ninth birthday anniversary Monday was entertained today by Benny Hendricks, the "stone boy", as he continued his valiant battle against the rare malady which is slowly petrifying his body.

Although it was learned indirectly that the boy was responding to treatment, Dr. H. Alexander Smith, in charge of Benny at the Wilkes-Barre General hospital, declined to make an official report. At the same time he insisted that his order prohibiting visitors be carried out by attaches.

Dr. W. F. Stewart, dean of the Luzerne County Medical society, decrying the publicity given Benny's plight, declared the medical society would leave the case entirely in Dr. Smith's hands.

Meanwhile, efforts to locate Francis Wydolis, another victim of "myositis ossificans progressiva", or petrification of the body, were unavailing. It was believed his parents had taken him to the seclusion of a farm somewhere in Luzerne county after physicians here and in Philadelphia gave up hope for him three years ago.

WILL TOUR COUNTRY IN 1902 MODEL CAR

(International News Service)

DETROIT.—T. J. Ryan, of Highland Park, has applied for a license for his 1902 model Cadillac in which he plans to make a tour this summer.

The engine bears No. 3, and was purchased by Ryan 10 years ago in Port Huron, from administrators of the estate of Dr. E. H. Merriam, the original purchaser.

The car is equipped with solid rubber tires 28 years old, has a "gas mixer" in place of a carburetor, and the engine is placed under the seat. It is chain driven. The relic, described as a "roadster," has no windshield.

The car was designed by Henry M. Leland and Henry Ford prior to the birth of the latter's company.

COLLEGE REQUIRES ONE FEMALE SHARK

FORT WORTH, Texas.—Some of the odd requirements for a university have been revealed by the purchasing agent's office of Texas Christian University.

The school annually requires $91 worth of adhesive tape, 60 bottles of rubbing alohol, 25 pounds of talcum powder and 60 rolls of guaze for its athletic teams.

The science laboratory each year requires a large female shark and six little sharks, embalmed cats, frogs, grasshoppers, starfish, clams cow eyes, bees, snails and pigeons.

LETHAL GAS LEFT CAT WITH 8 LIVES

(International News Service)

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — William Clark's cat came back, after legally and offically losing, one of her nine lives, apparently in better health than before. Clark had taken the cat, Maggie, to police headquarters for extermination. She had been placed in a lethal gas chamber until pronounced dead, then thrown on the city dump.

How long she remained there before regaining conciousness was not determined, but Clark said it was his last attempt to get rid of her.

BAN GIRLS FROM SKATING

(International News Service)

PESTERZEBET, Hungary—Little girls here can go skating, but if they are caught on the rinks they'll be expelled from school. Recently, in a valiant effort to prevent "flirting," the school board placed a ban on girl students skating on the scores of ice rinks near this industrial city. School teachers were ordered to watch the rinks and report violations of the order.

RHUMBA DANCE CAUSED GIRL'S DEATH

(International News Service)

ROUEN, France.—"She danced to death," was the coroner's verdict.

Twenty-two year old France Fragard was out to have a good time on her Saturday night. So she went to a local dance-hall, and danced until three in the morning. Now she is dead.

"The rhumba caused her death," say local doctors. "Continous circular movement of the hips caused a cyst to burst and brought on internal poisoning," they stated.

"VENDOL" ENDED MR. YOUNG'S TAKING SODA AFTER MEALS

Was Victim Of Acid Indigestion A Long Time. Stomach Would Bloat With Gas, Felt Like A Lump Was In Throat. Says New Medicine Gave Marvelous Relief.

MR. EDWARD B. YOUNG
Works At Shenango Pottery Company

"Before I started on Vendol a few weeks ago, my stomach was in a bad condition as I was suffering from acid indigestion and the many symtoms this produced," said Mr. Edward B. Young of 820 Croton avenue, New Castle, to the Vendol Man in the New Castle Drug Company.

"Even a little bread and butter would cause a heavy feeling in my stomach just like there was a load in it. I would fill up with gas which made me very uncomfortable and sometimes there would be a burning sensation. About the only thing that would relieve this was baking soda and I certainly took quantities of this. After a while it seemed that soda no longer helped this condition. Often there would be an aching around my temples and I am sure this came from the stomach condition.

"My nerves were all to pieces so that I was restless all night long and would often get up around three or four o'clock in the morn- and walk around the house on account of this sleeplessness. My liver was sluggish and often there was a numb feeling in my hands and feet and I suffered from constipation every day. So many people were praising Vendol that I decided to try this medicine and it certainly has proven satisfactory in my case. I can now eat many things that I could not before, yet I am no longer tortured by that heavy feeling or the gas and sourness, and that thumping feeling in my temples has been relieved. The numbness in my hands and feet has passed off and it is really surprising how much more active and vigorous I feel since Vendol worked off my sluggish liver. I also took some of the Vendol Laxative Tablets and they are certainly wonderful.

Why not do as so many others right here in this city have done, that is, take Vendol and quickly get rid of those conditions troubling you? Come to the New Castle Drug Co., 31 E. Washington street, and let the Vendol Man explain how this new medicine will help you.

BIRD DOG CHASES STORES' CASH CARRIERS

(International News Service)

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb.—"Spike" is a good bird dog, but a nuisance around Scottsbluff department stores. Store owners have given up attempts to keep him from chasing overhead cash carriers and have appealed to police to take the dog into custody.

"Spike" is apparently unable to distinguish between the whirring cash cups and game birds. He rushes through store ailes in pursuit of speeding objects, paying no attention to customers who might get in his way.

The dredge, steel hulled, will cost $750,000. It will penetrate 140 feet underground in the Hammontown goldfield which formerly was dredged to a depth of 80 feet.

The Yuba Consolidated Goldfield Co., with offices in San Francisco, is building the dredge.

Birth And Death Rates Are Lower

State Report Indicates Drop In Both During Past Year

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Pennsylvania's birth and death rates both struck new lows in 1933, the annual report of the department of health disclosed today.

The total number of births for the year was 156,639 resulting in a rate of 15.8 per cent per 1,000 population as compared with 18.3 in 1931 and 17.1 in 1932.

The total number of deaths from all causes, exclusive of still births, and the general death rate of 10.6 were by far the lowest recorded since complete records have been kept, the department reported.

Including 8,229 infant births and 6,106 still births, births during the year exceeded deaths by only 37,610, bringing the state's population closer to a stationary level than ever before.

Infant mortality touched a new minimum for the year, the board reported, with a rate of 52 per 1,000 live births. The report pointed out that in earlier years deaths under one year comprised nearly a fourth of all deaths.

FIVE-YEAR PLAN

by Priscilla Hovey Wright

McClure Fiction

Illustration by Tom McCoy

It took Sue five years to prepare for the day when she could smash Corinne's happiness as ruthlessly as her own had been shattered.

"I was never ghastly at tennis," Sue replied levelly. "My ethics were at fault . . ."

FOR a moment as the train pulled out of the station leaving her alone on the platform Sue's heart jumped up to her throat. The instant she saw Corinne, however, sitting behind the wheel of a resplendent blue roadster, it went right back where it belonged.

Corinne had not changed a bit. Just as beautiful as ever, really a little more so. Coolly she submitted to Corinne's effusive embraces.

"You're just the same dear, funny little Sue," said Corinne. "I'd know you anywhere."

Sue knew she was far from the same. Five years ago, when she had last seen Corinne, she had been a scared, skinny little wretch, too frightened to do anything for herself. Now . . . . Well Corinne would find out for herself.

"Most of my friends do still recognize me," she said.

"She's not the same at all," came a low drawl. "Where are her neckties?"

This was from a young man in the rumble seat and Sue gave a start.

"Surely you remember Pokey," Corinne was saying.

Sue blinked. Phil Pollard, Corinne's brother. Most certainly she did not remember him in this lean young man. Why, five years ago Pokey Pollard had been the shyest, most unprepossessing looking individual she had ever known. He had been terribly dull at school, she recalled, and had been interested only in taking pictures of landscapes and animals. Phil must be her age, twenty-four. They were both two years younger than Corinne.

"I didn't know you," she said honestly. "You've changed."

"For better or for worse?" he demanded.

"It couldn't be for worse," she replied flippantly.

The man in the front seat laughed. Corinne laid her hand lightly on his shoulder.

"This," she said in the possessive tone Sue knew so well, "is Michael Stelling."

For some moments Sue had been conscious of his charm. He looked as if he had traveled a great deal, read a great deal, known a great many people and was secretly amused by it all. She could not tell at first glance whether he would be easy stealing or not. For of course she had come to take him from Corinne. She was going to steal Michael Stelling, just as five years ago Corinne had stolen Harley Grainger.

"So you wear neckties," he said.

"I used to," she admitted. "Corinne was quite keen about them at one time."

"Corinne in a necktie!" he exclaimed aghast.

"Oh, no," said Sue calmly. "She liked them for me."

The necktie constituted one of the many grievances against Corinne. "You look so adorable in suits and neckties. Do wear them," Corinne had often said by way of indirect command. Sue knew now that she had not looked adorable.

ON the way to the Pollard cottage Sue relaxed. It was comfortable to be with Phil again. Strange she had not thought he might be here.

"What have you been doing with yourself for five years?" he asked.

"Well, I went through college."

"Bravo! My degrees will have to be purely honorary. Doubtless you recall my weakness in the scholastic field."

"There's no Phi Beta Kappa key on my bussum," she told him, "but I did get by. And now I've got a job."

"Like it?"

"It's great!"

Impossible to tell in words just how wonderful it was.

"What have you been doing?" she added.

"It's a long and sorry tale," said Pokey.

"I've stood a good deal of woe in my life," said Sue. "Shoot!"

"Well, then," Pokey rubbed a long hand through his shock of hair. "The folks finally decided I would never be anything but a frosh and got me a job. It was the first of many jobs. Seventeen in as many months. Now I'm sitting pretty, spiritually if not financially. I take pictures for a chap who writes up articles for nature magazines and gives lectures. He's a professor, but we click great."

"I should think that would be just the thing," said Sue eagerly. "You were always taking pictures. I remember your dark room in the attic when you lived in Palmer."

"Do you?" said Phil. "Do you, really?" Then he suddenly changed the subject. "What do you think of the Acquisition?" he asked lightly, with a nod in the direction of Stelling.

"It seems nice enough," answered Sue casually.

"It does," agreed Phil. "It comes from Denver. Corinne met it abroad. Do you think it'll graft into the family tree?"

"They do so many wonderful things now," said Sue, and giggled.

Michael Stelling turned.

"I don't like the sound of that laughter," he said. "They're keeping something from us, Corinne."

"Let them alone," said Corinne carelessly. "They were always hanging back whispering together even as children."

"But I don't like it," declared Stelling.

Thereafter he half turned toward them and talked animatedly and Sue played up to him. Surprising how easy it was. The roadster commenced to shoot over the dusty country road without consideration for bumps and suddenly Corinne said petulantly, "You take the wheel, Mike. My head is splitting."

Sue's lips quirked. Same old Corinne. Couldn't bear to yield center stage to anybody.

CAREFULLY Sue dressed for dinner that night. She was furious with herself as she thought of the years of door-mat duty she had done for Corinne. What a little fool she had been. It ought to have been plain enough that Corinne had been afraid to compete with girls as pretty and clever as she. That was why she had invited dear, funny little Sue to meet Michael Stelling. Nothing to fear from Sue. Sue and brother Phil would be such a safe, neutral background against which she would shine.

Oh, she knew the role she was supposed to play, but she had not realized it until a night five years ago. Corinne had been away and Harley Grainger had come to Palmer for a visit. He had been a tall, fair boy of twenty with a contagious sort of smile. When he had actually invited her to go to a dance she had been transported to a state of delight she had never known. Then Corinne had suddenly come home, had unceremoniously invited herself to go with them, had appeared in a new and sophisticated gown which made Sue's girlish evening dress seem ridiculous and shabby, had tossed her curls at Harley, until he quite forgot about Sue and danced practically the entire evening with Corinne. All the next week Corinne had pursued him. The second week she was ridiculing him and complaining because he did not let her alone.

That was what had hurt the most—the fact that Corinne had not wanted him. Nobody suspected what had happened, not even Phil who had saved her from a desperate tearful withdrawal the night of the party by dutifully and dully dancing with her.

AFTER dinner Corinne proposed contract. Rather, she ordered it.

"Mike has to have his contract every day," she said. "It's terrible, Sue. But maybe you're still playing bridge. Are you?"

"I play a little," said Sue mildly.

"All I hope," sighed Phil, "is that you're better at it than you used to be at parcheesi. You always lost."

"He knows darn well, why," said Sue to herself.

"The girl's clever," Phil exclaimed triumphantly at the end of an hour's playing. "Chalk up another rubber."

"All she needed was proper fodder for her brains," said Stelling. "Parcheesi, indeed! Shall we change?"

"Oh, let's stop," said Corinne. "I've played so much lately the cards all look alike to me."

"So it would seem, my dear. So it would seem," said Stelling jovially.

Sue looked cautiously at Corinne's face. Yes, there at the corners of the lips, the place where she had always looked for them, were the little hard lines of disapproval. It was now her cue to agree—to say, "Yes, let's stop." But she said instead:

"Let's have another rubber. I'd like to play with Mr. Stelling. I've never played with a real contract fiend."

The lines at the corners of Corinne's mouth deepened, but she merely said lightly.

"Just one, then."

Stelling and Sue won the rubber. Sue could play her cards well when she had ten spots. When she had a picture gallery she became inspired.

"Sa-ay, you're good," said Stelling. "The Perfect Partner."

"Perfect cards, I'd say," said Corinne, rising from the table abruptly.

THE week that followed was a glorious one with days of lavish sunshine and water of an enticing blue.

The lines were very often at the corners of Corinne's mouth, now. Calmly and pleasantly Sue continued to do the things Corinne did not want to do, things that Corinne did not do well. Corinne looked simply beautiful in her bathing suit or rather, all of her bathing suits, but Corinne had never advanced beyond an elementary breast stroke and a splash. So Sue, slim and erect in a yard or so of last year's blue jersey, swam out to the raft and dived backwards and forwards to the enthusiastic applause of Michael Stelling, who himself gave exhibitions of a similar nature. But Corinne did not applaud. She looked bored and petulant and, what angered Sue, puzzled.

"She must know what I'm driving at," thought Sue, "and why I'm driving at it."

Yet on Friday afternoon Sue surprised that look of bewilderment in Corinne's eyes again. It looked too genuine to be faked. The occasion was tennis for which Corinne did not care. Sue and Michael were playing with Claire and Fred Lawrence. Corinne, a summer cloud in pink chiffon, sat on a bench and watched.

"You're as red and steamy as a fresh cooked lobster," she said languidly as Sue came over to the bench at the end of the first set. "Tell me, when did you have all this intensive practice? You used to be as ghastly at tennis as I was, even worse, for I almost always beat you."

"I was never ghastly at tennis," Sue replied levelly. "My ethics were at fault, that was all. I've corrected them."

Then came the look of bewilderment in Corinne's eyes.

Before the second set was over Corinne left. After the match was finished, with Sue and Michael victorious, the Lawrences hurried away for a dinner engagement. Sue and Michael sauntered home through the woods. It was Michael's suggestion.

"A little longer, but cooler," he said. Then: "You played like a whiz."

"I was better than usual," she answered lightly. "I guess I had the urge."

"You must have quite a few urges," the man replied. "You seem to do most everything well."

Sue felt herself tighten.

"You're not at all what I expected," Michael added. "Of course, accuracy is not one of Corinne's virtues, but she usually gets something right."

"People change in five years' time, you know."

"Has Corinne changed such a great deal?"

Sue hesitated.

"No-o. But Corinne was always ahead of the rest of us. No awkward age or anything like that."

"Yes, Corinne is beautiful," Stelling said slowly. "I met her in an art gallery in Paris. I . . . well, Corinne certainly bowls you over, at first."

"Let's go along," Sue said abruptly.

With a shrug of his shoulders he quickened his steps, turned, and where the foliage grew thick, extended his hands.

"Yo, heave, ho," he said carelessly.

She gave him her hands. A mistake, she knew, the moment she had done so, for suddenly he had her in his arms and his lips were hungrily on hers.

It was the great moment, the moment for which she had rehearsed for five years. She had stolen Corinne's man! Yet there was only panic surging in her, panic and disgust.

"I must say you're ardent, Sue," the man said, releasing her.

"You shouldn't have done that," she told him tensely.

A slow, angry flush came to his cheeks.

"You seemed to, shall I say, call for it?"

"My error, then," Sue said stiffly.

"Not at all. Mine," he replied.

They walked home in silence and found Corinne, a somewhat peevish appearing pink cloud, waiting for them on the porch. Ostensibly she was reading but Sue knew she had been waiting for them. Phil was reading, too, but he looked up at their approach.

"One look at you two is enough to keep me from tennis," he drawled. "The Finish, The End of the Trail, The Last Lap . . ."

"The Last Straw," contributed Sue with a weary smile. "I don't think I'll go to the dance tonight, Corinne. I'm a bit done up."

She was restless and irritable and thinking what a fool she had been. Why on earth had she acted like Outraged Virginity! She wished she could go home that night.

AFTER a supper which she scarcely tasted Sue went out on the porch. Corinne was upstairs dressing. Suddenly she called down.

"Oh, Sue, dear. Be a good girl and come up here a second, will you?"

Sue went slowly up the stairs to Corinne's room. Corinne needed no assistance. She stood there, a queen in an evening dress of lace that fell in soft foamy folds to her feet. Involuntarily Sue exclaimed:

"Corinne, you're lovely!"

"I don't feel lovely," said Corinne sharply and somewhat breathlessly and Sue saw that her hands were shaking and that her mouth was tremulous.

"I—I feel simply vile, Sue."

Tears were now in the lovely blue eyes and the shoulders drooped. Corinne looked like a puzzled, unhappy child. And Sue became automatically the faithful, competent servitor.

"Don't cry," she counselled, putting her arms about Corinne's shoulders.

"I want Mike so badly," said Corinne, making an effort to check her tears.

Sue answered steadily. "You have him."

"I'm not sure," Corinne looked unhappily at Sue. "Mike's clever and he likes clever people."

"He likes beautiful people, too," Sue answered smoothly. "He told me all about meeting you in an art gallery and about how you bowled him over."

The main performance was not going at all like the dress rehearsals. In the dress rehearsals Sue felt no pity but relentlessly reminded Corinne of all the injuries done her. Why, she had injured Corinne far more than Corinne had injured her! They had all injured Corinne, spoiling her so that at twenty-six she was still nothing but a child, a very beautiful child who must always have her own way. Poor Corinne. Life wasn't going to be a bit happy for her as time went on!

"Corinne," said Sue abruptly, "do you remember a boy named Harley Grainger?"

She watched closely as Corinne powdered away all traces of tears. Corinne was not clever enough to dissemble. Her emotions were always to be read in her face, in every line of her body. Corinne was not dissembling. She was honestly trying to answer Sue's question. Suddenly she brightened.

"Why, yes," she said. "I remember him. Heavens, what a pest he was. Is he around now?"

"Not that I know of," replied Sue tersely. "You'd better get along. You're late already."

She sat in the room after Corinne had gone. To think that for five years she had spent a really vast amount of time planning to pay Corinne for something that Corinne knew nothing about. Corinne was so well protected, so bountifully swaddled in selfishness that it was impossible for her to do any wrong.

SUE rose resolutely, slipped off her clothes, got into her bathing suit and crept down the stairs. It was good to steal silently into the water; fun to cut the green blackness of it with the white of one's arms. She felt suddenly gay and powerful as she swam, now lazily, now with a joyful burst of speed.

When the cramp came in her leg, she experienced at first no panic. She would float until the confounded thing went. But it did not go. It seemed to grow worse. The agony of it made her entire body contract. She gave a little broken cry of pain and terror and the green black water slipped over her face. Struggling, she came to the surface again and heard the quiet words:

"Buck up, Sue. Put your hand on me somewhere."

It was Phil! Good old Poky.

Unprotesting, although the cramp was amost gone, she let Phil take her in his arms as he waded to the shore. She was tired and she knew she was going to cry. She did cry and Phil said nothing but magically produced his sweater from somewhere in the general surroundings, wrapped her in it and sat reassuringly near. At length when she lay quiet, he asked softly,

"Did you want him, Sue?"

"Want who?"

"The Acquisition."

"No!"

Phil sighed happily.

"I wasn't sure," he said. "I hoped not but in case you did I kept in the rear as much as possible. Tonight I decided things had gone wrong. Once before when things went wrong with you I stuck around, I remember. When you went in the water I went in, too."

So he and not Corinne had remembered about Harley Grainger!

"You certainly made Corinne wiggle," commented Phil cheerfully. "And I don't blame you after all you stood from her. But I've found she doesn't do any more than wiggle. It's probably taken a lot more out of you than out of her."

"Yes," said Sue soberly. "It has. I'm sorry I bothered."

"Do you know, Sue," he exclaimed seriously, "you've changed a lot."

"Have I really?"

"You've no idea! I always knew you were sweet. But you're, well, you're marvelous now! I want to tell you about this professor that I work for. Jackson's his name and he has a wife who sometimes comes along with us. She's a good sport. You'd like her. I suppose you think quite a bit of the job, though?"

"Yes," Sue hesitated. "Yes, I do like the job a lot. But it must be fun swushing through swamps in rubber boots. Does—does Mrs. Jackson do that?"

"She does. She's a grand little swusher."

"I'll have to think about it, Phil—maybe a long time."

Sue, warm and relaxed in the sweater, smiled as his arm went around her. She and Pokey in the background! Just where Corinne wanted them. Just where they wanted to be.

"Of course," said Pokey. "I can't expect to get a medal for life saving and to get engaged all in one night. Take your time, my girl, only let me know as soon as you get through thinking."

FIVE-YEAR PLAN

It took Sue five years to prepare for the day when she could smash Corinne's happiness as ruthlessly as her own had been shattered.

"I was never ghastly at tennis," Sue replied levelly. "My ethics were at fault . . ."

FOR a moment as the train pulled out of the station leaving her alone on the platform Sue's heart jumped up to her throat. The instant she saw Corinne, however, sitting behind the wheel of a resplendent blue roadster, it went right back where it belonged.

Corinne had not changed a bit. Just as beautiful as ever, really a little more so. Coolly she submitted to Corinne's effusive embraces.

"You're just the same dear, funny little Sue," said Corinne. "I'd know you anywhere."

Sue knew she was far from the same. Five years ago, when she had last seen Corinne, she had been a scared, skinny little wretch, too frightened to do anything for herself. Now . . . Well Corinne would find out for herself.

"Most of my friends do still recognize me," she said.

"She's not the same at all," came a low drawl. "Where are her neckties?"

"Like it?"

"It's great!"

Impossible to tell in words just how wonderful it was.

"What have you been doing?" she added.

"It's a long and sorry tale," said Pokey.

"I've stood a good deal of woe in my life," said Sue. "Shoot!"

"Well, then," Pokey rubbed a long hand through his shock of hair. "The folks finally decided I would never be anything but a frosh and got me a job. It was the first of many jobs. Seventeen in as many months. Now I'm sitting pretty, spiritually if not financially. I take pictures for a chap who writes up articles for nature magazines and gives lectures. He's a professor, but we click great."

"I should think that would be just the thing," said Sue eagerly. "You were always taking pictures. I remember your dark room in the attic when you lived in Palmer."

"Do you?" said Phil. "Do you, really?" Then he suddenly changed the subject. "What do you think of the Acquisition?" he asked lightly, with a nod in the direction of Stelling.

"It seems nice enough," answered Sue casually.

Corinne was so well protected, so bountifully swaddled in selfishness that it was impossible for her to do any wrong.

SUE rose resolutely, slipped off her clothes, got into her bathing suit and crept down the stairs. It was good to steal silently into the water; fun to cut the green blackness of it with the white of one's arms. She felt suddenly gay and powerful as she swam, now lazily, now with a joyful burst of speed.

When the cramp came in her leg, she experienced at first no panic. She would float until the confounded thing went. But it did not go. It seemed to grow worse. The agony of it made her entire body contract. She gave a little broken cry of pain and terror and the green black water slipped over her face. Struggling, she came to the surface again and heard the quiet words:

"Buck up, Sue. Put your hand on me somewhere."

It was Phil! Good old Poky.

Unprotesting, although the cramp was amost gone, she let Phil take her in his arms as he waded to the shore. She was tired and she knew she was going to cry. She did cry and Phil said nothing but magically produced his sweater from somewhere in the general surroundings, wrapped her in it and sat reassuringly near. At length when she lay quiet, he asked softly,

"Did you want him, Sue?"

"Want who?"

"The Acquisition."

"No!"

Phil sighed happily.

"I wasn't sure," he said. "I hoped not but in case you did I kept in the rear as much as possible. Tonight I decided things had gone wrong. Once before when things went wrong with you I stuck around, I remember. When you went in the water I went in, too."

So he and not Corinne had remembered about Harley Grainger!

"You certainly made Corinne wiggle," commented Phil cheerfully. "And I don't blame you after all you stood from her. But I've found she doesn't do any more than wiggle. It's probably taken a lot more out of you than out of her."

"Yes," said Sue soberly. "It has. I'm sorry I bothered."

"Do you know, Sue," he exclaimed seriously, "you've changed a lot."

"Have I really?"

"You've no idea! I always knew you were sweet. But you're, well, you're marvelous now! I want to tell you about this professor that I work for. Jackson's his name and he has a wife who sometimes comes along with us. She's a good sport. You'd like her. I suppose you think quite a bit of the job, though?"

"Yes," Sue hesitated. "Yes, I do like the job a lot. But it must be fun swushing through swamps in rubber boots. Does—does Mrs. Jackson do that?"

"She does. She's a grand little swusher."

"I'll have to think about it, Phil—maybe a long time."

Sue, warm and relaxed in the sweater, smiled as his arm went around her. She and Pokey in the background! Just where Corinne wanted them. Just where they wanted to be.

"Of course," said Pokey. "I can't expect to get a medal for life saving and to get engaged all in one night. Take your time, my girl, only let me know as soon as you get through thinking."

National Rivers And Harbors Body For Local Waterway

Invite Backers Of Project To Attend Conference In Washington April 28

Will Urge President To Construct Canal At Earliest Convenience

By ARTHUR C. WIMER
Special Washington Correspondent, New Castle News

WASHINGTON, Apr. 6.—The Beaver-Mahoning waterway has been selected by the National Rivers and Harbors Congress as one of a special few to be recommended for immediate development to President Roosevelt, Public Works Administrator Ickes, and both houses of Congress, soon after the National Congress convention here April 30.

Announcement of the selection came today from Colonel Clarence B. Douglas, executive vice-president of the National Congress.

At the same time Col. Douglas, extended an invitation to backers of the Beaver-Mahoning to come to Washington April 28 for a special conference with officials of the National Congress, to be devoted exclusively to a discussion of plans for recommendation of the canal which would serve the Youngstown area.

Is Sound Project.

"We are tremendously interested in the Beaver-Mahoning," Col. Douglas declared, "and we know how vitally important it is to everyone in the Mahoning Valley. We believe it is one of the most meritorious projects approved by the army engineers and the house rivers and harbors committee. Therefore we have selected it as one of the projects to which we will devote special attention."

Recommendation by the National Congress means more than more approval of the project. The National Congress, major among waterway organizations, has for 30 years devoted itself to an untiring effort to establish a uniform and just system of waterway development in the United States. It has had the active support of President Theodore Roosevelt, William H. Taft, Woodrow Wilson, Calvin Coolidge, and Herbert Hoover.

Among affiliates of the present administration to support the National Congress are Vice-President John Garner, Representative J. J. Mansfield, of Texas, chairman of the house rivers and harbors committee; Representative Henry T. Rainey, speaker of the house; rep-Resentative Riley Wilson, chairman of the house flood control committee; Representative John McDuffie, ranking Republican member of the house rivers and harbors committee; and a score of others whose influence as waterway backers is well known.

Aiding President.

The National Congress this year is taking an active part in mapping plans for the president's proposed nation-wide program on irrigation, navigation, flood control, hydro-electric power, reforestation, and prevention of soil erosion.

Representative Frank R. Reid, of Illinois, ranking Republican member of the house flood control committee, and president of the National Congress, has expressed his unqualified approval of the Beaver-Mahoning and has let it be known that he strongly favors its inclusion for immediate development under nationwide plan if the program is approved by congress.

Col. Dougles, in extending the invitation to the special conference, urges that Beaver-Mahoning backers come prepared to present to the resolutions committee of the national congress compete data regarding the canal and the effects of its development.

After the convention of the National Congress has adjourned, the resolutions committee will present to President Roosevelt and Administrator Ickes personally, and to the president's cabinet board for the proposed program, an unqualified recommendation that the Beaver-Mahoning and the other especially selected projects be developed at once.

How large this selected list of projects will be was not known today by Col. Dougles. It will not be large, however, he said, and will include only a few of the projects approved by army engineers and the house rivers and harbors committee.

AROUND CITY HALL

Police chronology for 24 hours ending 3:30 p. m. April 5: 16 arrests, on charges as follows: violation of parking law 9, drunkenness 3 and suspicion 4.

Indications are that an attempt to hi-jack another "slot machine" occurred at the Coney Island lunch when two men tried to remove the machine. Police were called and detectives hurried to the Washington street business place. Several days ago a machine was taken from a seventh ward restaurant.

City Treasurer Louis McClung always looks forward to the city coffers being fattened considerably before the April showers have brought May flowers. The taxes paid by the various industries here reach a considerable amount and they make it a point to pay within the time allotted for the one per cent discount.

No doubt, housewives are wondering when the tin can collectors will be around. It will not be long now. The city proposes to purchase new equipment and when the trucks come into possession of the city Howard Phillips, head of the garbage collection department, does not expect to experience any difficulty getting rid of the tin cans quickly, he declared.

There has been a drop in auto accidents of a minor nature here recently...Some of the traffic signs are in need of repair...J. D. Alexander, parks superintendent, will soon look over spots where baseball diamonds can be improved...Contagion here has taken a drop, according to health officials.

Reports current here says Ringling Bros. will show here this summer. It is said they have already purchased feed for the animals from a local businessman and it is natural to presume they will show on the site where the Rosena furnace formerly stood.

Report that Ringling Bros., is to show here recalls the big storm which swept this section when they last showed here (Scotland Lane). People lost no time scurrying home and some of the circus folk felt uneasy. The circus had a difficult time pulling out of the mud.

Director of city finance, Albert Hoyland stepped up to bat yesterday and delivered a hit, that is, financially, when he said "there has been a substantial increase in city tax payments each month this year." In fact, he followed this information with a statement that he had compared the city tax payments for the first three months of 1933 and found that the payments for the corresponding period of this year show the payments have been more than double.

A man who gave the name of "George Gorman" is a guest of Sheriff Eddie Pritchard for a 10 days period. He was sent there by Mayor Mayne. The real purpose in sending him there was to give Bertillion Officer McMullen a chance to check up on "Gorman," who strolled into an East street building. He was arrested after he acted suspiciously, it is said. He is alleged to have remarked in a cell: "I could easily get out of this jail," and the officers started an investigation as a result.

Dealers Must Get Livestock Permits

Checkup To Be Made On Those Who Have Failed To Comply With Law

HARRISBURG, Apr. 6.— Many livestock dealers who were licensed under the State law to sell livestock in Pennsylvania in 1933, have failed to take out 1934 licenses, according to records in the bureau of animal industry, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

Bureau officials are advising all such dealers that to continue in business, they must be licensed unless they now come under one of the specific exemption provisions. The 1933 licenses were not good after December 31, 1933.

No fee is charged for a livestock dealer's license but a severe penalty is provided for disregarding the law.

A special check-up of all delinquent livestock dealers to determine their standing under the State law, will be made by field agents of the bureau of animal industry. In the meantime, those who have not procured their 1934 license, are warned to do so at once.

Always Let Wife Have Last Word

(International News Service)

TARENTUM, Pa., Apr. 6.— "Let her have the last word"—is the advice of L. G. Murray, a "veteran" in the marriage business, to husbands who would have wedded bliss.

Murray, 87, might well be classed as an authority on marital affairs having just celebrated his 65th wedding anniversary.

"Well," Murray advises, "you known every woman likes to be boss at times and when she gets into an argument she must have the last word. The best way to keep peace is to pay no attention to her—let her have the last syllable."

APPLES OF STATE BRING HIGH PRICES

HARRISBURG, Apr. 6.—Pennsylvania apple growers received a premium price for their 1933 crop of ten cents a bushel or more over the average return to growers in any other leading apple state, records in the Pennsylvania bureau of markets, indicate. This is explained as due to the high quality of Pennsylvania fruit, to excellent home markets, to favorable demand from other states and to good prices received in foreign markets due to careful grading and certification.

Washing for eight children can be no small job, yet "I don't really mind it," smiles Mrs. George H. Hale.

Chipso's good suds SOAK dirt out. Hard rubbing is SAVED when you use CHIPSO. Yet Chipso is not harsh. "I have no trouble with colors fading," Mrs. Hale says. "We have used Chipso for years. It is as safe for the silk underwear and stockings as it is for the cotton pieces.

"Chipso suds are grand for dishwashing, too. They are not hard on my hands and they seem richer than other soaps."

Chipso is not adulterated with harsh, "dirt-cutting" ingredients. It speeds up your washday with RICHER SUDS that are SAFE. Birth Rate In State Falls To New Low Mark

HARRISBURG, April 6— Pennsylvania's birth rate has declined to a point where the statisticians want to be sure their figures are correct.

On the basis of reports made to the bureau of vital statistics in the State Department of Health only 156,839 children were born in 1933 That, the statisticians say, is a rate of 15.8 per 1000 population, the lowest on record.

If the present rate of decline is maintained they point out that in a few years the population of the State may become stationary.

In an effort to check possible errors, Dr. Emlyn Jones, chief of the statistics bureau, has written to 750 registrars directing a State wide birth registration survey.

Dr. Jones asked the registrars to checks all infant death certificates, under one year, against births to discover missing reports. A search of baptismal registers was asked.

A check also will be made on physicians, midwives and hospitals to make certain all births were reported. In sections where reporting formerly has been lax local registrars have been advised to conduct a house to house birth census.

Says Canal Is On Preferred Project List

Swick Assures Beaver Falls Mayor That He Will Continue His Support

COULD BE BUILT WITH PWA MONEY

By ARTHUR C. WIMER
Special Washington Correspondent New Castle News

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6.—Representative J. Howard Swick has written to the mayor of Beaver Falls advising him the Beaver and Mahoning channelization project has been assured a preferred status on the public works program.

The Beaver Falls mayor addressed a message to Congressman Swick advising him the city council had passed a resolution asking the congressman to support the Swick bill seeking congressional approval of the improvement project. In reply Dr. Swick has advised the mayor that "I have never ceased to support the project" and that he had discussed inclusion of the project in the public works program with Chief of the Army Engineers Markham.

Preferred Status

Dr. Swick told the mayor that Mr. Markham had promised him the project would be given a preferred status on the public works program. Under this plan, the improvement could be built with public works money and without the passage of a bill appropriating money for a rivers and harbors program.

Pointing out the possibility of having the improvement made with public works money, Dr. Swick suggested to the Beaver Falls mayor that local interests might expedite the project by getting together and working out a plan for guaranteeing the assessments to be borne by local governments and industrial interests.

Congressman Swick believes that if such a guarantee were ready when the project finally got congressional approval, it would avoid delay.

Says Canal Is On Preferred Project List

Swick Assures Beaver Falls Mayor That He Will Continue His Support

COULD BE BUILT WITH PWA MONEY

By ARTHUR C. WIMER
Special Washington Correspondent New Castle News

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6.—Representative J. Howard Swick has written to the mayor of Beaver Falls advising him the Beaver and Mahoning channelization project has been assured a preferred status on the public works program.

The Beaver Falls mayor addressed a message to Congressman Swick advising him the city council had passed a resolution asking the congressman to support the Swick bill seeking congressional approval of the improvement project. In reply Dr. Swick has advised the mayor that "I have never ceased to support the project" and that he had discussed inclusion of the project in the public works program with Chief of the Army Engineers Markham.

Preferred Status

Dr. Swick told the mayor that Mr. Markham had promised him the project would be given a preferred status on the public works program. Under this plan, the improvement could be built with public works money and without the passage of a bill appropriating money for a rivers and harbors program.

Pointing out the possibility of having the improvement made with public works money, Dr. Swick suggested to the Beaver Falls mayor that local interests might expedite the project by getting together and working out a plan for guaranteeing the assessments to be borne by local governments and industrial interests.

Congressman Swick believes that if such a guarantee were ready when the project finally got congressional approval, it would avoid delay.

FIVE-YEAR PLAN

by Priscilla Hovey Wright

McClure Fiction

Illustration by Tom McCoy

It took Sue five years to prepare for the day when she could smash Corinne's happiness as ruthlessly as her own had been shattered.

FOR a moment as the train pulled out of the station leaving her alone on the platform Sue's heart jumped up to her throat. The instant she saw Corinne, however, sitting behind the wheel of a resplendent blue roadster, it went right back where it belonged.

Corinne had not changed a bit. Just as beautiful as ever, really a little more so. Coolly she submitted to Corinne's effusive embraces.

"You're just the same dear, funny little Sue," said Corinne. "I'd know you anywhere."

Sue knew she was far from the same. Five years ago, when she had last seen Corinne, she had been a scared, skinny little wretch, too frightened to do anything for herself. Now . . . Well Corinne would find out for herself.

"Most of my friends do still recognize me," she said.

"She's not the same at all," came a low drawl. "Where are her neckties?"

This was from a young man in the rumble seat and Sue gave a start.

"Surely you remember Pokey," Corinne was saying.

Sue blinked. Phil Pollard, Corinne's brother. Most certainly she did not remember him in this lean young man. Why, five years ago Pokey Pollard had been the shyest, most unprepossessing looking individual she had ever known. He had been terribly dull at school, she recalled, and had been interested only in taking pictures of landscapes and animals. Phil must be her age, twenty-four. They were both two years younger than Corinne.

"I didn't know you," she said honestly. "You've changed."

"For better or for worse?" he demanded.

"It couldn't be for worse," she replied flippantly.

The man in the front seat laughed. Corinne laid her hand lightly on his shoulder.

"This," she said in the possessive tone Sue knew so well, "is Michael Stelling."

For some moments Sue had been conscious of his charm. He looked as if he had traveled a great deal, read a great deal, known a great many people and was secretly amused by it all. She could not tell at first glance whether he would be easy stealing or not. For of course she had come to take him from Corinne. She was going to steal Michael Stelling, just as five years ago Corinne had stolen Harley Grainger.

"So you wear neckties," he said.

"I used to," she admitted. "Corinne was quite keen about them at one time."

"Corinne in a necktie!" he exclaimed aghast.

"Oh, no," said Sue calmly. "She liked them for me."

The necktie constituted one of the many grievances against Corinne. "You look so adorable in suits and neckties. Do wear them," Corinne had often said by way of indirect command. Sue knew now that she had not looked adorable.

"I was never ghastly at tennis," Sue replied levelly. "My ethics were at fault . . ."

ON the way to the Pollard cottage Sue relaxed. It was comfortable to be with Phil again. Strange she had not thought he might be here.

"What have you been doing with yourself for five years?" he asked.

"Well, I went through college."

"Bravo! My degrees will have to be purely honorary. Doubtless you recall my weakness in the scholastic field."

"There's no Phi Beta Kappa key on my bussum," she told him, "but I did get by. And now I've got a job."

"Like it?"

"It's great!"

Impossible to tell in words just how wonderful it was.

"What have you been doing?" she added.

"It's a long and sorry tale," said Pokey.

"I've stood a good deal of woe in my life," said Sue. "Shoot!"

"Well, then," Pokey rubbed a long hand through his shock of hair. "The folks finally decided I would never be anything but a frosh and got me a job. It was the first of many jobs. Seventeen in as many months. Now I'm sitting pretty, spiritually if not financially. I take pictures for a chap who writes up articles for nature magazines and gives lectures. He's a professor, but we click great."

"I should think that would be just the thing," said Sue eagerly. "You were always taking pictures. I remember your dark room in the attic when you lived in Palmer."

"Do you?" said Phil. "Do you, really?" Then he suddenly changed the subject. "What do you think of the Acquisition?" he asked lightly, with a nod in the direction of Stelling.

"It seems nice enough," answered Sue casually.

"It does," agreed Phil. "It comes from Denver. Corinne met it abroad. Do you think it'll graft into the family tree?"

"They do so many wonderful things now," said Sue, and giggled.

Michael Stelling turned.

"I don't like the sound of that laughter," he said. "They're keeping something from us, Corinne."

"Let them alone," said Corinne carelessly. "They were always hanging back whispering together even as children."

"But I don't like it," declared Stelling.

Thereafter he half turned toward them and talked animatedly and Sue played up to him. Surprising how easy it was. The roadster commenced to shoot over the dusty country road without consideration for bumps and suddenly Corinne said petulantly, "You take the wheel, Mike. My head is splitting."

Sue's lips quirked. Same old Corinne. Couldn't bear to yield center stage to anybody.

CAREFULLY Sue dressed for dinner that night. She was furious with herself as she thought of the years of door-mat duty she had done for Corinne. What a little fool she had been. It ought to have been plain enough that Corinne had been afraid to compete with girls as pretty and clever as she. That was why she had invited dear, funny little Sue to meet Michael Stelling. Nothing to fear from Sue. Sue and brother Phil would be such a safe, neutral background against which she would shine.

Oh, she knew the role she was supposed to play, but she had not realized it until a night five years ago. Corinne had been away and Harley Grainger had come to Palmer for a visit. He had been a tall, fair boy of twenty with a contagious sort of smile. When he had actually invited her to go to a dance she had been transported to a state of delight she had never known. Then Corinne had suddenly come home, had unceremoniously invited herself to go with them, had appeared in a new and sophisticated gown which made Sue's girlish evening dress seem ridiculous and shabby, had tossed her curls at Harley, until he quite forgot about Sue and danced practically the entire evening with Corinne. All the next week Corinne had pursued him. The second week she was ridiculing him and complaining because he did not let her alone.

That was what had hurt the most—the fact that Corinne had not wanted him. Nobody suspected what had happened, not even Phil who had saved her from a desperate tearful withdrawal the night of the party by dutifully and dully dancing with her.

AFTER dinner Corinne proposed contract. Rather, she ordered it.

"Mike has to have his contract every day," she said. "It's terrible, Sue. But maybe you're still playing bridge. Are you?"

"I play a little," said Sue mildly.

"All I hope," sighed Phil, "is that you're better at it than you used to be at parcheesi. You always lost."

"He knows darn well, why," said Sue to herself.

"The girl's clever," Phil exclaimed triumphantly at the end of an hour's playing. "Chalk up another rubber."

"All she needed was proper fodder for her brains," said Stelling. "Parcheesi, indeed! Shall we change?"

"Oh, let's stop," said Corinne. "I've played so much lately the cards all look alike to me."

"So it would seem, my dear. So it would seem," said Stelling jovially.

Sue looked cautiously at Corinne's face. Yes, there at the corners of the lips, the place where she had always looked for them, were the little hard lines of disapproval. It was now her cue to agree—to say, "Yes, let's stop." But she said instead:

"Let's have another rubber. I'd like to play with Mr. Stelling. I've never played with a real contract fiend."

The lines at the corners of Corinne's mouth deepened, but she merely said lightly.

"Just one, then."

Stelling and Sue won the rubber. Sue could play her cards well when she had ten spots. When she had a picture gallery she became inspired.

"Sa-ay, you're good," said Stelling. "The Perfect Partner."

"Perfect cards. I'd say," said Corinne, rising from the table abruptly.

THE week that followed was a glorious one with days of lavish sunshine and water of an enticing blue.

The lines were very often at the corners of Corinne's mouth, now. Calmly and pleasantly Sue continued to do the things Corinne did not want to do, things that Corinne did not do well. Corinne looked simply beautiful in her bathing suit or rather, all of her bathing suits, but Corinne had never advanced beyond an elementary breast stroke and a splash. So Sue, slim and erect in a yard or so of last year's blue jersey, swam out to the raft and dived backwards and forwards to the enthusiastic applause of Michael Stelling, who himself gave exhibitions of a similar nature. But Corinne did not applaud. She looked bored and petulant and, what angered Sue, puzzled.

"She must know what I'm driving at," thought Sue, "and why I'm driving at it."

Yet on Friday afternoon Sue surprised that look of bewilderment in Corinne's eyes again. It looked too genuine to be faked. The occasion was tennis for which Corinne did not care. Sue and Michael were playing with Claire and Fred Lawrence. Corinne, a summer cloud in pink chiffon, sat on a bench and watched.

"You're as red and steamy as a fresh cooked lobster," she said languidly as Sue came over to the bench at the end of the first set. "Tell me, when did you have all this intensive practice? You used to be as ghastly at tennis as I was, even worse, for I almost always beat you."

"I was never ghastly at tennis," Sue replied levelly. "My ethics were at fault, that was all. I've corrected them."

Then came the look of bewilderment in Corinne's eyes.

Before the second set was over Corinne left. After the match was finished, with Sue and Michael victorious, the Lawrences hurried away for a dinner engagement. Sue and Michael sauntered home through the woods. It was Michael's suggestion.

"A little longer, but cooler," he said. Then: "You played like a whiz."

"I was better than usual," she answered lightly. "I guess I had the urge."

"You must have quite a few urges," the man replied. "You seem to do most everything well."

Sue felt herself tighten.

"You're not at all what I expected," Michael added. "Of course, accuracy is not one of Corinne's virtues, but she usually gets something right."

"People change in five years' time, you know."

"Has Corinne changed such a great deal?"

Sue hesitated.

"No-o. But Corinne was always ahead of the rest of us. No awkward age or anything like that."

"Yes, Corinne is beautiful," Stelling said slowly. "I met her in an art gallery in Paris. I . . . well, Corinne certainly bowls you over, at first."

"Let's go along," Sue said abruptly.

With a shrug of his shoulders he quickened his steps, turned, and where the foliage grew thick, extended his hands.

"Yo, heave, ho," he said carelessly.

She gave him her hands. A mistake, she knew, the moment she had done so, for suddenly he had her in his arms and his lips were hungrily on hers.

It was the great moment, the moment for which she had rehearsed for five years. She had stolen Corinne's man! Yet there was only panic surging in her, panic and disgust.

"I must say you're ardent, Sue," the man said, releasing her.

"You shouldn't have done that," she told him tensely.

A slow, angry flush came to his cheeks.

"You seemed to, shall I say, call for it?"

"My error, then," Sue said stiffly.

"Not at all. Mine," he replied.

They walked home in silence and found Corinne, a somewhat peevish appearing pink cloud, waiting for them on the porch. Ostensibly she was reading but Sue knew she had been waiting for them. Phil was reading, too, but he looked up at their approach.

"One look at you two is enough to keep me from tennis," he drawled. "The Finish, The End of the Trail, The Last Lap . . ."

"The Last Straw," contributed Sue with a weary smile. "I don't think I'll go to the dance tonight, Corinne. I'm a bit done up."

She was restless and irritable and thinking what a fool she had been. Why on earth had she acted like Outraged Virginity! She wished she could go home that night.

AFTER a supper which she scarcely tasted Sue went out on the porch. Corinne was upstairs dressing. Suddenly she called down.

"Oh, Sue, dear. Be a good girl and come up here a second, will you?"

Sue went slowly up the stairs to Corinne's room. Corinne needed no assistance. She stood there, a queen in an evening dress of lace that fell in soft foamy folds to her feet. Involuntarily Sue exclaimed:

"Corinne, you're lovely!"

"I don't feel lovely," said Corinne sharply and somewhat breathlessly and Sue saw that her hands were shaking and that her mouth was tremulous.

"I—I feel simply vile, Sue."

Tears were now in the lovely blue eyes and the shoulders drooped. Corinne looked like a puzzled, unhappy child. And Sue became automatically the faithful, competent servitor.

"Don't cry," she counselled, putting her arms about Corinne's shoulders.

"I want Mike so badly," said Corinne, making an effort to check her tears.

Sue answered steadily, "You have him."

"I'm not sure," Corinne looked unhappily at Sue. "Mike's clever and he likes clever people."

"He likes beautiful people, too," Sue answered smoothly. "He told me all about meeting you in an art gallery and about how you bowled him over."

The main performance was not going at all like the dress rehearsals. In the dress rehearsals Sue felt no pity but relentlessly reminded Corinne of all the injuries done her. Why, she had injured Corinne far more than Corinne had injured her! They had all injured Corinne, spoiling her so that at twenty-six she was still nothing but a child, a very beautiful child who must always have her own way. Poor Corinne. Life wasn't going to be a bit happy for her as time went on!

"Corinne," said Sue abruptly, "do you remember a boy named Harley Grainger?"

She watched closely as Corinne powdered away all traces of tears. Corinne was not clever enough to dissemble. Her emotions were always to be read in her face, in every line of her body. Corinne was not dissembling. She was honestly trying to answer Sue's question. Suddenly she brightened.

"Why, yes," she said. "I remember him. Heavens, what a pest he was. Is he around now?"

"Not that I know of," replied Sue tersely. "You'd better get along. You're late already."

She sat in the room after Corinne had gone. To think that for five years she had spent a really vast amount of time planning to pay Corinne for something that Corinne knew nothing about. Corinne was so well protected, so bountifully swaddled in selfishness that it was impossible for her to do any wrong.

SUE rose resolutely, slipped off her clothes, got into her bathing suit and crept down the stairs. It was good to steal silently into the water; fun to cut the green blackness of it with the white of one's arms. She felt suddenly gay and powerful as she swam, now lazily, now with a joyful burst of speed.

When the cramp came in her leg, she experienced at first no panic. She would float until the confounded thing went. But it did not go. It seemed to grow worse. The agony of it made her entire body contract. She gave a little broken cry of pain and terror and the green black water slipped over her face. Struggling, she came to the surface again and heard the quiet words:

"Buck up, Sue. Put your hand on me somewhere."

It was Phil! Good old Poky.

Unprotesting, although the cramp was amost gone, she let Phil take her in his arms as he waded to the shore. She was tired and she knew she was going to cry. She did cry and Phil said nothing but magically produced his sweater from somewhere in the general surroundings, wrapped her in it and sat reassuringly near. At length when she lay quiet, he asked softly,

"Did you want him, Sue?"

"Want who?"

"The Acquisition."

"No!"

Phil sighed happily.

"I wasn't sure," he said. "I hoped not but in case you did I kept in the rear as much as possible. Tonight I decided things had gone wrong. Once before when things went wrong with you I stuck around, I remember. When you went in the water I went in, too."

So he and not Corinne had remembered about Harley Grainger!

"You certainly made Corinne wiggle," commented Phil cheerfully. "And I don't blame you after all you stood from her. But I've found she doesn't do any more than wiggle. It's probably taken a lot more out of you than out of her."

"Yes," said Sue soberly. "It has. I'm sorry I bothered."

"Do you know, Sue," he exclaimed seriously, "you've changed a lot."

"Have I really?"

"You've no idea! I always knew you were sweet. But you're, well, you're marvelous now! I want to tell you about this professor that I work for. Jackson's his name and he has a wife who sometimes comes along with us. She's a good sport. You'd like her. I suppose you think quite a bit of the job, though?"

"Yes," Sue hesitated. "Yes, I do like the job a lot. But it must be fun swushing through swamps in rubber boots. Does—does Mrs. Jackson do that?"

"She does. She's a grand little swusher."

"I'll have to think about it, Phil—maybe a long time."

Sue, warm and relaxed in the sweater, smiled as his arm went around her. She and Pokey in the background! Just where Corinne wanted them. Just where they wanted to be.

"Of course," said Pokey, "I can't expect to get a medal for life saving and to get engaged all in one night. Take your time, my girl, only let me know as soon as you get through thinking."

Four College Men Are Quarantined In Co-Ed Sorority House

LOS ANGELES, April 6.—"It's no fun for us. Our work goes on just the same. The girls must eat. So must we!

"And not only that but I had a date for Saturday night with a Sigma Kappa—and will she be burned up!"

Which, through John Wells, summed up today the situation of four young college men, including Wells, who are quarantined for a week with 26 co-eds in the Colonial Sorority lodge of the Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Wells and three of his Phi Delta Theta fraternity brothers, Paul Evans, Donald McLean and Malcolm Jayred, were carrying dishes from the dining room and washing them yesterday when a health officer walked up and tacked a huge yellow "quarantine" sign to the front door.

Helen Fischer, blonde co-ed, secretary of the sophomore class, had developed a mild attack of scarlet fever and health authorities put the house under quarantine.

"It's swell," said the girls—over the telephone. "We play bridge, read, listen to the radio and study. Mid-term examinations are coming up next week and here we have a whole week to prepare for them.

"Our dates for the week-end? Ah, well," they sighed.

The total persons for whom private employment was found was 3,500 as compared with 1,996 in February. The report said most of the increase was due to the placements of approximately 1,000 workers as a result of personal visits to 3,112 employers.

CWA placements during the month totaled 19,144.

Brinker-Reid Gets Contract

City Purchases Pipe And Connecting Bands For Work Here

Council convened formally today in City building and awarded a contract to the Brinker Reid Supply company, Pittsburgh, for corrugated galvanized pipe and connecting bands to be used in CWA work at Cunningham park. The contract was awarded on a unit price basis, Purchasing Agent Alexander and City Engineer Hoskins, having reported the bid the lowest received and recommended the firm secure the contract.

However, before it was awarded there was read a letter which said the firm is working under the NRA code and expects to continue to work under its provisions. A Blue Eagle was stamped on the literature. This satisfied the council.

Franklin Township Students On Strike

(International News Service)

NEWLONSBURG, Pa., Apr. 6.—"School strike fever" today spread to this Westmoreland county town as students walked out of the Franklin township high school in protest against the failure of the school board to renew the contract of Harry Ludwick, history instructor.

Although strike leaders said half of the 300 students in the school were "hollidaying", Principal W. C. Simpson placed the number at only 50. He added that he had not been informed of any grievances.

Jury Finds Pay Station Robber Guilty Of Charge

Pittsburgh Judge Sentences Philadelphian To Year And Half To Three Years In Pen

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Apr. 6.—All went well for the first few minutes in the trial today of George Appel, 30, of Philadelphia, charged with robbing pay station telephone cash boxes.

Attorney Albert Martin told a jury in criminal court that if a device which his client was charged with using to rob the boxes could be demonstrated as effective he would enter a plea of guilty for the accused.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob Kalson took the jury of 10 women and two men to the office of District Attorney Andrew T. Park. Several long distance calls were placed. One was to the district attorney of Philadelphia.

In each case, after the money was deposited in payment for the calls, the thin strip of celluloid which Appel is said to have used was inserted in the pay box. Each time quarters, dimes and nickels came tumbling out.

Attorney Martin was satisfied. He was ready to enter a plea. Appel, however, refused. Martin became disgusted and quit the case. The jury was given the case. After a few minute's deliberation, it returned to the court room.

"Guilty," said the jury foreman.

"A year and a half to three years in Western Pennsylvania," said Judge H. H. Rowland in passing sentence.

People Possessing The Most Confidence Usually Ignorant

(International News Service)

NEW YORK.—The popular belief that persons with a great deal of knowledge are most confident was shown to be erroneous, according to the results of an investigation of the psychology or confidence made by Max L. Hutt, associate psychologist in the Education Clinic of the College of the City of New York.

An intelligent individual with informational background tends to be cautious in making judgements and decisions, Hutt indicated. It is the ignorant person that is either most or least confident.

It was also shown by the study that the amount of confidence is conditioned by the group of which the person is a member. The most informed person in one group will be cautious there, yet decidedly meek when he meets other people who have a better cultural background. Confidence varies with the situations he said.

Hutt performed a number of experiments on large groups of college students and is expanding the range of investigation to include secondary and elementary school pupils. The subjects were asked to reply to true or false statements in psychology and then rate the degree of confidence with which they indicated their answers. The material tested was also taken form other fields; such as general cultural information, slogans of advertisements, geometrical relationships, and estimating the lengths of lines and sizes of figures.

Hutt has initiated a series of experiments to investigate the nature of confidence and to explore the relation of confidence to other personality and intellectual traits. The first of these studies has been completed and the conclusions from the other investigations will be available shortly.

Brinker-Reid Gets Contract

City Purchases Pipe And Connecting Bands For Work Here

Council convened formally today in City building and awarded a contract to the Brinker Reid Supply company, Pittsburgh, for corrugated galvanized pipe and connecting bands to be used in CWA work at Cunningham park. The contract was awarded on a unit price basis, Purchasing Agent Alexander and City Engineer Hoskins, having reported the bid the lowest received and recommended the firm secure the contract.

However, before it was awarded there was read a letter which said the firm is working under the NRA code and expects to continue to work under its provisions. A Blue Eagle was stamped on the literature. This satisfied the council.

Franklin Township Students On Strike

(International News Service)

NEWLONSBURG, Pa., Apr. 6.—"School strike fever" today spread to this Westmoreland county town as students walked out of the Franklin township high school in protest against the failure of the school board to renew the contract of Harry Ludwick, history instructor.

Although strike leaders said half of the 300 students in the school were "hollidaying", Principal W. C. Simpson placed the number at only 50. He added that he had not been informed of any grievances.

Jury Finds Pay Station Robber Guilty Of Charge

Pittsburgh Judge Sentences Philadelphian To Year And Half To Three Years In Pen

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Apr. 6.—All went well for the first few minutes in the trial today of George Appel, 30, of Philadelphia, charged with robbing pay station telephone cash boxes.

Attorney Albert Martin told a jury in criminal court that if a device which his client was charged with using to rob the boxes could be demonstrated as effective he would enter a plea of guilty for the accused.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob Kalson took the jury of 10 women and two men to the office of District Attorney Andrew T. Park. Several long distance calls were placed. One was to the district attorney of Philadelphia.

In each case, after the money was deposited in payment for the calls, the thin strip of celluloid which Appel is said to have used was inserted in the pay box. Each time quarters, dimes and nickels came tumbling out.

Attorney Martin was satisfied. He was ready to enter a plea. Appel, however, refused. Martin became disgusted and quit the case. The jury was given the case. After a few minute's deliberation, it returned to the court room.

"Quilty," said the jury foreman.

"A year and a half to three years in Western Pennsylvania," said Judge H. H. Rowland in passing sentence.

People Possessing The Most Confidence Usually Ignorant

(International News Service)

NEW YORK.—The popular belief that persons with a great deal of knowledge are most confident was shown to be erroneous, according to the results of an investigation of the psychology or confidence made by Max L. Hutt, associate psychologist in the Education Clinic of the College of the City of New York.

An intelligent individual with informational background tends to be cautious in making judgements and decisions, Hutt indicated. It is the ignorant person that is either most or least confident.

It was also shown by the study that the amount of confidence is conditioned by the group of which the person is a member. The most informed person in one group will be cautious there, yet decidedly meek when he meets other people who have a better cultural background. Confidence varies with the situations he said.

Hutt performed a number of experiments on large groups of college students and is expanding the range of investigation to include secondary and elementary school pupils. The subjects were asked to reply to true or false statements in psychology and then rate the degree of confidence with which they indicated their answers. The material tested was also taken form other fields; such as general cultural information, slogans of advertisements, geometrical relationships, and estimating the lengths of lines and sizes of figures.

Hutt has initiated a series of experiments to investigate the nature of confidence and to explore the relation of confidence to other personality and intellectual traits. The first of these studies has been completed and the conclusions from the other investigations will be available shortly.

Says Canal Is On Preferred Project List

Swick Assures Beaver Falls Mayor That He Will Continue His Support

COULD BE BUILT WITH PWA MONEY

By ARTHUR C. WIMER
Special Washington Correspondent
New Castle News

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6.—Representative J. Howard Swick has written to the mayor of Beaver Falls advising him the Beaver and Mahoning channelization project has been assured a preferred status on the public works program.

The Beaver Falls mayor addressed a message to Congressman Swick advising him the city council had passed a resolution asking the congressman to support the Swick bill seeking congressional approval of the improvement project. In reply Dr. Swick has advised the mayor that "I have never ceased to support the project" and that he had discussed inclusion of the project in the public works program with Chief of the Army Engineers Markham.

Preferred Status

Dr. Swick told the mayor that Mr. Markham had promised him the project would be given a preferred status on the public works program. Under this plan, the improvement could be built with public works money and without the passage of a bill appropriating money for a rivers and harbors program.

Pointing out the possibility of having the improvement made with public works money, Dr. Swick suggested to the Beaver Falls mayor that local interests might expedite the project by getting together and working out a plan for guaranteeing the assessments to be borne by local governments and industrial interests.

Congressman Swick believes that if such a guarantee were ready when the project finally got congressional approval, it would avoid delay.

"Willing Hand" Is Stilled By Death

(International News Service)

LEBANON, Pa., Apr. 6.—The willing hand which Mrs. Mary Landis, 58, Palmyra's "lady bountiful," extended to the down-trodden and destitute througout her life has been stilled forever by death.

Mrs. Landis was never known to have refused aid to any needy person who sought her help. She also played a prominent part in church and social circles.

Details Of Sankey Manhunt Revealed By Reward Seekers

(International News Service)

DENVER, Colo., April 6.—Affidavits on file with City Attorney James D. Parriott, most of them accompanied by letters, reveal many of the amazing details of the nationwide manhunt that resulted in the capture of Verne Sankey, notorious kidnaper and, before his arrest and suicide rated as the nation's "public enemy No. 1."

Parriott is a member of a committee of three Denver citizens chosen to award the $25,000 posted by Claude K. Boettcher, wealthy Denver financier, for the arrest and conviction of Sankey. Boettcher's son, Charles Boettcher II, was the victim of one of Sankey's most spectacular abductions.

The 12 or 14 persons who aided in the capture of Sankey and his partner, Gordon Alcorn, will be rewarded with $15,000, the balance of the fund having been paid for the capture of other members of the kidnaping gang, now serving long terms in the federal penitentiary.

From a man in South Dakota came a letter explaining in detail how he gave information that led to Sankey's arrest. He asked that his name be not made public, as he feared being put "on the spot."

The application of William Masser, Chicago barber, revealed how he staked his life to assist officers in taking the widely sought badman into custody.

"I had known a man by the name of William E. Clark, who later proved to be Verne Sankey," Masser wrote. "Federal agents arranged with my boss to carry on certain preparations that led to his capture.

"I was alone when he came into the shop.

"I seated Sankey in my chair, carefully folding up the bottom front of the apron so the folds were above his knees, exposing also his hands. Then I stood on one side of the chair and, at a signal, the officers rushed in."

Angeline Sindzenski, alias Helen Mattern, of Chicago, who gave police there information leading to the arrest of Alcorn, also put in a claim.

Mrs. Carrie Fishner, manager of an apartment where Sankey lived in Chicago, and Ruben E. Linn, a Chicago mail carrier, who informed police where Sankey was receiving his mail are among the claimants, as are Thomas Curtin, John M. Lynch and Edward Donovan, Chicago policemen, who declared they followed the trail "like a trio of bloodhounds" until they captured Sankey in the barber shop.

SAN FRANCISCO.—Hunting wild game in California caused the death of 47 persons and the injuring of 89 others during 1933, according to figures compiled by the State Fish and Game commission. Figures for 1932 were 32 killed and 134 wounded.

Here's Taxpayer Whose Exception

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., Apr. 6.—City tax officials were not surprised when Wolfgang Seidle, local property owner, arrived at city hall to complain about his taxes.

But they were astonished when Seidle complained about the levy being too low.

The taxpayer was billed for $18, but insisted the amount should read in the neighborhood of $40. He refused to pay until an adjustment was made.

MAYOR PAYS DETECTIVE FROM PRIVATE FUNDS

(International News Service)

SEATTLE. — Salary of Luke S. May, noted criminologist and Chief of Seattle detectives, is paid out of Mayor John F. Dore's own pocketbook.

The detective chief was severed form the official payroll by refusal of the city council to provide funds in the 1934 budget. Mayor Dore, who previously was turning back $3,500 yearly from his own salary to the city treasury as a gesture of government economy, now uses $201 a month of this money to keep May on the job.

Steel Employes Oppose Bill

Delegations Express Objection To Wagner Labor Board Measure

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, April 6—Delegations of employes from steel and shipbuilding plants stretching from New England to the middle west appeared before the Senate Labor Committee today to urge defeat of the Wagner bill for a permanent national labor board to settle industrial disputes.

William G. McDermott, head of the company union in the Fore River, Mass. plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp., opposed "intervention of outside interests" in adjusting labor difficulties.

Ellwood H. Smith, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. employes' association, declared the company union plan in his plant had been in effect 15 years with satisfactory results.

"Our objection to the bill is that it would prevent the company from reimbursing our representatives for the time spent in meeting or for other representative duties."

Smith asserted that participation of outside parties would be a "disastrous blunder."

AUSTRIAN AUTO TRADE LOWER GAS TAX

(International News Service)

VIENNA.—Spokesmen for the automobile industry recently petitioned the Austrian government to reduce its levies on gasoline, which is one of the highest taxed commodities in Austria. The tax ranges from three and a half to 12 and a half cents a gallon, which increase the retail price from 25 to 100 per cent.

The revenue derived from gasoline is more than the total profit from its production, distribution and sale the petitioners contend.

Four College Men Are Quarantined In Co-Ed Sorority House

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, April 6.—"It's no fun for us. Our work goes on just the same. The girls must eat. So must we!

"And not only that but I had a date for Saturday night with a Sigma Kappa—and will she be burned up!"

Which, through John Wells, summed up today the situation of four young college men, including Wells, who are quarantined for a week with 26 co-eds in the Colonial Sorority lodge of the Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Wells and three of his Phi Delta Theta fraternity brothers, Paul Evans, Donald McLean and Malcolm Jayred, were carrying dishes from the dining room and washing them yesterday when a health officer walked up and tacked a huge yellow "quarantine" sign to the front door.

Lots of Fun

Helen Fischer, blonde co-ed, secretary of the sophomore class, had developed a mild attack of scarlet fever and health authorities put the house under quarantine.

"It's swell," said the girls—over the telephone. "We play bridge, read, listen to the radio and study. Mid-term examinations are coming up next week and here we have a whole week to prepare for them.

"Our dates for the week-end? Ah, well," they sighed.

More Persons Placed On Jobs

Over 1600 More Are Placed On Private Jobs During Month Of March

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6—The 12 federal-state employment offices placed 1634 more persons in private employment during March than in February, according to the monthly report of Secretary of Labor and Industry, Charlotte E. Carr today.

The total persons for whom private employment was found was 3,500 as compared with 1,996 in February. The report said most of the increase was due to the placements of approximately 1,000 workers as a result of personal visits to 3,112 employers.

CWA placements during the month totaled 19,144.

SUIT OVER GASOLINE BILL IS ON TRIAL

The case of the Freedom Oil Works against Della M. Grim, was taken up for trial at court before Judge James A. Chambers this morning. Plaintiff claims that Della Grim operated the Parkland service station on East Washington street, and that she owes about $330 for gasoline furnished her during a sixteen day period of credit. The defendant denies the ownership of the gasoline station.

"Dead Men Tell No Tales"—Paris Politicos Hope

L'Affaire Stavisky is again stirring trouble for French government, as autopsy on body of Serge Stavisky indicates he was murdered to prevent him from baring political angles of his gigantic swindles. Casket containing body is shown arriving at Paris from Chamonix, where it was hurriedly buried by authorities who said his death was "suicide." Imported British police are probing crime.

Brinker-Reid Gets Contract

City Purchases Pipe And Connecting Bands For Work Here

Council convened formally today in City building and awarded a contract to the Brinker Reid Supply company, Pittsburgh, for corrugated galvanized pipe and connecting bands to be used in CWA work at Cunningham park. The contract was awarded on a unit price basis, Purchasing Agent Alexander and City Engineer Hoskins, having reported the bid the lowest received and recommended the firm secure the contract.

However, before it was awarded there was read a letter which said the firm is working under the NRA code and expects to continue to work under its provisions. A Blue Eagle was stamped on the literature. This satisfied the council.

Franklin Township Students On Strike

(International News Service)

NEWLONSBURG, Pa., Apr. 6.—"School strike fever" today spread to this Westmoreland county town as students walked out of the Franklin township high school in protest against the failure of the school board to renew the contract of Harry Ludwick, history instructor.

Although strike leaders said half of the 300 students in the school were "hollidaying", Principal W. C. Simpson placed the number at only 50. He added that he had not been informed of any grievances.

Raise Assessment On Temple Block

Louis Haug today appeared before council and objected to an increase of approximately $6,000, for 1934, on the Temple block, North street. City council has requested the city assessor, Andrew Sands, to deliver a report to the board of revision explaining the assessment.

Jury Finds Pay Station Robber Guilty Of Charge

Pittsburgh Judge Sentences Philadelphian To Year And Half To Three Years In Pen

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Apr. 6.—All went well for the first few minutes in the trial today of George Appel, 30, of Philadelphia, charged with robbing pay station telephone cash boxes.

Attorney Albert Martin told a jury in criminal court that if a device which his client was charged with using to rob the boxes could be demonstrated as effective he would enter a plea of guilty for the accused.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob Kaison took the jury of 10 women and two men to the office of District Attorney Andrew T. Park. Several long distance calls were placed. One was to the district attorney of Philadelphia.

In each case, after the money was deposited in payment for the calls, the thin strip of celluloid which Appel is said to have used was inserted in the pay box. Each time quarters, dimes and nickels came tumbling out.

Attorney Martin was satisfied. He was ready to enter a plea. Appel, however, refused. Martin became disgusted and quit the case. The jury was given the case. After a few minute's deliberation, it returned to the court room.

"Guilty," said the jury foreman.

"A year and a half to three years in Western Pennsylvania," said Judge H. H. Rowland in passing sentence.

People Possessing The Most Confidence Usually Ignorant

(International News Service)

NEW YORK.—The popular belief that persons with a great deal of knowledge are most confident was shown to be erroneous, according to the results of an investigation of the psychology or confidence made by Max L. Hutt, associate psychologist in the Education Clinic of the College of the City of New York.

An intelligent individual with informational background tends to be cautious in making judgements and decisions, Hutt indicated. It is the ignorant person that is either most or least confident.

It was also shown by the study that the amount of confidence is conditioned by the group of which the person is a member. The most informed person in one group will be cautious there, yet decidedly meek when he meets other people who have a better cultural background. Confidence varies with the situations he said.

Hutt performed a number of experiments on large groups of college students and is expanding the range of investigation to include secondary and elementary school pupils. The subjects were asked to reply to true or false statements in psychology and then rate the degree of confidence with which they indicated their answers. The material tested was also taken form other fields: such as general cultural information, slogans of advertisements, geometrical relationships, and estimating the lengths of lines and sizes of figures.

Hutt has initiated a series of experiments to investigate the nature of confidence and to explore the relation of confidence to other personality and intellectual traits. The first of these studies has been completed and the conclusions from the other investigations will be available shortly.

King Gustave Of Sweden Refuses His Forgiveness

King Of Sweden Refuses To Grant Audience To Bride Of Former Prince Sigvard

(International News Service)

CANNES, France, April 6.—The aged King Gustav V, of Sweden, has turned a deaf ear to the plea of young love for the royal blessing, International News Service learned today.

He has refused to forgive his grandson, the young Prince Sigvard, for marrying Erika Patzek, pretty daughter of a German market owner, and thereby removing himself from the line of succession to the throne.

The picture of a stony-hearted monarch blighting the hopes of the romantic young prince for forgiveness was painted by Countess De Bonde, wife of King Gustaf's Chamberlain.

Will Never Forgive.

"The king says he will never forgive Prince Sigvard," the countess said. "His majesty refuses to make any statement, saying too much already has been published about his private affairs."

Prince Sigvard, second son of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf and the German girl who became his bride in a London registry office several weeks ago, arrived yesterday, presumably to seek a reconciliation with the royal grandfather. There had been reports that all the young couple had to do was to seek forgiveness and it would be forthcoming.

But the 75-year-old king proved unexpectedly adamant, according to all indications. Far from receiving the young bride and giving her a royal kiss of forgiveness as had been reported, he refused even to see her, although he held a three-hour session with Prince Sigvard.

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Meredith Meyers, chairman of the Morris-Copeland campaign committee, in a statement issued at headquarters here today declared the charge of Warren Van Dyke, Democratic state chairman, that the leaders of the independent slate were actuated by selfish motives "only caused smiles of amusement in localities where what I stand for is well known."

Copeland, the Gubernatorial candidate, that he would accept no post within their power and that his own ambition was to preserve the integrity of the Democratic party.

Erie Neighbors Will Not Allow Eviction Order

Neighbors Go To Aid Of Man And Wife And Six Children In Destitute State

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., Apr. 6.—Defying the law which made possible the eviction of John and Mary Gonciarz and their six children, a mob of 200 irate neighbors today forcibly returned the destitute family to their former home.

Although a court order upholding the eviction is expected today, the Gonciarz family continued their defiance of the landlord whose eviction forced them to spend the night in a barn.

County commissioners and poor directors said they were unable to aid the family when members appeared at the court house for relief.

George Gosney Is Suffering From Unusual Disease

Sun Stroke Leaves Man At Bentleyville, Pa., Inverse To Heat And Cold

(International News Service)

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., April 6.—Another strange case to be written into the records of the medical world was revealed here today in the treatment of George Gosney, 44.

Gosney's ailment causes him to experience inverse reactions to heat and cold. The hotter it is, the colder Gosney becomes and the colder it is, the warmer he feels.

Victim of sunstroke, Gosney is responding to treatment. His physician said he has never heard of a similar case.

Sunstroke

Gosney was working along a Charleroi highway last July when he collapsed from the heat. For weeks he lay in a coma.

His left leg, between the hip and knee, has lost its sense of feeling. When the sun is shining Gosney dare not leave his home, for the sun's rays almost completely blind him.

Physicians who have treated Gosney said they are chiefly concerned with the bursting of capillary blood vessels. This takes place only when the weather is warm.

Gosney suffers from cold when the weather becomes hot and his legs become numb. When the thermometer was hovering around the zero mark in February he felt fine. Then, he said, he wanted to discard his overcoat—because he was overheated.

Probe Action Of Fourteen Stocks

Exchange Will Delve Into Activity In Fourteen Stocks

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6.—The New York stock exchange today launched a probe in the market action of 14 stocks.

Wall street attributed this action to the high-pressure publicity the stocks have received in the last two weeks, resulting in active speculation in recent market sessions.

The stocks are Borg Warner Corp. common, Cerro De Pasco, Eaton Manufacturing Co., Federal Light & Traction common, Indian Refining Co., Kelvinator Corp., Louisiana Oil Refining Corp. common and preferred, Pacific Gas & Electric, Seaboard Oil, Servel, Inc., Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Co., Texas Pacific Land Trust certificates and sub-share certificates, and Western Pacific Railroad Corp. 5 per cent preferred stock.

The suspicion that manipulative practices were going on in these stocks to attract a public following was behind the probe.

A questionnaire was sent to all members of the exchange by Ashbel Green, secretary, asking all purchases, sales, receipts of shares into accounts, deliveries of shares from accounts and transfers between accounts between March 20 and April 5.

Specific information sought was the trade date, name and address of the customer or account for whom the broker acted, number of shares in each stock, information whether the trade was for long and short account, and member of the firm for whom transaction was made.

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—The per capita general property tax in Pennsylvania leaped from $26.70 in 1922 to $38.12 in 1932, Dr. Leonard P. Fox, manager of the research and information bureau of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce pointed out to member organizations today in a letter in which he reviewed taxation statistics for Pennsylvania as compiled by the federal census bureau.

The total per capita governmental-cost payments of state and local governments in Pennsylvania was $70.13 in 1932 as compared with $127.96 in New York, $129.97 in New Jersey, $73.24 in Ohio, $96.31 in Massachusetts and $70.83 in Maryland, according to the federal figures as quoted by Dr. Fox.

Federal figures showed that the levy of the general property tax in Pennsylvania increased from $239,795,000 in 1922 to $370,671,775 in 1932. The average rate per $100 of assessed valuation was $2.46 in 1922 and $2.90 in 1932.

Big Tax Jump.

Total state taxes and licenses rose from $70,464,966 in 1922 to $169,404,264 in 1932, according to the census bureau figures, or an increase of 140.4 per cent. on a per capita basis, state taxes and licenses were $7.91 in 1922 and $17.42 in 1932.

The net debt of state and local governments in Pennsylvania in 1932 was $1,213,705,622 of which the state's share was $75,858,392, or 6.3 per cent. Municipalities accounted for 54.2 per cent of the total debt; school districts for 20.4 per cent. Local debt increased 127.4 per cent from 1922 to 1932 and the state debt 51.8 per cent in the same period.

Figures quoted by Dr. Fox showed that the Pennsylvania state government and all local governments had received receipts of $626,563,214 in 1932 of which school districts received the largest share, 29.11 per cent.

Of that amount cities and boroughs received 8.91 per cent; state government 27.1 per cent; counties 10.14 per cent; townships 3.35 per cent; poor districts 1.11 per cent, and the Delaware river bridge commission 0.24 per cent.

State government, according to the census figures, was responsible for 24.3 per cent of all governmental cost payments in Pennsylvania in 1932.

Dr. Fox said the federal figures place Pennsylvania in a favorable light as far as business inquiries are concerned but indicate that in Pennsylvania the state government is spending more in proportion to total government costs than state governments in New York, Ohio, New Jersey or Massachusetts, he said the figures show state taxes have increased more rapidly than local taxes during the past decade.

Where Did Brown Spend Evenings?

Two Women Testify In Los Angeles Suit That He Was With Them

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, April 6—Where did Harry Joe Brown, film director, spend most of his evenings after he returned to Hollywood from Europe in 1933?

Sharply contrasting testimony about Mr. Brown's evenings was presented today in court where the $100,000 breach of promise suit Miss Marjorie Whiteis, known in films as Marjorie Gay, filed against Brown, is being tried.

Miss Whiteis, a pretty brunett, testified that after Brown came home in the summer of 1933 from Europe—from a trip upon which he was alleged to have seen much of Miss Sally Eilers, film star he later married—she was in his company almost every night.

Miss Eilers, on the stand to aid Brown ,said it wasn't so .

"After I got back from Europe," Miss Eilers testified, "I saw Mr. Brown every night except six nights up to the time we were married Sept. 24, 1933.

"He also called frequently at my father's home.

"We went to many shows, dinners and parties."

Brown denied that he had jilted Miss Whiteis to marry Miss Eilers.

OFFERS HIMSELF FOR SALE IN AD TO HIGH BIDDER

(International News Service)

HOUSTON, Texas.—Many, many years have swept by since the sound of the auctioneer's hammer closed sales on slaves and so when J. C. Lee ran an advertisement in a local paper offering to sell himself to the highest bidder, the matter attracted considerable comment here.

Lee made the offer, he said, because of the need for money to care for his ill eighteen-year old daughter. He told a tragic story of the effects of the depression on his personal fortune and said he placed the ad in a desperate move to secure aid.

Lee, who is 50, is a steam-fitting engineer by trade. Efforts to secure work have proved futile, he said.

The man said he had sold his watch, car, most of his clothes, and everything of value, in order to care for his daughter. "That's why I am willing to sell myself for the rest of my life," he said.

Fellow-Houstonians, reading of Lee's plight, deluged newspaper offices with offers of aid—and it appears that the 50-year-old man and his daughter will have a truly "new deal."

PIONEER STOCK IN MILLER FAMILY

(International News Service)

CANTON, Ohio. — The pioneer spirit burns eternally in the family of L. A. Miller here. And there's a reason!

Mr. Miller is a direct descendant of Ethan Allen, the Revolutionary hero, and his wife can trace her lineage directly to the premier trail-blazer of them all, Daniel Boone.

"We carry the adventurous blood in our veins," Mrs. Miller said proudly. "We are fond of outdoor activities. We love hunting and fishing." Discounting the weakness of her sex, she added, "and I can shoot as well as any of the Boones."

Blessed are nobodies. They never look silly when they happen to face a news-reel camera.

DEATH HOUSE IS DANCE HALL IN PRISON JARGON

(International News Service)

COLUMBUS, Ohio. — "King" Thomas of the "big house" speaks two languages—one the language of the outside world, and the other that of the "men back of the walls."

The "King" is Preston E. Thomas, warden of Ohio Penitentiary, and title is one of the interesting items in the unique collection of words that every prisoner, at least every veteran prisoner, knows by heart.

A few of the words have become a part of ordinary slang. These include "moll" for gangster's sweetheart, "hoosegow" for jail, and "law" for policeman.

But most of the other present no clue as to their meaning unless they are explained. For example, the prison death house is a "dance hall," sunshine is "gold," diamonds are "ice," a dollar bill is an "ace," and nitro-glycerin a "stew."

A prosecuting attorney is called a "cutter," and the container used for carrying a machine gun is a "violin case." A "pineapple" and a "rod" are a bomb and a gun respectively, and a "thimble" a stolen watch. A "Yentzer" is a cheater and a "kite" a note to be smuggled out. "Tail" is the reward for arrest of a criminal.

In other words, Japan must build more ships in violation of the treaty because America builds more to keep the treaty.

Frank Ploss, 25, was given a term of five to 14 years in Western Penitentiary and 14 months to three years in the Allegheny county workhouse on two robbery counts. Kenneth Spears, 25, was paroled because he is suffering from tuberculosis.

Amos York, 22, of Cory, member of the second gang, was sentenced to an indefinite term in Huntington reformatory. MAYOR PAYS DETECTIVE FROM PRIVATE FUNDS

(International News Service)

SEATTLE. — Salary of Luke S. May, noted criminologist and Chief of Seattle detectives, is paid out of Mayor John F. Dore's own pocketbook.

The detective chief was severed form the official payroll by refusal of the city council to provide funds in the 1934 budget. Mayor Dore, who previously was turning back $3,500 yearly from his own salary to the city treasury as a gesture of government economy, now uses $201 a month of this money to keep May on the job.

The immortal Three Little Pigs now are appearing in a pretty pink dimity for children's dresses.

Steel Employes Oppose Bill

Delegations Express Objection To Wagner Labor Board Measure

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, April 6—Delegations of employes from steel and shipbuilding plants stretching from New England to the middle west appeared before the Senate Labor Committee today to urge defeat of the Wagner bill for a permanent national labor board to settle industrial disputes.

William G. McDermott, head of the company union in the Fore River, Mass. plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp., opposed "intervention of outside interests" in adjusting labor difficulties.

Ellwood H. Smith, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corp. employes' association, declared the company union plan in his plant had been in effect 15 years with satisfactory results.

"Our objection to the bill is that it would prevent the company from reimbursing our representatives for the time spent in meeting or for other representative duties."

Smith asserted that participation of outside parties would be a "disastrous blunder."

AUSTRIAN AUTO TRADE LOWER GAS TAX

(International News Service)

VIENNA. — Spokesmen for the automobile industry recently petitioned the Austrian government to reduce its levies on gasoline, which is one of the highest taxed commodities in Austria. The tax ranges from three and a half to 12 and a half cents a gallon, which increase the retail price from 25 to 100 per cent.

The revenue derived from gasoline is more than the total profit from its production, distribution and sale the petitioners contend.

The world's successful reformers were those who began before they were old and tired of sin.

King Gustave Of Sweden Refuses His Forgiveness

King Of Sweden Refuses To Grant Audience To Bride Of Former Prince Sigvard

(International News Service)

CANNES, France, April 6.—The aged King Gustav V, of Sweden, has turned a deaf ear to the plea of young love for the royal blessing, International News Service learned today.

He has refused to forgive his grandson, the young Prince Sigvard, for marrying Erika Patzek, pretty daughter of a German market owner, and thereby removing himself from the line of succession to the throne.

The picture of a stony-hearted monarch blighting the hopes of the romantic young prince for forgiveness was painted by Countess De Bonde, wife of King Gustaf's Chamberlain.

Will Never Forgive.

"The king says he will never forgive Prince Sigvard," the countess said. "His majesty refuses to make any statement, saying too much already has been published about his private affairs."

Prince Sigvard, second son of Crown Prince Gustaf Adolf and the German girl who became his bride in a London registry office several weeks ago, arrived yesterday, presumably to seek a reconciliation with the royal grandfather. There had been reports that all the young couple had to do was to seek forgiveness and it would be forthcoming.

But the 75-year-old king proved unexpectedly adamant, according to all indications. Far from receiving the young bride and giving her a royal kiss of forgiveness as had been reported, he refused even to see her, although he held a three-hour session with Prince Sigvard.

By ARTHUR C. WIMER
Special Washington Correspondent New Castle News

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6.—Representative J. Howard Swick has been informed by the War department that Norman Eugene Sampson, R. F. D. 3, Volant, has been cited for gallantry in action during the late World war.

Mr. Sampson served as a sergeant in Battery D, 323rd Field Artillery. His citation is for gallantry displayed when he volunteered for and successfully executed an "important mission" at Bois de Consemvoye, France, October 20, 1918.

The citation authorizes Mr. Sampson to wear a silver star on the Victory Medal ribbon.

Meredith Meyers Denies Charge Of Warren Van Dyke

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Meredith Meyers, chairman of the Morris-Copeland campaign committee, in a statement issued at headquarters here today declared the charge of Warren Van Dyke, Democratic state chairman, that the leaders of the independent slate were actuated by selfish motives "only caused smiles of amusement in localities where what I stand for is well known."

Meyers declared he had depeatedly informed Roland S. Morris, who heads the independent slate as senatorial candidate, and Judge Charles D. Copeland, the Gubernatorial candidate, that he would accept no post within their power and that his own ambition was to preserve the integrity of the Democratic party.

Erie Neighbors Will Not Allow Eviction Order

Neighbors Go To Aid Of Man And Wife And Six Children In Destitute State

(International News Service)

ERIE, Pa., Apr. 6.—Defying the law which made possible the eviction of John and Mary Gonciarz and their six children, a mob of 200 irate neighbors today forcibly returned the destitute family to their former home.

Although a court order upholding the eviction is expected today, the Gonciarz family continued their defiance of the landlord whose eviction forced them to spend the night in a barn.

County commissioners and poor directors said they were unable to aid the family when members appeared at the court house for relief.

George Gosney Is Suffering From Unusual Disease

Sun Stroke Leaves Man At Bentleyville, Pa., Inverse To Heat And Cold

(International News Service)

BENTLEYVILLE, Pa., April 6.—Another strange case to be written into the records of the medical world was revealed here today in the treatment of George Gosney, 44.

Gosney's ailment causes him to experience inverse reactions to heat and cold. The hotter it is, the colder Gosney becomes and the colder it is, the warmer he feels.

Victim of sunstroke, Gosney is responding to treatment. His physician said he has never heard of a similar case.

Sunstroke

Gosney was working along a Charleroi highway last July when he collapsed from the heat. For weeks he lay in a coma.

His left leg, between the hip and knee, has lost its sense of feeling. When the sun is shining Gosney dare not leave his home, for the sun's rays almost completely blind him.

Physicians who have treated Gosney said they are chiefly concerned with the bursting of capillary blood vessels. This takes place only when the weather is warm.

Gosney suffers from cold when the weather becomes hot and his legs become numb. When the thermometer was hovering around the zero mark in February he felt fine. Then, he said, he wanted to discard his overcoat—because he was overheated.

The conspirators, the dispatch said, plan to bring about the return of Princess Helen, Carol's divorced wife, as her son Michael ascends the throne.

Numerous arrests have been made throughout the country and among others Prof. Gomoju, alleged leader of the movement, has been taken into custody.

DEFENDANT WINS IN SUIT OVER WAGES

In the case of Richard Stewart against Norman Weller of the Harlansburg road, which was tried before Judge R. L. Hildebrand, the jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant. The case was one in which Stewart was claiming that the defendant owed him a balance for wages. Weller's defense was that Stewart did not understand farm work and that he had been paid all the money he was worth.

Probe Action Of Fourteen Stocks

Exchange Will Delve Into Activity In Fourteen Stocks

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6.—The New York stock exchange today launched a probe in the market action of 14 stocks.

Wall street attributed this action to the high-pressure publicity the stocks have received in the last two weeks, resulting in active speculation in recent market sessions.

The stocks are Borg Warner Corp. common, Cerro De Pasco, Eaton Manufacturing Co., Federal Light & Traction common, Indian Refining Co., Kelvinator Corp., Louisiana Oil Refining Corp. common and preferred, Pacific Gas & Electric, Seaboard Oil, Servel, Inc., Texas Pacific Coal & Oil Co., Texas Pacific Land Trust certificates and sub-share certificates, and Western Pacific Railroad Corp. 6 per cent preferred stock.

The suspicion that manipulative practices were going on in these stocks to attract a public following was behind the probe.

A questionnaire was sent to all members of the exchange by Ashbel Green, secretary, asking all purchases, sales, receipts of shares into accounts, deliveries of shares from accounts and transfers between accounts between March 20 and April 5.

Specific information sought was the trade date, name and address of the customer or account for whom the broker acted, number of shares in each stock, information whether the trade was for long and short account, and member of the firm for whom transaction was made.

Pedestrians Fail To Avoid Autos On Road

Metzger Cites Causes Which Aid In Increase Of Highway Accidents

CROSS STREETS AGAINST SIGNAL

(Special To The News)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Leon D. Metzger, secretary of revenue, today said pedestrians unnecessarily increase the accident odds against them by their failure to exercise reasonable good judgment and caution.

"As long as motorists and pedestrians have occasion to use the same thoroughfares there will be accidents involving the two, and it is equally certain that as long as pedestrians fail to follow even the simplest rules for their own safety these accidents will be especially numerous," Secretary Metzger said.

"Take, for instance, the simple matter of crossing at street intersections protected with signals. Accident records show that by the too-frequent practice of disregarding such signals the pedestrian automatically increases four times the odds against him.

At Crossings.

"Last year 183 pedestrians were injured, three fatally, while crossing with the signal at such intersections. On the other hand, 656 were injured—and the fatalities leaped to 27—while crossing against the signal. In two months this year twenty-eight persons were injured, two fatally crossing with the signal while 137 were injured, six fatally, while crossing against the signal.

"In other words, pedestrians who flaunted the signals simply piled up the odds against them and, in effect, deliberately assumed responsibility for the increased danger they incurred.

"The same situation exists in the rural districts where accident statistics emphasize the danger of walking along a highway with, rather than against, the traffic. Recent statistics show that the pedestrian who turns his back to automobiles instantly doubles the accident odds against him. Last year 430 pedestrians were injured and eighty-five were killed while walking on rural roads with their backs to traffic. These totals are twice as large as those in cases where the pedestrian used forethought and walked facing oncoming traffic. In the latter type of accident 229 pedestrians were injured and 58 killed.

Facing Traffic.

"In this connection it is worth while to note that safety regulations which direct pedestrians to walk along the left side of the road, facing traffic, dictate that procedure so that the man on foot not only can, if necessary, step out of the way if the motorist does not see him or cannot change his course rapidly enough. The full effect of this safety measure is lost if pedestrians simply walk facing traffic and make no other effort to avoid an accident.

"In this situation there are frequently conditions where the pedestrian commands a better view than the motorist of the impending danger. This is particularly true when two cars pass at night or in foggy or rainy weather. At such times a sensible pedestrian will lose no time in giving space to two-way traffic.'

Earle Arrives In New York

Former Ambassador To Austria Describe Recent Civil War Disturbances

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6—The recent Civil War in Austria was described Thursday by a man who had witnessed it, G. H. Earle, former American, ambassador to that country, who returned on the liner Washington.

He raised the "clemency" shown by Premier Dollfus to the defeated socialists, marveled at the bravery of the latter and was "disgusted" by the flight of their leaders when the fighting started.

"There is nothing so horrible as war and civil war is the worst of all," he said, "but the most disgusting part was that the socialist leader who incited the rebellion ran away to Czechoslovakia almost as soon as the fighting started, leaving his followers to fight and die in small, isolated groups.

Earle resigned his ambassadorship to enter the Pennsylvania primaries for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. He was met as the vessel docked by a group of Democratic leaders of Pennsylvania including Joseph F. Guffey, state chairman.

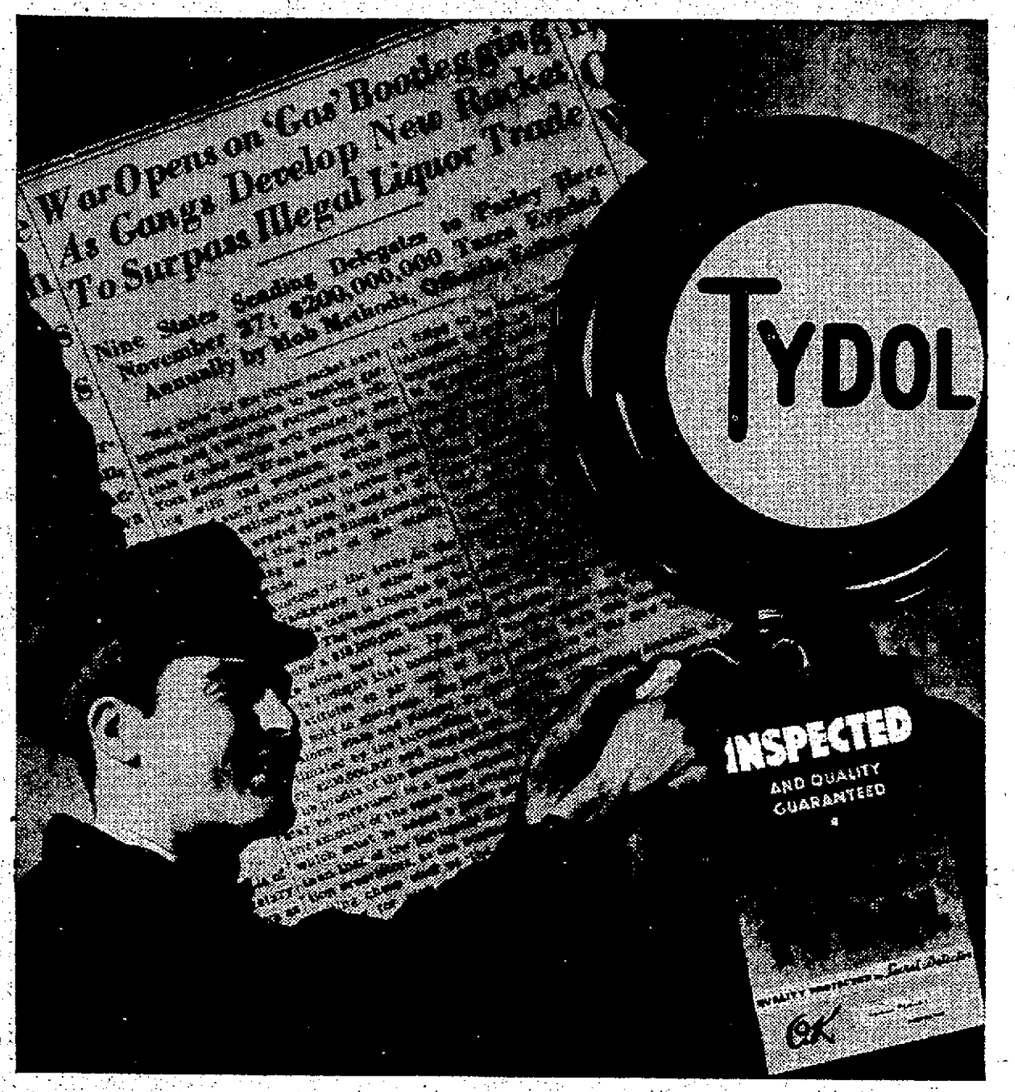
TYDOL is protected

Ask the man at the pump



THE finest motor fuel ever sold at the regular gasoline price. That's what we pledged TYDOL to be in 1934. And that's what it is!

And now we seal that pledge of quality by sealing a tag on every TYDOL pump. Behind that tag is a story of the integrity of 22,000 TYDOL dealers. They were determined, in these days of substitution, "cutting" and adulteration . . . that TYDOL must be protected . . . there should be no tampering with TYDOL'S high quality. So with their coöperation, the makers of TYDOL developed a patented device . . . a "Secret Detector."

This device shows instantly the slightest impurity or adulteration in TYDOL. It is used in thousands of tests, made day and night, every inch of the way from the refinery to your car.

When you ask for TYDOL you get TYDOL! You get the highest anti-knock, the most powerful gasoline ever sold at the regular gas price. You get the gasoline that is different . . . that actually lubricates as it drives. The gasoline that is best for your motor . . . and the most for your money.

Tide Water Oil Company, New Castle, Pa.

X1 The first gasoline to lubricate as it drives at no extra cost.

X2 The most powerful gasoline ever sold at regular price.

"IT LUBRICATES AS IT DRIVES"

On Court House Hill

Every one of the forty-seven jurors attending common pleas court this week was at work yesterday at the same time. This was a very unusual occurrence. It is doubtful if there is a precedent in the history of the county. Twelve jurors were tied up on a case being heard by Judge James A. Chambers. While this case was on Judge Hildebrand called another, tried it and sent the jury out. A second case was taken up and tried before him. The first jury had not yet reported when the second went out. This left only eleven jurors of the panel free. There was another case to be taken up. Both sides were anxious to try it, so agreed to go ahead with the eleven jurors, instead of twelve. Thus all the jurors were working at one time.

Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard yesterday took Mike Perrott to Huntington reformatory. Perrott was implicated in a series of robberies of wholesale houses in this city. His accomplice was sentenced to the penitentiary, but as Perrott was under 19 years of age he was sent to Huntington, for an indeterminate period, depending upon his behavior.

Frank and Elizabeth Beleny have presented a petition to court to stay a writ of execution in the case of John D. Mast, use of W. C. Henderson against Charles and Mary Senkert, with notice to Frank and Elizabeth Beleny, terre tenants. The Beleny's purchased a farm in Wilmington township from Senkert's assuming a mortgage given to the use plaintiff for $2,250. It is set forth in the petition that the farm is assessed at $2700 and is reasonably worth $5000. Interest is back for two years, less a credit of $45, and the taxes are paid. Belenys have made an application for a Federal Farm Loan, but claim that the use plaintiff has issued a fieri facias and is threatening to sell the property. It is claimed that the sale would work a serious hardship on the owners, and the court is asked to stay it pending disposition of the application for a farm loan.

New rules of court, relating to trespass and damage cases, were put into effect for the first time this week. Under the old practice a motion for a non-suit was usually made after the plaintiff had put in all of his testimony and rested his case. Under the new rules in alleged negligence cases the plaintiff must first establish liability of the defendant before he can proceed to prove the amount of damage. In other words when the case is opened the plaintiff must put in all the testimony he has as affecting the legal grounds of liability, and when this is done indicate that he rests his case as to the liability. A motion for a non-suit by the defendant is then in order, and if it is granted the case ends there, but if the motion is refused, the plaintiff can then proceed with his testmony on the question of the amount of damages sustained. The effect of this new rule of court will no doubt be to save considerable of the court's time.

P. M. Cox, use of the First National Bank of Volant, has filed a suit at the prothonotary's office against Martha J. Drake and Harvey E. Martin, executors of the estate of the late W. M. C. Drake to collect a note of $95.

Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard and deputies have had a wide and varied experience during the first three months which they have been in office. The work has involved almost every kind of a writ that is ordinarily put through the sheriff's office. Although all of them went in without former experience, they have handled the business to the entire satisfaction of all parties concerned.

Wylie Brewster, agent of the bureau of animal industry, estimates that there are still nearly one thousand unlicensed dogs in Lawrence county despite the repeated warnings and numerous arrests that have been made for non-compliance with the law. Brewester was up in the mining district of Plaingrove township yesterday checking up. About one week ago he posted notices warning dog owners to secure licenses at once.

If he finds warnings have gone unheeded arrests will be made.

FISHERMAN HOOKS STRANGE WOLF-FISH

(International News Service)

OCEANSIDE, Colo.—Ben Wolfe, local bait stand operator, today joined those who are telling about strange sea monsters and serpents But Wolfe has tangible evidence to offer in his case.

While fishing on the beach here a few days ago he hooked a fine specimen of the Alepisaurus, otherwise known as the Wolf-fish. The fish has a forked tail, is about four feet in length, slender like a serpent and with a long mouth ornamented with ferocious, serrated teeth. The Alepisaurus is a denizen of the lower deeps and seldom gets into shallow water.

Pedestrians Fail To Avoid Autos On Road

Metzger Cites Causes Which Aid In Increase Of Highway Accidents

CROSS STREETS AGAINST SIGNAL

(Special To The News)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Leon D. Metzger, secretary of revenue, today said pedestrians unnecessarily increase the accident odds against them by their failure to exercise reasonable good judgment and caution.

"As long as motorists and pedestrians have occasion to use the same thoroughfares there will be accidents involving the two, and it is equally certain that as long as pedestrians fail to follow even the simplest rules for their own safety these accidents will be especially numerous," Secretary Metzger said.

"Take, for instance, the simple matter of crossing at street intersections protected with signals. Accident records show that by the too-frequent practice of disregarding such signals the pedestrian automatically increases four times the odds against him.

At Crossings.

"Last year 183 pedestrians were injured, three fatally, while crossing with the signal at such intersections. On the other hand, 656 were injured—and the fatalities leaped to 27—while crossing against the signal. In two months this year twenty-eight persons were injured, two fatally crossing with the signal while 137 were injured, six fatally, while crossing against the signal.

"In other words, pedestrians who flaunted the signals simply piled up the odds against them and, in effect, deliberately assumed responsibility for the increased danger they incurred.

"The same situation exists in the rural districts where accident statistics emphasize the danger of walking along a highway with, rather than against, the traffic. Recent statistics show that the pedestrian who turns his back to automobiles instantly doubles the accident odds against him. Last year 430 pedestrians were injured and eighty-five were killed while walking on rural roads with their backs to traffic. These totals are twice as large as those in cases where the pedestrian used forethought and walked facing oncoming traffic. In the latter type of accident 229 pedestrians were injured and 58 killed.

Facing Traffic.

"In this connection it is worth while to note that safety regulations which direct pedestrians to walk along the left side of the road, facing traffic, dictate that procedure so that the man on foot not only can, if necessary, step out of the way if the motorist does not see him or cannot change his course rapidly enough. The full effect of this safety measure is lost if pedestrians simply walk facing traffic and make no other effort to avoid an accident.

"In this situation there are frequently conditions where the pedestrian commands a better view than the motorist of the impending danger. This is particularly true when two cars pass at night or in foggy or rainy weather. At such times a sensible pedestrian will lose no time in giving space to two-way traffic.'

Earle Arrives In New York

Former Ambassador To Austria Describe Recent Civil War Disturbances

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6—The recent Civil War in Austria was described Thursday by a man who had witnessed it, G. H. Earle, former American, ambassador to that country, who returned on the liner Washington.

He raised the "clemency" shown by Premier Dollfus to the defeated socialists, marveled at the bravery of the latter and was "disgusted" by the flight of their leaders when the fighting started.

"There is nothing so horrible as war and civil war is the worst of all," he said, "but the most disgusting part was that the socialist leader who incited the rebellion ran away to Czechoslovakia almost as soon as the fighting started, leaving his followers to fight and die in small, isolated groups.

Earle resigned his ambassadorship to enter the Pennsylvania primaries for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. He was met as the vessel docked by a group of Democratic leaders of Pennsylvania including Joseph F. Guffey, state chairman.

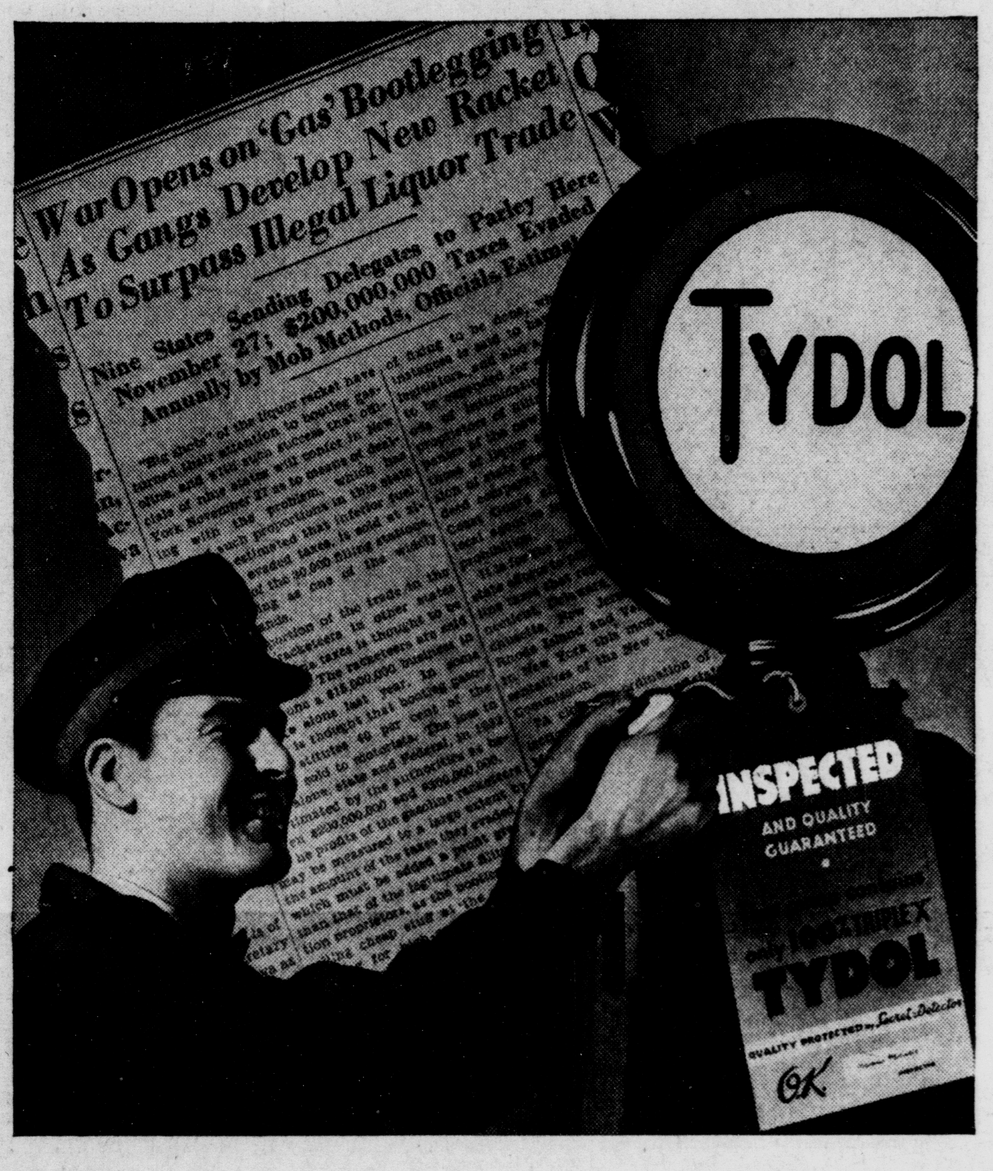
Ask the man at the pump



THE finest motor fuel ever sold at the regular gasoline price. That's what we pledged TYDOL to be in 1934. And that's what it is!

And now we seal that pledge of quality by sealing a tag on every TYDOL pump. Behind that tag is a story of the integrity of 22,000 TYDOL dealers. They were determined, in these days of substitution, "cutting" and adulteration . . . that TYDOL must be protected . . . there should be no tampering with TYDOL'S high quality. So with their coöperation, the makers of TYDOL developed a patented device . . . a "Secret Detector."

This device shows instantly the slightest impurity or adulteration in TYDOL. It is used in thousands of tests, made day and night, every inch of the way from the refinery to your car.

When you ask for TYDOL you get TYDOL! You get the highest anti-knock, the most powerful gasoline ever sold at the regular gas price. You get the gasoline that is different . . . that actually lubricates as it drives. The gasoline that is best for your motor . . . and the most for your money.

On Court House Hill

Every one of the forty-seven jurors attending common pleas court this week was at work yesterday at the same time. This was a very unusual occurrence. It is doubtful if there is a precedent in the history of the county. Twelve jurors were tied up on a case being heard by Judge James A. Chambers. While this case was on Judge Hildebrand called another, tried it and sent the jury out. A second case was taken up and tried before him. The first jury had not yet reported when the second went out. This left only eleven jurors of the panel free. There was another case to be taken up. Both sides were anxious to try it, so agreed to go ahead with the eleven jurors, instead of twelve. Thus all the jurors were working at one time.

Shows Big Tax Leap In State

General Property Tax In State Shows Big Increase In 10 Years

STATE TAXATION FACTS REVIEWED

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—The per capita general property tax in Pennsylvania leaped from $26.70 in 1922 to $38.12 in 1932, Dr. Leonard P. Fox, manager of the research and information bureau of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce pointed out to member organizations today in a letter in which he reviewed taxation statistics for Pennsylvania as compiled by the federal census bureau.

The total per capita governmental-cost payments of state and local governments in Pennsylvania was $70.13 in 1932 as compared with $127.96 in New York, $129.97 in New Jersey, $73.24 in Ohio, $96.31 in Massachusetts and $70.83 in Maryland, according to the federal figures as quoted by Dr. Fox.

Federal figures showed that the levy of the general property tax in Pennsylvania increased from $239,795,000 in 1922 to $370,671,775 in 1932. The average rate per $100 of assessed valuation was $2.46 in 1922 and $2.90 in 1932.

Big Tax Jump.

Total state taxes and licenses rose from $70,464,966 in 1922 to $169,404,264 in 1932, according to the census bureau figures, or an increase of 140.4 per cent. on a per capita basis, state taxes and licenses were $7.91 in 1922 and $17.42 in 1932.

The net debt of state and local governments in Pennsylvania in 1932 was $1,213,705,622 of which the state's share was $75,858,392, or 6.3 per cent. Municipalities accounted for 54.2 per cent of the total debt; school districts for 20.4 per cent. Local debt increased 127.4 per cent from 1922 to 1932 and the state debt 51.8 per cent in the same period.

Figures quoted by Dr. Fox showed that the Pennsylvania state government and all local governments had received receipts of $626,563,214 in 1932 of which school districts received the largest share, 29.11 per cent.

Of that amount cities and boroughs received 8.91 per cent; state government 27.1 per cent; counties 10.14 per cent; townships 3.35 per cent; poor districts 1.11 per cent, and the Delaware river bridge commission 0.24 per cent.

State government, according to the census figures, was responsible for 24.3 per cent of all governmental cost payments in Pennsylvania in 1932.

Dr. Fox said the federal figures place Pennsylvania in a favorable light as far as business inquiries are concerned but indicate that in Pennsylvania the state government is spending more in proportion to total government costs than state governments in New York, Ohio, New Jersey or Massachusetts, he said the figures show state taxes have increased more rapidly than local taxes during the past decade.

Where Did Brown Spend Evenings?

Two Women Testify In Los Angeles Suit That He Was With Them

(International News Service)

LOS ANGELES, April 6—Where did Harry Joe Brown, film director, spend most of his evenings after he returned to Hollywood from Europe in 1933?

Sharply contrasting testimony about Mr. Brown's evenings was presented today in court where the $100,000 breach of promise suit Miss Marjorie Whiteis, known in films as Marjorie Gay, filed against Brown, is being tried.

Miss Whiteis, a pretty brunett, testified that after Brown came home in the summer of 1933 from Europe—from a trip upon which he was alleged to have seen much of Miss Sally Eilers, film star he later married—she was in his company almost every night.

Miss Eilers, on the stand to aid Brown ,said it wasn't so .

"After I got back from Europe," Miss Eilers testified, "I saw Mr. Brown every night except six nights up to the time we were married Sept. 24, 1933.

"He also called frequently at my father's home.

"We went to many shows, dinners and parties."

Brown denied that he had jilted Miss Whiteis to marry Miss Eilers.

OFFERS HIMSELF FOR SALE IN AD TO HIGH BIDDER

(International News Service)

HOUSTON, Texas.—Many, many years have swept by since the sound of the auctioneer's hammer closed sales on slaves and so when J. C. Lee ran an advertisement in a local paper offering to sell himself to the highest bidder, the matter attracted considerable comment here.

Lee made the offer, he said, because of the need for money to care for his ill eighteen-year old daughter. He told a tragic story of the effects of the depression on his personal fortune and said he placed the ad in a desperate move to secure aid.

Lee, who is 50, is a steam-fitting engineer by trade. Efforts to secure work have proved futile, he said.

The man said he had sold his watch, car, most of his clothes, and everything of value, in order to care for his daughter. "That's why I am willing to sell myself for the rest of my life," he said.

Fellow-Houstonians, reading of Lee's plight, deluged newspaper offices with offers of aid—and it appears that the 50-year-old man and his daughter will have a truly "new deal."

PIONEER STOCK IN MILLER FAMILY

(International News Service)

CANTON, Ohio. — The pioneer spirit burns eternally in the family of L. A. Miller here. And there's a reason!

Mr. Miller is a direct descendant of Ethan Allen, the Revolutionary hero, and his wife can trace her lineage directly to the premier trailblazer of them all, Daniel Boone.

"We carry the adventurous blood in our veins," Mrs. Miller said proudly. "We are fond of outdoor activities. We love hunting and fishing." Discounting the weakness of her sex, she added, "and I can shoot as well as any of the Boones."

Blessed are nobodies. They never look silly when they happen to face a news-reel camera.

DEATH HOUSE IS DANCE HALL IN PRISON JARGON

(International News Service)

COLUMBUS, Ohio. — "King" Thomas of the "big house" speaks two languages—one the language of the outside world, and the other that of the "men back of the walls."

The "King" is Preston E. Thomas, warden of Ohio Penitentiary, and title is one of the interesting items in the unique collection of words that every prisoner, at least every veteran prisoner, knows by heart.

A few of the words have become a part of ordinary slang. These include "moll" for gangster's sweetheart, "hoosegow" for jail, and "law" for policeman.

But most of the other present no clue as to their meaning unless they are explained. For example, the prison death house is a "dance hall," sunshine is "gold," diamonds are "ice," a dollar bill is an "ace," and nitro-glycerin a "stew."

A prosecuting attorney is called a "cutter," and the container used for carrying a machine gun is a "violin case." A "pineapple" and a "rod" are a bomb and a gun respectively, and a "thimble" a stolen watch. A "Yentzer" is a cheater and a "kite" a note to be smuggled out. "Tail" is the reward for arrest of a criminal.

In other words, Japan must build more ships in violation of the treaty because America builds more to keep the treaty.

New York Giants Worried Over Training Battles

Carl Hubbell Has Lost His Effectiveness; Giants Are Not Hitting Ball Hard

INDIANS LOOK LIKE REAL CLUB

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, April 6.—Not wishing to draw any invidious comparisons, but the last champion of the world that trained in Miami finished third, I believe, the next time out and the following year a lot of them finished in Pawtucket. This is believed to have no possible bearing upon the New York Giants because they are composed of sterling, rugged, honest souls who are very upright. But so is the nickelpiano in O'Sullivan's back room and, besides, there must be more than a coincidence in the fact that a champion of the world can win no more than thirteen out of twenty-five amidst the mixed-grill competition of the south.

At least, I would like to read something sinister into the situation, if only because I wish to be flattering. Otherwise, we must assume that the Giants are licked by the new ball.

They tell us, for instance, that Carl Hubbell, the top-head of the staff and the league last year, is not quite in shape as yet. The gentleman has only been working out since the middle of February. It isn't necessary to add that Hubbell, as far as this ball club is concerned, is the man who stands in the wings and makes the curtain go up and down. If he wins, the club wins with him; if he doesn't, they lose and, in this connection, the events of the last ten days have been a little disconcerting. The St. Louis Browns, whom their Mr. Hornsby would characterize as a lot of ukulele hitters, smote Hubbell for seven runs in one inning; two days ago, the Cleveland Indians surrounded the gentleman to the extent of two triples, a double and two singles in one inning, scoring four runs. I doubt whether two similar innings were recorded against Hubbell during the whole of last year.

Incidentally, the Indians who now have taken four out of six from the Giants—as against three out of three by the Cards; three out of five by the Browns; one out of one by the Reds; none out of two by the Dodgers and one out of five by the Athletics—went south without any especial delusion about themselves. They'd be mildly nonplussed if they finished better than fifth in the American League.

Equipment was issued to over 50 young candidates for the 1934 New Castle high school football team yesterday afternoon at Taggart Field, by Coach Phil H. Bridenbaugh and Faculty Manager Ralph H. Gardner.

Another large group will be given equipment this afternoon and the entire squad will probably number the 100 mark.

WEST SIDE MERCHANTS

Members of the West Side Merchants mushball team will hold a meeting tonight at the 6:30 o'clock at the Boroline field. The following are asked to report—H. Tucker, B. Tucker, J. Shaw, C. Krueger, L. Kreuger, E. Todd, W. Kreuger, R. Bigley, B. Hill, C. Erwin, Glasstetter, C. Kelly, Steingasser, Kearns, Ted Kolcz, and McGurk. Also any others who are interested in making the team.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS' LAND

Ben Jeby of New York and Ted Yarosz of Monaca, middleweights, clash tonight in a 12-round bout at Pittsburgh and everything points to a fat gate. Jeby met Buck McTiernan in his only Pittsburgh showing and at one time claimed the middleweight championship of the world. Yarosz has lost only two decisions of 73 tilts and it looks as though he will outslap the Gotham battler. Quite a crowd of local fight fans who like their punches served professionally will see the battle, which will be held in Duquesne Garden where George Chip knocked Frank Klaus loose from the middleweight championship when the poundage was 158.

And while talking of Yarosz, Jeby and Chip it may not be amiss to mention a fan who followed the Chips, George and Joe, to scenes of the different combats—speaking now of Gene Mullen. Gene travelled with Joe Chip to Brooklyn when he boxed Al McCoy and was also there the night that McCoy lifted a left hook from the canvas and removed the middleweight crown from George's head. Later he watched Joe muff a chance to bring the crown back to the Chip domicile when Josefus battle Johnny Wilson at Pittsburgh and later at Detroit. In fact, Gene was one of Joe's seconds in the Detroit embroglio. However, there was one fight, of which Gene cannot speak authoritatively. He occupied a bleacher seat and just before the final punch went over the bleacher seat weakened, Gene fell backward and he was picking himself up from the floor when he heard the referee say "10".

The bowl is coming down, post by post, regrettable as this may be, but some of the boys who are helping in the demolition of the scene of many gruelling battles are engaged in a treasure hunt. Daily they eye the ground beneath the bleachers. Several quarters, half dollars and dimes have been found. It isn't probable they will find many coins as it was the custom in the boom days to have the janitor, immediately following each fight, search beneath the seats for any articles that might have been lost. The articles were turned into the bowl office and then returned to owners. Insofar as professional boxing is concerned at present the city is practically marooned but despite the ravages of the depression it is pleasant to retrospect and recall that of all the people who entered the bowl—and there must have been probably 150,000—not one pocketbook was stolen, not one arrest was made, no accidents occurred and only one bout ended in a foul. In fact out of all the boxers who battled there—and there were nearly 1,000 boxers booked, only one sutained a suspension, if recollection serves accurately. He was Maxie Brown, the Youngstown blonde light-heavyweight who exchanged swings with such not soon forgotten pugilistic fun makers as Elmo (Clark) the Mighty and Warren Farrow, the colored boy who hit where he wasn't looking.

Providing the Lawrence county baesball league gets under way next month—and indications say it will—the loop should stage some mighty fast games. West Pittsburg, Bessemer, Mahoning A. A. and the Polish Nationals have signified their intention of taking out a franchise and naturally will seek the cream of the 1933 season. Providing the managers sign the best players they can and internal dissension is dispensed with, good games are bound to result and the fans will journey to the games.

Union Gridders To Start Monday

Coach Dave Boyd Calls For First Practice Monday Afternoon; 35 Are Equipped

Union High school football team will start spring training at the Union High field Monday afternoon, at 4 o'clock according to an announcement from Coach Dave Boyd today.

Fame Fickle Collins Grieves

Would Like To Return To Baseball He Loved So Well

BOSTON, April 6—"The public soon forgets" is the bitter reflection of John "Shano" Collins, former big league baseball player and manager who cannot land a position as an umpire because—he was told—he lacks experience.

"Shano," was a headliner getter during his days with the White Sox as one of the greatest outfielders of his time. He served 20 years in baseball. Collins played with the White Sox for eleven years, managed the Des Moines team for three years, put in two years with Pittsburgh and one and a half with the Red Sox.

He is running a lunchroom near the Dedham courthouse where lawyers, jurors and newspapermen get their daily bowl of soup.

"I am getting desperate," Collins said. "I want to get back in baseball, managing, scouting, or umpiring, anything to be connected with the game I love so well. I thought it would be easy. But for a fellow my age, there doesn't seem to be any place in the diamond sun,

"Umpiring, in particular, appeals to me, but they threw me down for lack of experience, if you can imagine such a thing."

In the meantime, he goes on serving his soup and beans across the counter to keep the wolf away from the door.

Is Out Of Doors Girl To Become House Flower?

Lack Of Interest De-emphasizes Athletics At Wellsley

(International News Service)

WELLESLEY, Mass., April 6.—Is the outdoor girl turning back on the trail of evolution and becoming once more a shrinking violet or hot house flower?

Wellesley college, one of the pioneers in sports for girls, has embarked upon a campaign of sharp de-emphasis of athletics. And it's not because they fear the Carnegie Foundation will accuse them of subsidizing players. It's just downright lack of interest—also to some extent, lack of financial stability of the college Athletic association.

The athletic authorities at Wellesley have announced that there will be no further numerals, individual cups, class cups, tennis cups, or varsity pins awarded. The only laurels to survive the clash were the "W's" blazers and oar pins as crew awards. The latter insignias, however, must be purchased by the rowers.

One pretty seven-year post graduate, who has watched the rise and fall and sports at Wellesley, explained it thus:

"The girl who takes sports seriously seems to have passed from the picture. Nobody feels like dying for good old Wellesley, and there is no chance to receive the fame that goes with athletic glory at a man's college."

Aquatic Stars To Compete In Race

George Young, Catalina Island, Winner In Meet

(International News Service)

HURLEYVILLE, N. Y., April 6.—A 15-mile swimming marathon will be staged at the Morningside Hotel Lake, Hurleyville, N. Y., this July.

The outstanding long distance swimmers of the country are expected to enter this competition, which will be the first aquatic marathon since the famous Lake George swimming race in 1927.

George Young, winner of the Catalina Isand swim some years ago and more recently-crowned Toronto marathon winner; Marvin Nelson, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, who is a former Wrigley marathon victor; Bill Goll, famous New York long distance swimming star; are among those expected to compete.

Various women long distance competitors have also been invited to participate, including Gertrude Ederle, the first woman to swim the English channel; Margaret Ravior, present women's marathon titleholder; Mrs. Ruth Towers Corsan, famous Canadian champion.

Sunny To Try Channel Again

Channel Swimming association has refused to recognize the swim across the English channel by Miss Sunny Lowry last August according to London reports. The association said that while it does not question Sunny's performance it cannot grant official recognition of her feat because she did not comply with the regulation that a chart of the swim made during its progress should be made. She's a 23 year old Manchester girl. She will try to swim the channel again.

NEW NATIONAL A. A. U. GIRL BASKETBALL CHAMPIONS

Likes Diving, Too!

Miss Helene Madison, greatest Olympic woman champion swimmer in history, is photographed as she bounds high into the air from the diving board at a pool in Chicago. The champ likes to do fancy aquatic tricks as well as shatter records.

SPYING ON SPORTS

"CHAMPEEN JEEMY" LONDOS, world title claimant to the heavyweight wrestling crown, may at any time now go out on a furniture buying spree. His eyes will be peeled for a nice, little rocking chair. (Ole rocking chair's got him—almost!)

In short, folk, the champ is seriously considering his exit from the world of wrestling within the next few months.

Londos wants to quit an undefeated champion, marry, hie away to the land of his forefathers—Athens, Greece—and spend the remainder of his days sipping wines, strumming a mandolin, and recounting his mat conquests to his brethren.

* * *

The Champ, a shrewd business man, who demanded and received guarantees throughout the depression, has made quite a sum of money ever since he took the title from Dick Shikat at Philadelphia, in 1930. Londos has drawn gates, it is said, totaling $5,000,000, of which he is supposed to have received more than $1,000,000.

This establishes a record for the sport, for no wrestler, in the history of the rough and tumble pastime, has ever reached the $1,000,000 mark in earnings.

Even Frank Gotch, the peerless champion of pre-war times, who wrestled in almost every town in his own country and in every corner of the globe, made only $250,000 in his career of 14 years. Londos, as well as other wrestlers of today, will earn more during a prosperous season than Gotch did in his reign as the world's undisputed champion.

* * *

If "Jeemy" does quit the mat he will leave behind him a colorful record—but not like the Great Gotch, who retired only after competition was so bad that there seemed to be no one who could knock the royal mantle from his massive figure.

Londos may feel himself slipping, and presumably doesn't relish the idea of defeat. Maybe he has been reading of other sports idols who have gone to the top and who, sooner or later, have been knocked down from their pedestals.

But, in the words of the wise, the lure of gold is mighty strong, and maybe the champ will stick around for another million.

Joe Vosmik Is Hitting Hard

Vosmik's bat was the big reason why the Indians made it four games to two over the Giants at Montgomery, Ala., yesterday. The score was 4 to 2.

New York Giants Worried Over Training Battles

Carl Hubbell Has Lost His Effectiveness; Giants Are Not Hitting Ball Hard

INDIANS LOOK LIKE REAL CLUB

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, April 6.—Not wishing to draw any invidious comparisons, but the last champion of the world that trained in Miami finished third, I believe, the next time out and the following year a lot of them finished in Pawtucket. This is believed to have no possible bearing upon the New York Giants because they are composed of sterling, rugged, honest souls who are very upright. But so is the nickelpiano in O'Sullivan's back room and, besides, there must be more than a coincidence in the fact that a champion of the world can win no more than thirteen out of twenty-five amidst the mixed-grill competition of the south.

At least, I would like to read something sinister into the situation, if only because I wish to be flattering. Otherwise, we must assume that the Giants are licked by the new ball.

They tell us, for instance, that Carl Hubbell, the top-head of the staff and the league last year, is not quite in shape as yet. The gentleman has only been working out since the middle of February. Later he watched Joe muff a chance to bring the crown back to the Chip domicile when Josefus battle Johnny Wilson at Pittsburgh and later at Detroit. In fact, Gene was one of Joe's seconds in the Detroit embroglio. However, there was one fight, of which Gene cannot speak authoritatively. He occupied a bleacher seat and just before the final punch went over the bleacher seat weakened, Gene fell backward and he was picking himself up from the floor when he heard the referee say "10".

The bowl is coming down, post by post, regrettable as this may be, but some of the boys who are helping in the demolition of the scene of many gruelling battles are engaged in a treasure hunt. Daily they eye the ground beneath the bleachers. Several quarters, half dollars and dimes have been found. It isn't probable they will find many coins as it was the custom in the boom days to have the janitor, immediately following each fight, search beneath the seats for any articles that might have been lost. The articles were turned into the bowl office and then returned to owners. Insofar as professional boxing is concerned at present the city is practically marooned but despite the ravages of the depression it is pleasant to retrospect and recall that of all the people who entered the bowl—and there must have been probably 150,000—not one pocketbook was stolen, not one arrest was made, no accidents occurred and only one bout ended in a foul. In fact out of all the boxers who battled there—and there were nearly 1,000 boxers booked, only one sutained a suspension, if recollection serves accurately. He was Maxie Brown, the Youngstown blonde light-heavyweight who exchanged swings with such not soon forgotten pugilistic fun makers as Elmo (Clark) the Mighty and Warren Farrow, the colored boy who hit where he wasn't looking.

Providing the Lawrence county baesball league gets under way next month—and indications say it will—the loop should stage some mighty fast games. West Pittsburg, Bessemer, Mahoning A. A. and the Polish Nationals have signified their intention of taking out a franchise and naturally will seek the cream of the 1933 season. Providing the managers sign the best players they can and internal dissension is dispensed with, good games are bound to result and the fans will journey to the games.

Fame Fickle Collins Grieves

Would Like To Return To Baseball He Loved So Well

BOSTON, April 6—"The public soon forgets" is the bitter reflection of John "Shano" Collins, former big league baseball player and manager who cannot land a position as an umpire because—he was told—he lacks experience.

"Shano," was a headliner getter during his days with the White Sox as one of the greatest outfielders of his time. He served 20 years in baseball. Collins played with the White Sox for eleven years, managed the Des Moines team for three years, put in two years with Pittsburgh and one and a half with the Red Sox.

He is running a lunchroom near the Dedham courthouse where lawyers, jurors and newspapermen get their daily bowl of soup.

"I am getting desperate," Collins said. "I want to get back in baseball, managing, scouting, or umpiring, anything to be connected with the game I love so well. I thought it would be easy. But for a fellow my age, there doesn't seem to be any place in the diamond sun.

"Umpiring, in particular, appeals to me, but they threw me down for lack of experience, if you can imagine such a thing."

In the meantime, he goes on serving his soup and beans across the counter to keep the wolf away from the door.

Is Out Of Doors Girl To Become House Flower?

Lack Of Interest De-emphasizes Athletics At Wellsley

(International News Service)

WELLESLEY, Mass., April 6.—Is the outdoor girl turning back on the trail of evolution and becoming once more a shrinking violet or hot house flower?

Wellesley college, one of the pioneers in sports for girls, has embarked upon a campaign of sharp de-emphasis of athletics. And it's not because they fear the Carnegie Foundation will accuse them of subsidizing players. It's just downright lack of interest—also to some extent, lack of financial stability of the college Athletic association.

The athletic authorities at Wellesley have announced that there will be no further numerals, individual cups, class cups, tennis cups, or varsity pins awarded. The only laurels to survive the clash were the "W's" blazers and oar pins as crew awards. The latter insignias, however, must be purchased by the rowers.

One pretty seven-year post graduate, who has watched the rise and fall and sports at Wellesley, explained it thus:

"The girl who takes sports seriously seems to have passed from the picture. Nobody feels like dying for good old Wellesley, and there is no chance to receive the fame that goes with athletic glory at a man's college."

Aquatic Stars To Compete In Race

George Young, Catalina Island, Winner In Meet

(International News Service)

HURLEYVILLE, N. Y., April 6.—A 15-mile swimming marathon will be staged at the Morningside Hotel Lake, Hurleyville, N. Y., this July.

The outstanding long distance swimmers of the country are expected to enter this competition, which will be the first aquatic marathon since the famous Lake George swimming race in 1927.

George Young, winner of the Catalina Isand swim some years ago and more recently-crowned Toronto marathon winner; Marvin Nelson, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, who is a former Wrigley marathon victor; Bill Goll, famous New York long distance swimming star; are among those expected to compete.

Various women long distance competitors have also been invited to participate, including Gertrude Ederle, the first woman to swim the English channel; Margaret Ravior, present women's marathon titleholder; Mrs. Ruth Towers Corsan, famous Canadian champion.

Sunny To Try Channel Again

Channel Swimming association has refused to recognize the swim across the English channel by Miss Sunny Lowry last August according to London reports. The association said that while it does not question Sunny's performance it cannot grant official recognition of her feat because she did not comply with the regulation that a chart of the swim made during its progress should be made. She's a 23 year old Manchester girl. She will try to swim the channel again.

Pictured above are the Tulsa, Okla., Stenographers, who ended the two-year reign of the Oklahoma City Cardinals as national A. A. U. girl basketball champions by trouncing the title holders in the finals of the 1934 tournament at Wichita, Kas. In three games played this season between the two teams prior to the tournament the Cardinals won two. Left to right, they are, Frances Dunlap, Martha Hickman, Hazel Baer, Lois Pool, Gladys Wilkie, Troy Azlian, Hazel Walker, Lillian Justice, Alberta Williams, Juanita Hawks, Covine Mitchell and Nina Washington.

Likes Diving, Too!

Helene Madison

Miss Helene Madison, greatest Olympic woman champion swimmer in history, is photographed as she bounds high into the air from the diving board at a pool in Chicago. The champ likes to do fancy aquatic tricks as well as shatter records.

SPYING ON SPORTS

"CHAMPEEN JEEMY" LONDOS, world title claimant to the heavyweight wrestling crown, may at any time now go out on a furniture buying spree. His eyes will be peeled for a nice, little rocking chair. (Ole rocking chair's got him—almost!)

In short, folk, the champ is seriously considering his exit from the world of wrestling within the next few months.

Londos wants to quit an undefeated champion, marry, hie away to the land of his forefathers—Athens, Greece—and spend the remainder of his days sipping wines, strumming a mandolin, and recounting his mat conquests to his brethren.

* * *

The Champ, a shrewd business man who demanded and received guarantees throughout the depression, has made quite a sum of money ever since he took the title from Dick Shikat at Philadelphia, in 1930. Londos has drawn gates, it is said, totaling $5,000,000, of which he is supposed to have received more than $1,000,000.

This establishes a record for the sport, for no wrestler, in the history of the rough and tumble pastime, has ever reached the $1,000,000 mark in earnings.

Even Frank Gotch, the peerless champion of pre-war times, who wrestled in almost every town in his own country and in every corner of the globe, made only $250,000 in his career of 14 years. Londos, as well as other wrestlers of today, will earn more during a prosperous season than Gotch did in his reign as the world's undisputed champion.

* * *

If "Jeemy" does quit the mat he will leave behind him a colorful record—but not like the Great Gotch, who retired only after competition was so bad that there seemed to be no one who could knock the royal mantle from his massive figure.

Londos may feel himself slipping, and presumably doesn't relish the idea of defeat. Maybe he has been reading of other sports idols who have gone to the top and who, sooner or later, have been knocked down from their pedestals.

But, in the words of the wise, the lure of gold is mighty strong, and maybe the champ will stick around for another million.

Vosmik's bat was the big reason why the Indians made it four games to two over the Giants at Montgomery, Ala., yesterday. The score was 4 to 2.

Make No Awards For Lincoln High School Contract

Low Bids Exceed Federal Appropriation; Board To Confer With Officials

CONSIDER MANY BIDS AT SPECIAL MEETING

ELLWOOD CITY, April 6—The matter of awarding the various contracts for the jobs in the construction of the new wing to the Lincoln High school will have to be done at a date in the near future according to an action taken by the Ellwood City Board of Education in the high school at a special meeting last night.

It was necessary to postpone the awarding last night as the total of the low bids exceeded the federal grant of $100,000. The total minimum of the bids as submitted last night would be $124,440. There are therefore a lot of deductions to be made which the board plans in the near future. The board plans to see the total of the bids does not exceed the appropriation.

Nearly 50 people were present while the contracts were being considered last night. The meeting therefore had to be held in the high school library. The board considered 8 bids for the general contract, six for the heating and ventilating and four for the electrical work.

The three low bidders in each of the contracts are as follows:: General contract—A. Wishart and Co., of Sharon, Pa., Cook-Anderson Co., of Beaver, Pa., and Upton-Lang Co. of Erie, Pa., Electric contract—Marvin Electric Company of New Castle, Pa., Herge Radio and Electric Co., of Ellwood City, Pa., and The Industrial Electric Co., of New Brighton, Pa., Heating and Ventilating—William M. Clark and Co. of New Castle, F. P. Andrews and Son of New Castle and Gardner Bros. of Ellwood City. plumbing contract—William Clark and Co. of New Castle, Withers Co. of New Castle and F. P. Andrews and Son of New Castle.

J. B. McDonald represented the federal government at the meeting last night and assisted in considering the bids.

The board at this time approved the agreement with the government for loan and grant of $100,000.

Secretary G. Blaine Hancher was authorized to advertize for school supplies and coal at this time by the board.

Make No Awards For Lincoln High School Contract

CONSIDER MANY BIDS AT SPECIAL MEETING

ELLWOOD CITY, April 6—The matter of awarding the various contracts for the jobs in the construction of the new wing to the Lincoln High school will have to be done at a date in the near future according to an action taken by the Ellwood City Board of Education in the high school at a special meeting last night.

It was necessary to postpone the awarding last night as the total of the low bids exceeded the federal grant of $100,000. The total minimum of the bids as submitted last night would be $124,440. There are therefore a lot of deductions to be made which the board plans in the near future. The board plans to see the total of the bids does not exceed the appropriation.

Nearly 50 people were present while the contracts were being considered last night. The meeting therefore had to be held in the high school library. The board considered 8 bids for the general contract, six for the heating and ventilating and four for the electrical work.

The three low bidders in each of the contracts are as follows:: General contract—A. Wishart and Co., of Sharon, Pa., Cook-Anderson Co., of Beaver, Pa., and Upton-Lang Co. of Erie, Pa., Electric contract—Marvin Electric Company of New Castle, Pa., Herge Radio and Electric Co., of Ellwood City, Pa., and The Industrial Electric Co., of New Brighton, Pa., Heating and Ventilating—William M. Clark and Co. of New Castle, F. P. Andrews and Son of New Castle and Gardner Bros. of Ellwood City. plumbing contract—William Clark and Co. of New Castle, Withers Co. of New Castle and F. P. Andrews and Son of New Castle.

J. B. McDonald represented the federal government at the meeting last night and assisted in considering the bids.

The board at this time approved the agreement with the government for loan and grant of $100,000.

Secretary G. Blaine Hancher was authorized to advertize for school supplies and coal at this time by the board.

ELLWOOD CITY, April 6.—Mrs. Dale Marburger proved to be a charming hostess last evening when she opened her home in Hazel avenue to members of the N. O. N. club who gathered for the regular meeting.

Two tables of 500 were in play throughout the evening and at the conclusion of the game prizes were awarded Mrs. Francis Kirk for high score and Mrs. William Morrow for low score.

The hostess assisted by Mrs. Clarence Druschel served a dainty repast. In two weeks the group will be entertained at the home of Mrs. Theodore Terlinden, Jr., at Knox.

Pedestrians Fail To Avoid Autos On Road

Metzger Cites Causes Which Aid In Increase Of Highway Accidents

CROSS STREETS AGAINST SIGNAL

(Special To The News)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Leon D. Metzger, secretary of revenue, today said pedestrians unnecessarily increase the accident odds against them by their failure to exercise reasonable good judgment and caution.

"As long as motorists and pedestrians have occasion to use the same thoroughfares there will be accidents involving the two, and it is equally certain that as long as pedestrians fail to follow even the simplest rules for their own safety these accidents will be especially numerous," Secretary Metzger said.

"Take, for instance, the simple matter of crossing at street intersections protected with signals. Accident records show that by the too-frequent practice of disregarding such signals the pedestrian automatically increases four times the odds against him.

At Crossings.

"Last year 183 pedestrians were injured, three fatally, while crossing with the signal at such intersections. On the other hand, 656 were injured—and the fatalities leaped to 27—while crossing against the signal. In two months this year twenty-eight persons were injured, two fatally crossing with the signal while 137 were injured, six fatally, while crossing against the signal.

"In other words, pedestrians who flaunted the signals simply piled up the odds against them and, in effect, deliberately assumed responsibility for the increased danger they incurred.

"The same situation exists in the rural districts where accident statistics emphasize the danger of walking along a highway with, rather than against, the traffic. Recent statistics show that the pedestrian who turns his back to automobiles instantly doubles the accident odds against him. Last year 430 pedestrians were injured and eighty-five were killed while walking on rural roads with their backs to traffic. These totals are twice as large as those in cases where the pedestrian used forethought and walked facing oncoming traffic. In the latter type of accident 229 pedestrians were injured and 58 killed.

Facing Traffic.

"In this connection it is worth while to note that safety regulations which direct pedestrians to walk along the left side of the road, facing traffic, dictate that procedure so that the man on foot not only can, if necessary, step out of the way if the motorist does not see him or cannot change his course rapidly enough. The full effect of this safety measure is lost if pedestrians simply walk facing traffic and make no other effort to avoid an accident.

"In this situation there are frequently conditions where the pedestrian commands a better view than the motorist of the impending danger. This is particularly true when two cars pass at night or in foggy or rainy weather. At such times a sensible pedestrian will lose no time in giving space to two-way traffic."

PIKES PEAK AT LEAST BILLION YEARS OLD

(International News Service)

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—Pikes Peak is at least a billion years old, according to Prof. H. E. Mathias of Colorado College here. Professor Mathias has completed a detailed scientific study of the famous mountain. He also learned, he said that at one time the peak was 3,000 feet higher than at present. United States geological survey records list it as being 14,110 feet high.

Earle Arrives In New York

Former Ambassador To Austria Describe Recent Civil War Disturbances

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6—The recent Civil War in Austria was described Thursday by a man who had witnessed it, G. H. Earle, former American, ambassador to that country, who returned on the liner Washington.

He raised the "clemency" shown by Premier Dollfus to the defeated socialists, marveled at the bravery of the latter and was "disgusted" by the flight of their leaders when the fighting started.

"There is nothing so horrible as war and civil war is the worst of all," he said, "but the most disgusting part was that the socialist leader who incited the rebellion ran away to Czechoslovakia almost as soon as the fighting started, leaving his followers to fight and die in small, isolated groups.

Earle resigned his ambassadorship to enter the Pennsylvania primaries for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. He was met as the vessel docked by a group of Democratic leaders of Pennsylvania including Joseph F. Guffey, state chairman.

Dr. Homer B. Davis is pastor of the host church.

State Policemen Make Patrols Here

Day and night patrols throughout Lawrence county are being made daily by members of the state police detail here, according to Trooper In Charge Andrew Hughmanick.

No specific hours are allotted for the patrols, and state police are apt to be seen on any of the highways at any hour of the day or night, Hughmanick stated.

The troopers make the patrols when not actually engaged in investigations.

Three are on duty here, Officer In Charge Hughmanick and Privates Roswell and Engle.

Placing Value On Old Post Office

It is reported in city hall circles that real estate men are making an appraisement of the present post-office so the information can be sent by city and chamber of commerce officials to Senator David Reed and Congressman Swick whom want to obtain the building for public library or other city purposes for the city of New Castle.

TYDOL is protected

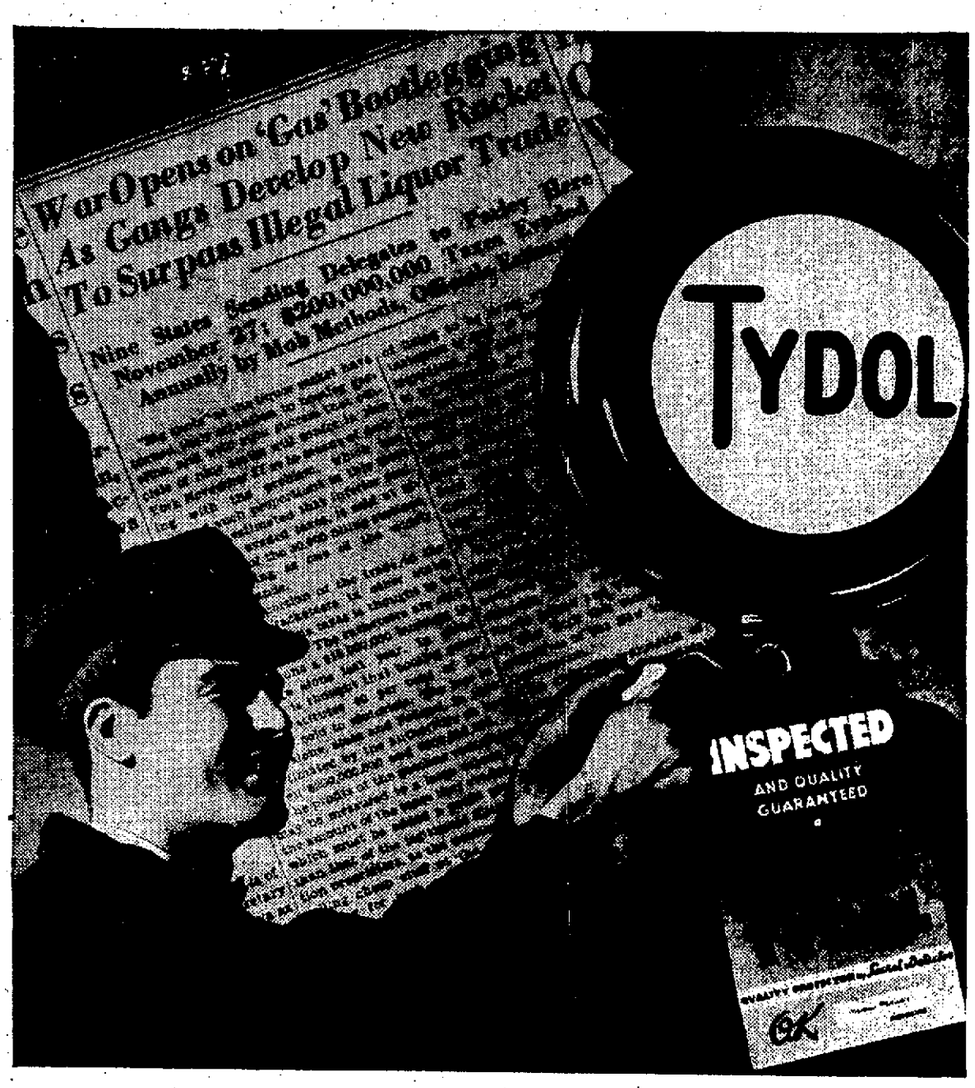
Ask the man at the pump



THE finest motor fuel ever sold at the regular gasoline price. That's what we pledged TYDOL to be in 1934. And that's what it is!

And now we seal that pledge of quality by sealing a tag on every TYDOL pump. Behind that tag is a story of the integrity of 22,000 TYDOL dealers. They were determined, in these days of substitution, "cutting" and adulteration . . . that TYDOL must be protected . . . there should be no tampering with TYDOL'S high quality. So with their cooperation, the makers of TYDOL developed a patented device . . . a "Secret Detector."

This device shows instantly the slightest impurity or adulteration in TYDOL. It is used in thousands of tests, made day and night, every inch of the way from the refinery to your car.

When you ask for TYDOL, you get TYDOL! You get the highest anti-knock, the most powerful gasoline ever sold at the regular gas price. You get the gasoline that is different . . . that actually lubricates as it drives. The gasoline that is best for your motor . . . and the most for your money.

Tide Water Oil Company, New Castle, Pa.

X1 The first gasoline to lubricate as it drives at no extra cost.

X2 The most powerful gasoline ever sold at regular price.

X3 The highest anti-knock gasoline (contains tetraethyl lead) at regular price.

On Court House Hill

Every one of the forty-seven jurors attending common pleas court this week was at work yesterday at the same time. This was a very unusual occurrence. It is doubtful if there is a precedent in the history of the county. Twelve jurors were tied up on a case being heard by Judge James A. Chambers. While this case was on Judge Hildebrand called another, tried it and sent the jury out. A second case was taken up and tried before him. The first jury had not yet reported when the second went out. This left only eleven jurors of the panel free. There was another case to be taken up. Both sides were anxious to try it, so agreed to go ahead with the eleven jurors, instead of twelve. Thus all the jurors were working at one time.

Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard yesterday took Mike Perrott to Huntington reformatory. Perrott was implicated in a series of robberies of wholesale houses in this city. His accomplice was sentenced to the penitentiary, but as Perrott was under 19 years of age he was sent to Huntington, for an indeterminate period, depending upon his behavior.

Frank and Elizabeth Beleny have presented a petition to court to stay a writ of execution in the case of John D. Mast, use of W. C. Henderson against Charles and Mary Senkert, with notice to Frank and Elizabeth Beleny, terre tenants. The Beleny's purchased a farm in Wilmington township from Senkert's assuming a mortgage given to the use plaintiff for $2,250. It is set forth in the petition that the farm is assessed at $2700 and is reasonably worth $5000. Interest is back for two years, less a credit of $45, and the taxes are paid. Belenys have made an application for a Federal Farm Loan, but claim that the use plaintiff has issued a fieri facias and is threatening to sell the property. It is claimed that the sale would work a serious hardship on the owners, and the court is asked to stay it pending disposition of the application for a farm loan.

New rules of court, relating to trespass and damage cases, were put into effect for the first time this week. Under the old practice a motion for a non-suit was usually made after the plaintiff had put in all of his testimony and rested his case. Under the new rules in alleged negligence cases the plaintiff must first establish liability of the defendant before he can proceed to prove the amount of damage. In other words when the case is opened the plaintiff must put in all the testimony he has as affecting the legal grounds of liability, and when this is done indicate that he rests his case as to the liability. A motion for a non-suit by the defendant is then in order, and if it is granted the case ends there, but if the motion is refused, the plaintiff can then proceed with his testmony on the question of the amount of damages sustained. The effect of this new rule of court will no doubt be to save considerable of the court's time.

P. M. Cox, use of the First National Bank of Volant, has filed a suit at the prothonotary's office against Martha J. Drake and Harvey E. Martin, executors of the estate of the late W. M. C. Drake to collect a note of $95.

Sheriff Edward D. Pritchard and deputies have had a wide and varied experience during the first three months which they have been in office. The work has involved almost every kind of a writ that is ordinarily put through the sheriff's office. Although all of them went in without former experience, they have handled the business to the entire satisfaction of all parties concerned.

Wylie Brewster, agent of the bureau of animal industry, estimates that there are still nearly one thousand unlicensed dogs in Lawrence county despite the repeated warnings and numerous arrests that have been made for non-compliance with the law. Brewester was up in the mining district of Plaingrove township yesterday checking up. About one week ago he posted notices warning dog owners to secure licenses at once.

If he finds warnings have gone unheeded arrests will be made.

FISHERMAN HOOKS STRANGE WOLF-FISH

(International News Service)

OCEANSIDE, Colo.—Ben Wolfe, local bait stand operator, today joined those who are telling about strange sea monsters and serpents. But Wolfe has tangible evidence to offer in his case.

While fishing on the beach here a few days ago he hooked a fine specimen of the Alepisaurus, otherwise known as the Wolf-fish. The fish has a forked tail, is about four feet in length, slender like a serpent and with a long mouth ornamented with ferocious, serrated teeth. The Alepisaurus is a denizen of the lower deeps and seldom gets into shallow water.

Further Profit Taking Brings Lower Prices To Stock Market Today

MARKET PROBE HAS EFFECTS

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Apr. 6.—Further profit taking combined with some speculative selling on purely technical grounds brought a lower price movement into the stock list today.

At the same time the list was somewhat unsettled by the action of the exchange in sending a questionnaire to its members asking for details on trading a dozen issues which recently had been extensively touted. These included Texas Land Trust, Western Pacific preferred and Louisiana Oil.

Continuation of the tie-up of the motor products plant brought some further selling into the auto group where General Motors and Chrysler ruled fractionally lower. Auto accessory shares were easier in sympathy.

United States Steel and other industrial stocks including Bethlehem and American Can also showed some uncertainty and tended to move under their previous closing levels.

The utilities yielded some of yesterday's gains, Consolidated Gas dipped fractionally as did North American Public Service of N. J. and Columbia Gas.

For the bride's trousseau these four costumes were chosen for their chic and wearability. To go away in the silk polka dotted suit, third from left, with crisp waffle pique facings; for teatime occasions the black or navy silk dress, left, with pique collar, flowers and corded belt. Second is a dull silk crepe frock with Roman striped lame collar, elbow sleeves and square nickel buttons. Navy blue sheer ribbed crepe makes the jacket frock sketched, right, with multi-colored top and gypsy sash and bow tie.

BASEBALL, GOLF TEAMED TOGETHER

Youthful baseball players at Coral Gables, Fla., got more than a handful of spring training when Joe Kirkwood, Australian trick shot golf artist, began feeding them sizzlers over the plate. Here is Joe about to send and up-shoot in the direction of batter and catcher. The batter was unable to hit more than one in a hundred and the catcher couldn't hold the ball at all.

New York Giants Worried Over Training Battles

INDIANS LOOK LIKE REAL CLUB

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, April 6.—Not wishing to draw any invidious comparisons, but the last champion of the world that trained in Miami finished third, I believe, the next time out and the following year a lot of them finished in Pawtucket. This is believed to have no possible bearing upon the New York Giants because they are composed of sterling, rugged, honest souls who are very upright. But so is the nickelpiano in O'Sullivan's back room and, besides, there must be more than a coincidence in the fact that a champion of the world can win no more than thirteen out of twenty-five amidst the mixed-grill competition of the south.

At least, I would like to read something sinister into the situation, if only because I wish to be flattering. Otherwise, we must assume that the Giants are licked by the new ball.

They tell us, for instance, that Carl Hubbell, the top-head of the staff and the league last year, is not quite in shape as yet. The gentleman has only been working out since the middle of February. They also tell us that the club hasn't started to move yet, because it figures this is too soon. But I notice that the club that doesn't start by April 7, sometimes can't on April 17.

Hinges On Hubbell.

It isn't necessary to add that Hubbell, as far as this ball club is concerned, is the man who stands in the wings and makes the curtain go up and down. If he wins, the club wins with him; if he doesn't, they lose and, in this connection, the events of the last ten days have been a little disconcerting. The St. Louis Browns, whom their Mr. Hornsby would characterize as a lot of ukulele hitters, smote Hubbell for seven runs in one inning; two days ago, the Cleveland Indians surrounded the gentleman to the extent of two triples, a double and two singles in one inning, scoring four runs. I doubt whether two similar innings were recorded against Hubbell during the whole of last year.

Incidentally, the Indians who now have taken four out of six from the Giants—as against three out of three by the Cards; three out of five by the Browns; one out of one by the Reds; none out of two by the Dodgers and one out of five by the Athletics—went south without any especial delusion about themselves. They'd be mildly nonplussed if they finished better than fifth in the American League.

Basketball Game At Union Floor

Departing Seniors At Union High Will Play Next Years Team Tonight

Union High School basketball court will be the scene tonight of a fast encounter when the Union high team of the past season, champs of Section 18 of the W. P. I. A. L. and County league champs, will tangle with the Union high varsity team for 1935.

The game will start at 7:30 o'clock according to Coach David M. Boyd, and this looks like a real tussle from start to finish. This is an annual affair and always produces a good basketball game.

The Union 1934 team will have Morrison at center, Monico and Boron at the forwards, and White and Hughes at the guards. The Union 1935 team will have Rudesill at center, Schaas and Kuharski at the forwards, and Todd and Wojtowicz at the guards.

Light Workout For Gridders

Suits Issued To Over 50 Candidates At Taggart Field And Light Drill Held

Equipment was issued to over 50 young candidates for the 1934 New Castle high school football team yesterday afternoon at Taggart Field, by Coach Phil H. Bridenbaugh and Faculty Manager Ralph H. Gardner.

Another large group will be given equipment this afternoon and the entire squad will probably number the 100 mark.

With the suits passed out to the big group Thursday afternoon Head Coach Bridenbaugh sprung a surprise by calling the gridders out to the field for a light workout. Only limbering up exercises were indulged in. It is quite an imprissive looking group of young men this year. There are some fine looking junior high boys out for the team this year.

Daily drills will be in order for the next several weeks. The first spring game is scheduled for Taggart Field May 4 but the opponent has not been named as yet.

WEST SIDE MERCHANTS

Members of the West Side Merchants mushball team will hold a meeting tonight at the 6:30 o'clock at the Boroline field. The following are asked to report—H. Tucker, B. Tucker, J. Shaw, C. Krueger, L. Kreuger, E. Todd, W. Kreuger, R. Bigley, B. Hill, C. Erwin, Glasstetter, C. Kelly, Steingasser, Kearns, Ted Kolcz, and McGurk. Also any others who are interested in making the team.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORTS' LAND

Ben Jeby of New York and Ted Yarosz of Monaca, middleweights, clash tonight in a 12-round bout at Pittsburgh and everything points to a fat gate. Jeby met Buck McTiernan in his only Pittsburgh showing and at one time claimed the middleweight championship of the world. Yarosz has lost only two decisions of 73 tilts and it looks as though he will outslap the Gotham battler. Quite a crowd of local fight fans who like their punches served professionally will see the battle, which will be held in Duquesne Garden where George Chip knocked Frank Klaus loose from the middleweight championship when the poundage was 158.

And while talking of Yarosz, Jeby and Chip it may not be amiss to mention a fan who followed the Chips, George and Joe, to scenes of the different combats—speaking now of Gene Mullen. Gene travelled with Joe Chip to Brooklyn when he boxed Al McCoy and was also there the night that McCoy lifted a left hook from the canvas and removed the middleweight crown from George's head. Later he watched Joe muff a chance to bring the crown back to the Chip domicile when Josefus battle Johnny Wilson at Pittsburgh and later at Detroit. In fact, Gene was one of Joe's seconds in the Detroit embroglio. However, there was one fight, of which Gene cannot speak authoritatively. He occupied a bleacher seat and just before the final punch went over the bleacher seat weakened, Gene fell backward and he was picking himself up from the floor when he heard the referee say "10".

The bowl is coming down, post by post, regrettable as this may be, but some of the boys who are helping in the demolition of the scene of many gruelling battles are engaged in a treasure hunt. Daily they eye the ground beneath the bleachers. Several quarters, half dollars and dimes have been found. It isn't probable they will find many coins as it was the custom in the boom days to have the janitor, immediately following each fight, search beneath the seats for any articles that might have been lost. The articles were turned into the bowl office and then returned to owners. Insofar as professional boxing is concerned at present the city is practically marooned but despite the ravages of the depression it is pleasant to retrospect and recall that of all the people who entered the bowl—and there must have been probably 150,000—not one pocketbook was stolen, not one arrest was made, no accidents occurred and only one bout ended in a foul. In fact out of all the boxers who battled there—and there were nearly 1,000 boxers booked, only one sutained a suspension, if recollection serves accurately. He was Maxie Brown, the Youngstown blonde light-heavyweight who exchanged swings with such not soon forgotten pugilistic fun makers as Elmo (Clark) the Mighty and Warren Farrow, the colored boy who hit where he wasn't looking.

Providing the Lawrence county baesball league gets under way next month—and indications say it will—the loop should stage some mighty fast games. West Pittsburg, Bessemer, Mahoning A. A. and the Polish Nationals have signified their intention of taking out a franchise and naturally will seek the cream of the 1933 season. Providing the managers sign the best players they can and internal dissension is dispensed with, good games are bound to result and the fans will journey to the games.

Union Gridders To Start Monday

Coach Dave Boyd Calls For First Practice Monday Afternoon; 35 Are Equipped

Union High school football team will start spring training at the Union High field Monday afternoon, at 4 o'clock according to an announcement from Coach Dave Boyd today.

A squad that numbers about 35 will report to Coach Boyd. The suits have been passed out and the team will be fully equipped and ready to start the spring workouts.

Boyd's task is going to be a tough one this year, with the loss of seven or eight of the veterans and varsity men of last year. Boyd hopes to select a temporary varsity eleven in the spring workouts and give them a lot of attention.

Fame Fickle Collins Grieves

Would Like To Return To Baseball He Loved So Well

BOSTON, April 6—"The public soon forgets" is the bitter reflection of John "Shano" Collins, former big league baseball player and manager who cannot land a position as an umpire because—he was told—he lacks experience.

"Shano," was a headliner getter during his days with the White Sox as one of the greatest outfielders of his time. He served 20 years in baseball. Collins played with the White Sox for eleven years, managed the Des Moines team for three years, put in two years with Pittsburgh and one and a half with the Red Sox.

He is running a lunchroom near the Dedham courthouse where lawyers, jurors and newspapermen get their daily bowl of soup.

"I am getting desperate," Collins said. "I want to get back in baseball, managing, scouting, or umpiring, anything to be connected with the game I love so well. I thought it would be easy. But for a fellow my age, there doesn't seem to be any place in the diamond sun.

"Umpiring, in particular, appeals to me, but they threw me down for lack of experience, if you can imagine such a thing."

In the meantime, he goes on serving his soup and beans across the counter to keep the wolf away from the door.

Is Out Of Doors Girl To Become House Flower?

Lack Of Interest De-emphasizes Athletics At Wellsley

(International News Service)

WELLESLEY, Mass., April 6.—Is the outdoor girl turning back on the trail of evolution and becoming once more a shrinking violet or hot house flower?

Wellesley college, one of the pioneers in sports for girls, has embarked upon a campaign of sharp de-emphasis of athletics. And it's not because they fear the Carnegie Foundation will accuse them of subsidizing players. It's just downright lack of interest—also to some extent, lack of financial stability of the college Athletic association.

The athletic authorities at Wellesley have announced that there will be no further numerals, individual cups, class cups, tennis cups, or varsity pins awarded. The only laurels to survive the clash were the "W's" blazers and oar pins as crew awards. The latter insignias, however, must be purchased by the rowers.

One pretty seven-year post graduate, who has watched the rise and fall and sports at Wellesley, explained it thus:

"The girl who takes sports seriously seems to have passed from the picture. Nobody feels like dying for good old Wellesley, and there is no chance to receive the fame that goes with athletic glory at a man's college."

Aquatic Stars To Compete In Race

George Young, Catalina Island, Winner In Meet

(International News Service)

HURLEYVILLE, N. Y., April 6.—A 15-mile swimming marathon will be staged at the Morningside Hotel Lake, Hurleyville, N. Y., this July.

The outstanding long distance swimmers of the country are expected to enter this competition, which will be the first aquatic marathon since the famous Lake George swimming race in 1927.

George Young, winner of the Catalina Isand swim some years ago and more recently-crowned Toronto marathon winner; Marvin Nelson, of Fort Dodge, Iowa, who is a former Wrigley marathon victor; Bill Goll, famous New York long distance swimming star; are among those expected to compete.

Various women long distance competitors have also been invited to participate, including Gertrude Ederle, the first woman to swim the English channel; Margaret Ravior, present women's marathon titleholder; Mrs. Ruth Towers Corsan, famous Canadian champion.

Sunny To Try Channel Again

Channel Swimming association has refused to recognize the swim across the English channel by Miss Sunny Lowry last August according to London reports. The association said that while it does not question Sunny's performance it cannot grant official recognition of her feat because she did not comply with the regulation that a chart of the swim made during its progress should be made. She's a 23 year old Manchester girl. She will try to swim the channel again.

Pictured above are the Tulsa, Okla., Stenographers, who ended the two-year reign of the Oklahoma City Cardinals as national A. A. U. girl basketball champions by trouncing the title holders in the finals of the 1934 tournament at Wichita, Kas. In three games played this season between the two teams prior to the tournament the Cardinals won two. Left to right, they are, Frances Dunlap, Martha Hickman, Hazel Baer, Lois Pool, Gladys Wilkie, Troy Azlian, Hazel Walker, Lillian Justice, Alberta Williams, Juanita Hawks, Covino Mitchell and Nina Washington.

Likes Diving, Too!

Helene Madison

Miss Helene Madison, greatest Olympic woman champion swimmer in history, is photographed as she bounds high into the air from the diving board at a pool in Chicago. The champ likes to do fancy aquatic tricks as well as shatter records.

SPYING ON SPORTS

"CHAMPEEN JEEMY" LONDOS, world title claimant to the heavyweight wrestling crown, may at any time now go out on a furniture buying spree. His eyes will be peeled for a nice, little rocking chair. (Ole rocking chair's got him—almost!)

In short, folk, the champ is seriously considering his exit from the world of wrestling within the next few months.

Londos wants to quit an undefeated champion, marry, hie away to the land of his forefathers—Athens, Greece—and spend the remainder of his days sipping wines, strumming a mandolin, and recounting his mat conquests to his brethren.

• • •

The Champ, a shrewd business man who demanded and received guarantees throughout the depression, has made quite a sum of money ever since he took the title from Dick Shikat at Philadelphia, in 1930. Londos has drawn gates, it is said, totaling $5,000,000, of which he is supposed to have received more than $1,000,000.

This establishes a record for the sport, for no wrestler, in the history of the rough and tumble pastime, has ever reached the $1,000,000 mark in earnings.

Even Frank Gotch, the peerless champion of pre-war times, who wrestled in almost every town in his own country and in every corner of the globe, made only $250,000 in his career of 14 years. Londos, as well as other wrestlers of today, will earn more during a prosperous season than Gotch did in his reign as the world's undisputed champion.

• • •

If "Jeemy" does quit the mat he will leave behind him a colorful record—but not like the Great Gotch, who retired only after competition was so bad that there seemed to be no one who could knock the royal mantle from his massive figure.

Londos may feel himself slipping, and presumably doesn't relish the idea of defeat. Maybe he has been reading of other sports idols who have gone to the top and who, sooner or later, have been knocked down from their pedestals.

But, in the words of the wise, the lure of gold is mighty strong, and maybe the champ will stick around for another million.

Joe Vosmik Is Hitting Hard

(International News Service)

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Apr. 16.—Bill Terry and his champion Giants were attempting to contrive some means of removing the dynamite from the bat of big Joe Vosmik as the New Yorkers and their traveling companion-rivals, the Cleveland Indians, arrived here today. Vosmik's bat was the big reason why the Indians made it four games to two over the Giants at Montgomery, Ala., yesterday. The score was 4 to 2.

Orchestra Leader Is Hero As Smoke Fills Auditorium

Serge Koussevitzky Quiets Boston Crowd Of 2,000 As Smoke Causes Fire Scare

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6—Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra was receiving a hero's plaudits today.

The famous conductor halted an incipient panic last night when smoke suddenly filled the auditorium of Carnegie Hall where more than 2,000 persons had gathered for the final concert of the season.

The smoke came from an incinerator chute on the south side of the building which had become choked with smoldering refuse.

Koussevitsky, observing the tenseness of the audience, strode to the center of the stage and then shouted roughly, "Sit down, everything is all right."

The audience immediately relaxed and sat calmly throughout the remainder of the concert.

DON'T TRUST WHISKEY AS PANACEA FOR ILLS

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON.—If you suffer from influenza, bronchitis, stomach trouble and various other ailments, don't trust whiskey as a panacea for your ills.

This bit of advice comes from the Federal Food and Drug Administration which is investigating a shipment of whiskey labeled as a cure-all for a number of diseases.

Whiskey has some value," says Dr. F. J. Cullen of the Food and Drug Administration, "as a stimulant, but it has no use in the cure or treatment of any disease."

Hershey Company Threatens To Buy Milk Outside Of State; Price Is Hit

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Four thousand central Pennsylvania farmers today faced the loss of their milk sales to the Hershey Chocolate Corporation which notified all by letter it will cease its purchases from them Saturday, April 14, because the prices recently established by the state milk control board give its competitors in other states a price advantage.

Howard C. Reynolds, a member of the milk board, said P. N. Hershey told the board his company will buy milk outside the state unless a modification is made for it in the price schedule. Reynolds said the board will not modify its order for the Hershey Company.

Hershey charged the new price of $1.70 a hundredweght less a deduction allowed for transportation was "unreasonable and discriminatory." He was said to have estimated it would cost the company between $25,000 and $40,000 a month to comply.

Under the new milk control law Pennsylvania purchasers of milk produced outside the state are required to pay the same prices they would pay to Pennsylvania producers. The law does not regulate prices for skimmed or condensed milk purchased in tank cars.

Analyzes Carload Of Coal From Tiny Pinch Of Dust

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH. — From a tiny pinch of brown dust this chemist can tell you the amount of nitrogen, sulphur or any one of many elements in a carload or more of coal.

He calls the process "microchemical analysis" but insists that, despite the impressive name, the method is very simple.

The chemist is Dr. W. R. Kirner, and the experiments which now are regarded as important aids to industry, he carries out here in the Coal Research Laboratory of Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Simple or otherwise, the process is none the less ingenious. An almost invisible pinch of coal dust is carefully weighed on a delicate balance, placed in an unreasonably small "furnace" and heated. The gas driven off in the heating process is carried through a series of tubes to several "traps," also previously weighed, where the gases are caught.

The value of micro-analysis, Kirner explains, lies not only in the unbelievably small amounts af materials that are tested, but also in the speed of the process. Older methods of analyzing large quantities require an entire day for completion; micro-analysis obtains the same results in an hour and half to two hours.

Then, too, by this amazing process, analysis of highly explosive substances which could not be safely handled in larger quantities has been made possible.

"Valuable research in work dealing with enzymes, hormones, vitamins and glandular extracts would probably not have been possible, without microchemical methods," Kirner points out.

"Some of these substances are extremely costly—such as in one case where an analysis was desired of a material worth $5,000 a gram; with only three-tenths of a gram available. Older methods would have completely destroyed two-tenths of a garm, valued at $1,000, and would have left very little of the substance for any use.

"An analysis by micro-methods however, used only two milligrams, worth only $10."

This one advantage of the financial saving involved will cause the process to be used more and more in industrial laboratories throughout the country, Kirner said.

LETTER TO ROOSEVELT SAVED RANCH HOME

(International News Service)

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—An appeal directly to President Roosevelt himself was credited with saving the ranch home of Mrs. Marie Banday, 60-year-old widow. Faced with foreclosure proceedings on her home six miles south of Albuquerque, Mrs. Bandy sat down and wrote a letter to the president.

She told of the difficulties that had accumulated during the past year—a disastrous fire, a crop failure, her son's broken arm. Land office officials in Washington wired that arrangements were being made to refinance the loan.

HUNGRY OWL TRIES TO BREAK WINDOW

(International News Service)

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass.—A large screech owl, driven by extreme hunger, attempted to break a window at the home of George French at Stockbridge in order to get a little canary bird that was resting on its perch near the window.

The owl dove at the window continuously until the canary's cage was removed. Later when the cage was brought back to the window the owl once more started his attack upon the window, making it necessary to put the cage in another room to prevent the owl from breaking the window.

Correct this sentence: "We didn't have enough to eat," said the man, "so we got rid of our dogs."

Orchestra Leader Is Hero As Smoke Fills Auditorium

Serge Koussevitzky Quiets Boston Crowd Of 2,000 As Smoke Causes Fire Scare

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6—Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra was receiving a hero's plaudits today.

The famous conductor halted an incipient panic last night when smoke suddenly filled the auditorium of Carnegie Hall where more than 2,000 persons had gathered for the final concert of the season.

The smoke came from an incinerator chute on the south side of the building which had become choked with smoldering refuse.

Koussevitsky, observing the tenseness of the audience, strode to the center of the stage and then shouted roughly, "Sit down, everything is all right."

The audience immediately relaxed and sat calmly throughout the remainder of the concert.

Make No Awards For Lincoln High School Contract

CONSIDER MANY BIDS AT SPECIAL MEETING

ELLWOOD CITY, April 6—The matter of awarding the various contracts for the jobs in the construction of the new wing to the Lincoln High school will have to be done at a date in the near future according to an action taken by the Ellwood City Board of Education in the high school at a special meeting last night.

It was necessary to postpone the awarding last night as the total of the low bids exceeded the federal grant of $100,000. The total minimum of the bids as submitted last night would be $124,440. There are therefore a lot of deductions to be made which the board plans in the near future. The board plans to see the total of the bids does not exceed the appropriation.

Nearly 50 people were present while the contracts were being considered last night. The meeting therefore had to be held in the high school library. The board considered 8 bids for the general contract, six for the heating and ventilating and four for the electrical work.

The three low bidders in each of the contracts are as follows:: General contract—A. Wishart and Co., of Sharon, Pa., Cook-Anderson Co., of Beaver, Pa., and Upton-Lang Co. of Erie, Pa., Electric contract—Marvin Electric Company of New Castle, Pa., Herge Radio and Electric Co., of Ellwood City, Pa., and The Industrial Electric Co., of New Brighton, Pa., Heating and Ventilating—William M. Clark and Co. of New Castle, F. P. Andrews and Son of New Castle and Gardner Bros. of Ellwood City. plumbing contract—William Clark and Co. of New Castle, Withers Co. of New Castle and F. P. Andrews and Son of New Castle.

J. B. McDonald represented the federal government at the meeting last night and assisted in considering the bids.

The board at this time approved the agreement with the government for loan and grant of $100,000.

Secretary G. Blaine Hancher was authorized to advertize for school supplies and coal at this time by the board.

At 6 o'clock the guests were served a delicious menu at one long table prettily decorated with an attractive color scheme of yellow and white. A cleverly decorated birthday cake centered the table at which covers were arranged for eight.

Stock Market Is Unsettled

Further Profit Taking Brings Lower Prices To Stock Market Today

MARKET PROBE HAS EFFECTS

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, Apr. 6.—Further profit taking combined with some speculative selling on purely technical grounds brought a lower price movement into the stock list today.

At the same time the list was somewhat unsettled by the action of the exchange in sending a questionnaire to its members asking for details on trading a dozen issues which recently had been extensively touted. These included Texas Land Trust, Western Pacific preferred and Louisiana Oil.

Continuation of the tie-up of the motor products plant brought some further selling into the auto group where General Motors and Chrysler ruled fractionally lower. Auto accessory shares were easier in sympathy.

United States Steel and other industrial stocks including Bethlehem and American Can also showed some uncertainty and tended to move under their previous closing levels.

The utilities yielded some of yesterday's gains, Consolidated Gas dipped fractionally as did North American Public Service of N. J. and Columbia Gas.

BRIDE WEARS NEW SHEER VELVET

This little bride goes to the altar wearing a lovely frock made of a new transparent velvet featuring small dots on a chiffon ground. The gown is cut on long, slender lines, with a generous train. Another high style point is the tiara effect of the bridal cap.

BRIDE-TO-BE CHOOSES THESE CHIC COSTUMES FOR HER TROUSSEAU

(Courtesy Good Housekeeping)

Orchestra Leader Is Hero As Smoke Fills Auditorium

Serge Koussevitzky Quiets Boston Crowd Of 2,000 As Smoke Causes Fire Scare

(International News Service)

NEW YORK, April 6—Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra was receiving a hero's plaudits today.

The famous conductor halted an incipient panic last night when smoke suddenly filled the auditorium of Carnegie Hall where more than 2,000 persons had gathered for the final concert of the season.

The smoke came from an incinerator chute on the south side of the building; which had become choked with smoldering refuse.

Koussevitsky, observing the tenseness of the audience, strode to the center of the stage and then shouted roughly, "Sit down, everything is all right."

The audience immediately relaxed and sat calmly throughout the remainder of the concert.

EXPLORER'S HOME PACKED IN HIS CAR

(International News Service)

BOSTON—Col. Harry Keigh Eustace, 57, explorer and lecturer, has no trouble getting a room for a night when he arrives in a strange town.

Packed in the back of his automobile is everything that is necessary for this man, whose life has been spent in the open—a bed against the side of the car, a gasoline stove, blankets, provision chest, and other incidentals necessary for a perfect home.

During the past 40 years he has traveled more than 30,000 miles. For 27 years he has hunted and photographed animals in Africa.

DON'T TRUST WHISKEY AS PANACEA FOR ILLS

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON.—If you suffer from influenza, bronchitis, stomach trouble and various other ailments, don't trust whiskey as a panacea for your ills.

This bit of advice comes from the Federal Food and Drug Administration which is investigating a shipment of whiskey labeled as a cure-all for a number of diseases.

Whiskey has some value," says Dr. F. J. Cullen of the Food and Drug Administration, "as a stimulant, but it has no use in the cure or treatment of any disease."

BRIGHTER COEDS

BERKELEY, Cal.—University of California co-eds are brighter than they were last year, a survey discloses. Sorority scholarship ratings showed an average of 1,135 for last semester, while a year ago it was 1.069. The figures are based on a "C" or "fair" average, so that both ratings are better than "C".

Farmers Face Milk Sale Loss

Hershey Company Threatens To Buy Milk Outside Of State; Price Is Hit

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, April 6.—Four thousand central Pennsylvania farmers today faced the loss of their milk sales to the Hershey Chocolate Corporation which notified all by letter it will cease its purchases from them Saturday, April 14, because the prices recently established by the state milk control board give its competitors in other states a price advantage.

Howard C. Reynolds, a member of the milk board, said P. N. Hershey told the board his company will buy milk outside the state unless a modification is made for it in the price schedule. Reynolds said the board will not modify its order for the Hershey Company.

Hershey charged the new price of $1.70 a hundredweght less a deduction allowed for transportation was "unreasonable and discriminatory." He was said to have estimated it would cost the company between $25,000 and $40,000 a month to comply.

Under the new milk control law Pennsylvania purchasers of milk produced outside the state are required to pay the same prices they would pay to Pennsylvania producers. The law does not regulate prices for skimmed or condensed milk purchased in tank cars.

Analyzes Carload Of Coal From Tiny Pinch Of Dust

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH. — From a tiny pinch of brown dust this chemist can tell you the amount of nitrogen, sulphur or any one of many elements in a carload or more of coal.

He calls the process "microchemical analysis" but insists that, despite the impressive name, the method is very simple.

The chemist is Dr. W. R. Kirner, and the experiments which now are regarded as important aids to industry, he carries out here in the Coal Research Laboratory of Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Simple or otherwise, the process is none the less ingenious. An almost invisible pinch of coal dust is carefully weighed on a delicate balance, placed in an unreasonably small "furnace" and heated. The gas driven off in the heating process is carried through a series of tubes to several "traps," also previously weighed, where the gases are caught.

The value of micro-analysis, Kirner explains, lies not only in the unbelievably small amounts af materials that are tested, but also in the speed of the process. Older methods of analyzing large quantities require an entire day for completion; micro-analysis obtains the same results in an hour and half to two hours.

Then, too, by this amazing process, analysis of highly explosive substances which could not be safely handled in larger quantities has been made possible.

"Valuable research in work dealing with enzymes, hormones, vitamins and glandular extracts would probably not have been possible, without microchemical methods," Kirner points out.

"Some of these substances are extremely costly—such as in one case where an analysis was desired of a material worth $5,000 a gram, with only three- tenths of a gram available. Older methods would have completely destroyed two-tenths of a garm, valued at $1,000, and would have left very little of the substance for any use.

"An analysis by micro-methods however, used only two milligrams. worth only $10."

This one advantage of the financial saving involved will cause the process to be used more and more in industrial laboratories throughout the country, Kirner said.

LETTER TO ROOSEVELT SAVED RANCH HOME

(International News Service)

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M.—An appeal directly to President Roosevelt himself was credited with saving the ranch home of Mrs. Marie Banday, 60-year-old widow. Faced with foreclosure proceedings on her home six miles south of Albuquerque, Mrs. Bandy sat down and wrote a letter to the president.

She told of the difficulties that had accumulated during the past year—a disastrous fire, a crop failure, her son's broken arm. Land office officials in Washington wired that arrangements were being made to refinance the loan.

HUNGRY OWL TRIES TO BREAK WINDOW

(International News Service)

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass.—A large screech owl, driven by extreme hunger, attempted to break a window at the home of George French at Stockbridge in order to get a little canary bird that was resting on its perch near the window.

The owl dove at the window continuously until the canary's cage was removed. Later when the cage was brought back to the window the owl once more started his attack upon the window, making it necessary to put the cage in another room to prevent the owl from breaking the window.

Correct this sentence: "We didn't have enough to eat," said the man, "so we got rid of our dogs."
